The men have to pay this themselves and all work at jobs in the prison making from $18 to $120 a month; those that can't afford it and are deemed sincere are given a grant. They have to give up their free time to garden. The flower gardens are very large and have about every type of flower in shaped beds with raked paths and not a weed in sight. There is a herb garden. A great variety of vegetables are grown in long rows with no weeds and often an onion between each plant to keep down the insects.

The HOGs have to see the process through from preparing the soil for planting in early spring to closing down in the fall and harvesting the vegetables and seeds, all of which are given away except for the food grown for their own use.

The club met other men who had charge of the various flowers and vegetables and berries and are expert in growing them and also met the compost man and toured the greenhouses. In another section they grow trees for the DNR and other organizations. All of the men we met were young, polite and eager to describe their plants.

The club's guide said that when they pass through the gate into the gardens they enter another world and leave the prison and all its woes behind.

The club said they were all struck by these seemingly nice young men who had made tragic mistakes that put them into prison for years and by the waste of their human potential. Gardening is certainly rehabilitative for them providing a new and useful skill when they have served their time; meanwhile giving a respite from prison life.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has recently arrested a 43-year old Elmira woman for embezzlement from a vulnerable adult following a lengthy investigation.

Sandra Kay Jozwiak has been charged in warrant authorized by the Charlevoix County Prosecutor with Embezzlement by a Person in a Relationship of Trust From a Vulnerable Adult of $20,000 or more, which is a 10-year felony offense.

Jozwiak, who was residing in Hudson Township at the time, was the caregiver for a disabled relative (her brother) and over the period of approximately 13 years converted his assets to her own benefit, the sheriff's office alleges.

The embezzled amount was over $155,000, which had been paid to the victim as the result of several lawsuit settlements. The victim has since died and his children discovered that his assets had disappeared while he was in Jozwiak's care.

Jozwiak has waived her District Court preliminary exam on Aug. 10, 2004 and has been bound over to Circuit Court on the felony charge.

Historic B-25 to visit area airport Sunday and Monday

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix's skies will be filled with the roar of an ancient warrior of World War II Sunday, Aug. 22 and Monday, Aug. 23, when a B-25 stops into the Charlevoix Municipal Airport for a visit.

Chief pilot of Island Airways at the airport, Keith Teague, said the aircraft is from the Yankee Air Force Base in Belleville and is called the Yankee Warrior. It is being taken to sponsoring airports this month in an effort to drum up monetary support for the base's museum and to care and maintain for this historic aircraft.

Teague said he used to fly co-captain on a business aircraft with a pilot who became a part of the Yankee Air Force upon his retirement. After speaking with him about the plane, Teague said Charlevoix airport became a sponsoring airport, which means the plane will be coming for a visit.

This B-25 is one of only a handful of bombers left in the United States and the last of its kind to actually be flying. It has two old round radial engines and flew with a crew of seven, complete with four gun turrets and bomb bay doors.

The particular aircraft that will be visiting Charlevoix is an actual veteran of combat and was fired upon by the German guns over Italy in World War II.

The visit is expected to bring a lot of aviation enthusiasts to the airport. In addition to seeing the aircraft at the main terminal, some can actually take a ride in the plane.

"It would be a rare opportunity to have anyone get in and have it start up, much less ride in it," Teague said.

The cost is $345 for 40 minutes. Money collected from the rides will help maintain the aircraft. To reserve your space on the plane, call (231) 547-2141.

The plane will be arriving in Charlevoix on Sunday morning, Aug. 22, and depart Monday afternoon, Aug. 23.

Former Gilling employees arrested

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office has arrested two employees of the former Gilling Chiropractic Clinic in Charlevoix for embezzlement following a lengthy investigation by the Sheriff's Office.

Nick E. Czycewski, 29, of Charlevoix and Tonya M. McFalls, 19, of Ellsworth have been charged in warrants authorized by the Charlevoix County Prosecutors office with Embezzlement by an Agent or Trustee — $20,000 or more.

This offense is a felony punishable by up to 10 years in prison.

The arrests come as a result of an investigation which revealed that between June 2003 through January 2004 that the suspects who were employed by Gilling Chiropractic Clinic converted to their own use, health insurance payments, patient payments and patient medical records. Czycewski was employed as a chiropractor and McFalls as the office manager.

They have both appeared in front of a 90th District Court magistrate and bond has been set.

Assisted living facility can be built

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

After a long struggle, Sunnybank Retirement Community owners Diane Gillette and Ruth Bellisimo will be able to build an assisted living facility on 3.6 acres of land zoned R2 on the north side of town.

Bellisimo said it has been a long 18 months, but the outcome is pleasing.

"We intend to be very good neighbors," she said addressing citizens concerns over smell, noise and other forms of pollution.

The next step for the owners is to move forward with plans. Bellisimo said the building plans will be finalized, the land will be purchased and finances will be organized.

"We've been looking for a proper place to build for four years," she said. "We're happy we're going to be allowed to build there."

The facility will front Petoskey Avenue near Division Street on land currently owned by Charlevoix resident and Realtor Ed Amick.

The proposed development is a single-story building spanning 36,000 square feet, which will cover about one acre of land. The building will be constructed in the shape of an "X" with wings containing 54 units, of which 32 will be efficiency and 22 that will be one-bedroom apartments.

The building is designed to blend into the existing neighborhood, which Bellisimo said won't feel a negative impact.

"We're a quiet business," she said. "I don't think we'll make much of an impact on the neighborhood."

Some residents near the proposed site were concerned about allowing such a facility to be built there because the zoning ordinance doesn't mention assisted living facilities.

Mayor Gabe Campbell said he doesn't grasp how plans can continue to move forward when a lot split hasn't occurred.

"I don't understand how they can continue to work on a project for a piece of land when they don't have a site," he said.

Charlevoix residents John Hess and Ralph Doan Sr. represented themselves during the hearing and said they're disappointed with the results.

"I'm more disappointed that we didn't have the financial resources to properly litigate," Hess said.

Hess said he also felt the pair were at a disadvantage because they were going up against two attorneys.

"We tried," he said. "It was our right and we enjoyed it."

Doan said he is concerned that the decision will be used as precedent in future cases, which would allow someone to build in an area not zoned for the intended use.

Despite the case not turning out in his favor, Hess said he feels 33rd Circuit Judge Richard M. Pajtas was very fair.

"Judge Pajtas treated us with the utmost courtesy," he said.

> "Hopefully, what goes up there will not change the character of the neighborhood too much."
> Ralph Doan, Sr., Charlevoix resident

Doan said he and his fellow neighbors will just have to adjust to living next to the facility.

"We'll adapt to whatever they want to do," he said.

Hess said there are no plans to appeal.

"Hopefully, what goes up there will not change the character of the neighborhood too much," he said.

Civil Air Patrol welcomes all children

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Civil Air Patrol will assist with the landing of a World War II B-25 on Aug. 22 and 23 at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport.

Robert Drebenstedt, commander of the Civil Air Patrol and veteran's affairs coordinator for Charlevoix County, said the cadets will be working with the Yankee Air Museum to make sure the event flows smoothly.

The program features 17 cadets, with three in college, and seven adults who supervise the activities. There are also four pilots who help with the program.

"We're the biggest Civil Air Patrol in the state," Drebenstedt said in regards to the number of school age students involved with the program.

The Charlevoix Civil Air Patrol is also the newest.

Drebenstedt said Charlevoix was recognized in October 2003, but didn't officially become an accredited squadron until early 2004.

The Civil Air Patrol allows cadets to work at events such as the landing of the bomber and to become better citizens.

Drebenstedt said the program teaches citizenship, discipline; hygiene, but overall helps the students reach their higher educational goals.

"The Civil Air Patrol really helps the cadet student be awarded a college ROTC scholarship," Drebenstedt said.

Drebenstedt is retired from the Army, but is working with the United States Air Force to help open up opportunities for the youth.

"I really believe in what they're doing for kids in school," he said.

The Civil Air Patrol is open to everyone of any age, but the student program takes youth between the ages of 12 and 18. Students can remain a part of the program until the age of 21.

Drebenstedt said joining the program is not signing a contract to go on and participate in the service. Unlike branches of the service, the Civil Air Patrol welcomes everyone.

"No one is left out," he said.

The Civil Air Patrol is an auxiliary unit of the Air Force with the main function of assisting in Homeland Security over land, Drebenstedt said.

"We work with law enforcement to locate anything from a lost family out camping to a downed airplane," he said.

Before a cadet can actually participate in a Homeland Security effort they must go through the program and become certified.

Drebenstedt said there is a lot of bookwork involved, which has to be done in order to climb in rank and grasp a firm understanding of different aspects of operations.

Cadets are given a physical fitness test once a month, every month, which they must pass. They must also maintain good grades.

Middle and high school students must maintain a C average or better to remain in the program while college students must keep at least a 2.5 grade point average.

"Grades have some importance," Drebenstedt said.

The entire squadron is voluntary and the level of involvement is up to the individual.

"You can take it as serious as you want to take it," Drebenstedt said.

Aside from learning how to communicate over radios and function as spotters for pilots, the cadets also learn about weather since it affects their flying schedules.

The group tries to fly at least once a month, but sometimes things happen and plans don't go through.

"They say there's not enough flying time," he said.

Not everyone shares the same interests and the Civil Air Patrol offers several areas for cadets to choose from.

Drebenstedt said students can focus on areas such as navigation, aerospace and communication.

The group meets from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. every Tuesday at the airport in the hangar near West Carpenter Street. Drebenstedt said the hangar used to be the old pilots room.

"We thank the City of Charlevoix and the airport for giving us a room," he said.

The group also sometimes meets in the basement of the sheriff's department.

Dues are $35 for a year and that includes clothing issued to each cadet and a booklet containing the four year course load.

Those interested in learning more about the program can call Drebenstedt at 547-7220.

I'm Bob Vance, Family Counselor with Hospice of Little Traverse Bay. I built my career by learning from those I serve, and I'm proud to work for an organization that grows in the same way.

I like to refer to our program as a full service hospice. We have learned that the experience of dying is more about life than death. Every death ripples outward and spreads, touching many lives.

Of course we're here to help our patients but, just as importantly, our role is to help the people who love our patients. We help them to cope, understand and take the time they need to say "Goodbye".

Some hospices are reducing services to the bereaved. At Hospice of Little Traverse Bay, we constantly strive to create new services. We understand that "Goodbye" is much more than words. Not all hospices are alike.

Civil charges could be pending in dye case

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The case is not closed for the St. Patrick's Day green dye culprits.

On March 17 sodium fluorescein was dumped into Pine River Channel during the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce's first annual St. Patrick's Day Pub Crawl despite repeatedly being told that type of activity could not be done by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality. But, in past Courier stories on this matter, the chamber insisted that it is not responsible for the green dye.

Even though, Richard Shoemaker, senior environmental quality analyst with the surface water quality division of the MDEQ, said there is a civil action pending against the Charlevoix chamber of commerce for this prank and a criminal investigation is still going on.

Sgt. Vince Woods, a detective with MDEQ's office of criminal investigation, is handling the case but was unable to be reached by press time.

Sodium fluorescein, also known as diver's dye, is used to mark where diver's are at and to help the United States Coast Guard locate a vessel in distress, Shoemaker said.

The chamber wanted to dye the channel green to copy Chicago for the St. Patrick's Day festivities, but was told five times by the MDEQ that it wasn't allowed, a previous article states.

As stated in a previous article, Jeff Sprecksell, general manager of the Weathervane Restaurant, found a box of the dye in the lower level dining room of the restaurant with a note attached. Sprecksell then contacted the Coast Guard who contacted Shoemaker to find out the dye was not to be dumped.

The article then states that Sprecksell called Linda Mason, the chamber board member who coordinated the pub crawl, and told her to remove it from the restaurant.

From here, the details are foggy and no one knows what happened to the dye until it ended up in the channel.

"We know Linda Mason had it in her possession," Shoemaker said.

Mason was unable to be reached by press time.

From here, Shoemaker said the MDEQ is seeking resolution by going after the chamber because they know the chamber wanted to dye the channel.

Shoemaker said the attorney representing the MDEQ is talking with the attorney hired by the chamber.

"We could end up in litigation," he said.

Chamber President Jacqueline Merta is still denying the Chamber's involvement in the St. Patrick's Day incident. However, Merta would not talk about the incident or even say that a lawyerwas hired.

"I said all I care to say about the green dye issue," she said. "I have nothing more to say about any of it."

Braun to play 100 holes again

A local athletic event that has become a summer tradition is about to be repeated as Belvedere golf professional, Steve Braun, will again play 100 holes in a single day.

While some local golfers might talk a "good game," wishing they could play golf all day, not many could do so going 100 holes in a 12 hour period. Steve does and plays the rounds averaging in the mid 70s.

Many have asked why he puts himself through the physical and emotional agony. The simple answer is he is a dedicated believer in Charlevoix's Junior Golf Program and the potential it has to impact young people so that they can learn life skills through the game of golf.

As in the past, pledges made go into the program's scholarship fund, which allows deserving junior golfers to attend the Ferris State University's week long golf camp. The program has sent over 70 youngsters through the years. The week away from home and the educational setting has proven to have a positive effect on each camper that has attended.

Braun tees off at 6:30 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 23 and finishes approximately 12 hours later. Those interested in pledging in support of the Junior Golf Scholarship Fund or in monitoring Steve's progress can do so by calling the Belvedere Golf Club at (231) 547-2611 or Dean Davenport at (231) 547-6433.

Rotary golf tournament Sept. 2

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual "Porker" golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 2 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Billed as "The Affordable Golf Tournament," the entry fee is only $40 per person.

"We have had players comment that it is almost as if we are paying them to play because of the amount and quality of the prizes distributed at the tournament," said tournament director Tim Petrosky. "Last year we distributed gifts with a retail value of more than $3,000 to golfers. Everyone went home with a prize."

The event is a four-person scramhle. The entry fee includes golf, a buffet dinner at Giuseppe's Restaurant and the traditional tournament trademark: oodles of prizes. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, and to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle.

"This tournament is more about fun than competition, although we do have strong teams every year," said Petrosky. "Year after year area businesses generously donate great prizes that pretty much assure everyone goes home with a smile on their face no matter how they golfed."

Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop. The event is limited to the first 20 teams that register.

An optional skins game and "mulligans" will also be available to teams. The shotgun start is at 4:30 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:30 p.m.

Rotary uses proceeds from the event to benefit the community with an emphasis on area youth.

What is it like getting around in a wheelchair?

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

(Editor's note: In order to gauge what it is like for a handicapped person in Charlevoix, we put staff writer Courtney E. Pace in a wheelchair and told her to navigate to East Park and back to the Courier office on Mason Street and then to the Charlevoix County Building and back.)

On July 16, I wheeled myself from the Charlevoix Courier office to the bandshell in East Park and then to the County Building before returning to the Courier and I saw the city from a new angle.

Never before did I realize just how hard it is to get around town when curbs, bumps and people get in the way.

There are plenty of handicapped accessible ramps cut along the sidewalk, but the incline of each is steep enough that it requires quite a bit of momentum in order to get up without rolling back into the street.

"When those were put in, they probably met the requirements at the time," John Martin, street superintendent, said.

The ramp on Mason Street near the temporary City Hall location proved troublesome for me. I tried twice to get up and once I did my wheelchair got caught on a raised part of the curb. Without the aid of my foot, I would have fallen backward.

Luckily, I was able to use my foot, but if I had been truly in need of a wheelchair I probably would have fallen backward and landed in the street.

When one walks along the streets of Charlevoix, little notice is given to the incline and uneven structure of the city's streets.

Mason Street is very steep when one is wheeling up from Bridge Street. It took a lot of energy and stamina for me to make my way up the street.

Unlike some people who truly need wheelchairs, I have full use of all the muscles in my body including the abdominal muscles. Without using my whole body, I don't know how I could have gotten up the street.

Martin said he doesn't know what there is that can be done because of the nature of Charlevoix's terrain. He said the layout of the land is what it is, which causes higher elevations in some places on the same road.

Martin said he wasn't sure what the exact regulations are for inclines on the street.

"When you have a city such as Charlevoix with hills surrounding it, I don't know it applies," he said.

City Manager Michael Weisner said he doesn't know what should be done in that certain situation.

"The terrain is different at times," he said. "It's the natural layout of the land."

Weisner said Police Chief Dennis Halverson is looking into handicapped parking concerns through a use study being conducted this month.

Halverson was unavailable for comment by press time.

The decline is also hard to deal with because if one doesn't have good control over their wheelchair it is very easy to build up too much momentum.

The Clinton Street side of East Park is very steep when making one's way toward the park. I had to constantly keep my speed in check to ensure I didn't end up in Round Lake.

My goal was to get to the bandshell and I didn't want to have to take the long way along the marina, so I decided to trek across the grass. Things were going smoothly, until I hit some uneven ground. My wheels would spin, but I stayed in one place.

My editor offered assistance, but I was reluctant to take it. Working hard, I made my way to the cement path in the middle of the park. By this time I was tired, but I still had to get to the bandshell.

I didn't want to go back across the grass and couldn't get down the cement path because of the stairs, so I decided to go down a steep hill. Without assistance, I would have ended up face down in the grass.

Weisner said handicapped accessibility is being considered with future plans for East Park.

As is, East Park doesn't make it easy for handicapped people to get up close to the musical events going on in the bandshell. In order to get up close, ramps and sidewalks may be needed.

"Oh, sure," Weisner said. "We'll look into it."

Wheeling along the marina was slightly unnerving because I didn't feel like going for a swim with a wheelchair toppling after me.

I made my way to the Mason Street side of East Park when I paused.

I had to get back up to Bridge Street by either going all the way around the marina or going up the dead end side of Mason Street. I chose Mason Street.

The climb was tough, but I wouldn't give up.

I made my way to the top, but needed assistance or else I would have sped down the hill and ended up in the water.

Even handicapped accessible ramps proved to be a challenge for Charlevoix Courier reporter Courtney E. Pace. Pace was put in a wheelchair and told to navigate her way around town for a story.

At this point I was sweating slightly due to the weather and the amount of energy required to get around Charlevoix in a wheelchair.

I waited to cross State Street to get to the Charlevoix County Building when a man stepped into the street and stopped traffic allowing me to cross. I thanked him, but as I was halfway through the crosswalk, a car sped by.

In a previous interview, Halverson said pedestrians have the right of way in crosswalks, but was unable to be reached for further comment before press time.

The county building has a nice handicap accessible ramp out front, but the doors don't open electronically.

My editor held the door for me while three men talked just inside the entrance way. Two were law enforcement officers.

After struggling through the doors leading to the district court, I came to the handicap accessible door in the rear of the building.

I pushed the button to open the door, but as I went to move through the door a man cut me off while saying, "Excuse me."

My entire investigation took 75 minutes to accomplish, but now I know the true state of handicap accessibility in Charlevoix.

Butterfly garden blooming at school

By GINA ATTEE
Special to the Courier

If you take a walk behind Charlevoix Middle School, you will find a beautiful garden, filled with many butterfly visitors.

In May, the Charlevoix Area Garden Club came together with the fifth and sixth grade Builder's Club. The club is a subgroup of Kiwanis. After a month of planning and waiting for the ground to warm up, the flower garden was planted.

"I was really proud to be able to say the Builder's Club did it," said Chelsey Haske, who was president of the Builder's Club during planting time.

Now, almost three months later, there's a beautiful garden to show for all the hard work put into the project.

"From just bare grass, we've got a garden there," said Lois Lewis, a member of the Charlevoix Area Garden Club.

This summer, ladies from the Charlevoix Area Garden Club have worked hard to keep the butterfly garden looking nice.

"It's growing well. The flowers are in bloom. It's beautiful," said Lewis.

The Garden Club plans to get the kids more involved with the garden once school starts.

Paul Gelderblom, eighth grade science teacher, has plans to add a fish pond to the garden.

He said the pond addition would give the butterfly garden a "water feature" that will help in attracting more birds and butterflies.

Pat Miller, sixth grade science teacher, plans to utilize the garden as a teaching aid for her classes.

"There're so many things we can do with it. It's so wonderful," said Miller.

Miller plans to use the butterfly garden as a tool in teaching units such as adaptation, light, ecology and weather.

"There're so many kids in the middle school and it (the butterfly garden) will touch them all," she said.

Doctor concerned about Charlevoix's sleep

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Sleep may be the key to improving grades and athletic ability of Charlevoix students.

At the Aug. 9 Charlevoix Public School Board meeting, Dr. James B. Maas, a sleep expert, presented evidence that showed how lack of sleep makes people less smart and unable to function.

Superintendent John Sturock said the information presented is being looked into for future use with students.

"I think it's an educational piece and we're working toward where sleep enters a student's life," he said.

The idea is to introduce the importance of sleep and how it correlates academically, Sturock said.

The information Dr. Maas presented at the meeting showed that most people are moderately to severely sleep deprived because they are not getting the nine hours of required sleep they need each night.

Dr. Maas said sleep and health are intimately connected. Through his research, he found that people who get six hours of sleep each night lower their resistance to viral infection by 50 percent.

Bill Trubilowicz, vice president of the school board, said he found the information very interesting.

"I have no doubt there's some merit in what he has to say," he said.

School times were mentioned during the presentation, but Trubilowicz said it would be interesting to go in and change the times. Instead, he said the subject will need to be talked about more and parents will have to take an active part.

"There's a lot of things it (sleep) affects that have kind of been the standard way of life," he said.

Trubilowicz said it will be hard to change the sleep patterns of older students due to jobs, after school activities and such. He said a complete change is more of a five year process than something that can happen overnight.

"It's going to take a whole shift of society to make as big of a change as you'd like," he said.

Trubilowicz said students are taught about alcohol, drugs and healthy eating, but they should also learn about the importance of sleep.

Dr. Maas said he helped a young Sarah Hughes develop a healthy sleep pattern in order to improve in her skating. She went on to win the Olympic gold medal for figure skating during the 2002 Winter Olympics.

Lack of proper sleep can lower the immune system's function and eventually lead to heart problems, Dr. Maas said during the meeting.

"I'm surprised at the hard data," Trubilowicz said.

Dr. Maas said some people die from a lack of sleep because their bodies aren't getting the rest they need.

"There's some pretty incredible far reaching effects," Trubilowicz said.

Arts center has sculpture invitational

The Crooked Tree Arts Center Visual Arts Series continues with Creative Dimensions, a Sculpture Invitational, which opened Aug. 15 and is running through Sept. 24.

An opening reception is scheduled from 4 - 6 p.m. for Sunday, Aug. 15 and is free and open to the public.

This exhibition will be on display in both the Edith Gilbert Gallery and West Gallery of the art's center.

Crooked Tree Arts Center's Visual Arts committee member, Judy Landis has curated the invitational bringing sculpture artists from all over the state of Michigan together.

Coffee At Ten is free and open to the public.

For more information, please call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

President Bush speaks in Traverse City

BUSH

One of Bush's big points was the economy. He said the economy is on the rebound, thanks, in part, to the tax cuts he pushed through Congress. He also claimed that 1.5 million jobs have been created since last August.

"The economy is stronger and getting stronger," he said.

As for the war on terror, Bush said because of his administration's efforts, Afghanistan is now free and Libya has given up on its efforts to get weapons of mass destruction.

Furthermore, he addressed the issue of Iraq, saying this country has a ruler that was an enemy of the United States, harbored terrorists and pursued weapons of mass destruction. However, no weapons of mass destruction have been found in Iraq and claims of ties to terrorists have proven to be suspect.

In light of this, Bush said he does not regret the decision to strike against Iraq.

"Even though we didn't find the stockpiles, (the Iraqi leader) had the capability to make them," he said.

For his next term, Bush said he would like to keep the Patriot Act, saying it is vital to our safety, create a position of National Intelligence Director, create personal retirement accounts and get more people owning their own small businesses.

Bush also said he wanted to create a compassionate America.

"I want to continue to rally the armies of compassion," he said.

But he also spoke to some local issues. Bush said he is completely against diverting Great Lakes water from the Great Lakes basin and he said he would like to see Traverse City cherries sold all over the world.

Charlevoix resident Harry Golski was one of many Bush supporters from the area in the crowd. He brought his wife, Ann, and son, Chris, and his son's friend, Scott Friske to the event.

All of them thought it was a great experience.

"It was awe inspiring to be that close to a major, or perhaps, the major world leader and to have him come here and meet with us in northern Michigan," he said.

Golski said he thought the president's speech was wonderful.

"I thought he covered a great breadth of issues important to us in northern Michigan," he said. "It made me realize that this is an important election to all of us and it is important for supporters of both candidates to get their voters to the polls."

Charlevoix resident Dianna Phillips was one of the undecided voters in the crowd. She said it was very valuable to see the president, especially as she starts trying to figure out who she is going to vote for in November.

"I thought it was really a good experience to be able to go and listen to him first-hand. It was a lot of good information," Phillips said. "It has opened up my mind a little bit to seeing some views I wanted to see in my evaluation."

She said she really liked when he talked about the importance of small businesses.

However, Phillips said she is not ready to say which candidate, Republican or Democrat, she is leaning toward until she has gathered all the information she needs.

Charlevoix resident and county Drain Commissioner JoAnne Beemon was also one of the many area people in the crowd. While Beemon is a member of the Green Party and not a supporter of the president, she said she felt it was important to see a sitting president.

"I wanted to hear every single word. I thought it was important to hear what he had to say," she said. "I think it is exciting to see the president."

But, Beemon said she was not too impressed.

"I just think George Bush is out of touch with the American people," she said. "His message was that everything is great."

Beemon said everything is not great, and pointed out we have one of the largest national debts ever and the economy is not going well for many people. She added we need more environmental protections, is concerned with the war in Iraq.

Along with those supporting the president, those with feelings similar to Beemon's were out in large force outside the civic center. Unlike in many other stops Bush has made, the protesters were not regulated to free speech zones and circled the outside of the civic center park.

However they were barely heard over the supporters inside the civic center park.

Michigan Democratic Congressman Sandy Levin offered some rebuttal to the president's remarks. He said he listened to the president's speech on the radio during his drive from Traverse City to Lansing.

"I was most struck when the president said he wanted to 'rally the armies of compassion.' As someone who has been in Washington and seen him rally the dynamics of division, I just thought it was the total opposite of what his term has been," he said.

Levin said the tone in Washington is very vicious and very partisan, thanks to this president.

Levin also addressed the president's comment on protecting the Great Lakes, saying it was "feeble." Levin said the president has only wanted to study the issue and has not wanted to take action, but a bill that will take action now to protect the lakes is working its way through congress. He added this is supported by the president's challenger in November, John Kerry.

Furthermore, Levin took issue with the president's statement that the economy is getting better. Levin said in reality the nation has lost 2.5 million manufacturing jobs and 145,000 in Michigan during Bush's term in office.

"When the president says his policies are successful, it doesn't ring true with most Americans," he said.

Regardless of the politics, this was the first time a sitting president had visited Traverse City since Gerald Ford in 1975. It is not known at this time if Democratic challenger John Kerry or his running mate John Edwards will make a trip to northern Michigan in response to Bush's. Levin said he hopes that they do, but the Kerry camp would not comment on the matter.

Rodell Mollineau, spokesperson for Kerry/Edwards in Michigan, said, "I can't speculate as to where we will be in the future."

Lifeguards pull swimmers to safety

Once there, he and Rowe lowered the rope on one of his lifesaving floats to the swimmer and pulled him to safety.

"The waves were really powerful out there," Tilley said. "We just barely got those kids to the ladder."

Rowe said the teens were in the water for about 15 minutes.

Both of the swimmers who needed to be rescued were transported to the Charlevoix Area Hospital where they were treated for hypothermia, cuts and abrasions.

During the rescue, Tilley was also slightly injured when he cut and banged up his feet on the jagged rocks surrounding the Charlevoix pier. Rowe was uninjured.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, the teenagers, both 15, were members of their school swim team from Pottersville.

Charlevoix City Recreation Department Director Ike Boss said he was very proud of his lifeguards.

"The way I understand it, both people would have drowned without the lifeguards," he said.

He said in the past, the city has asked whether it is worth the money to have lifeguards at the beach, especially considering very few beaches on Lake Michigan have them anymore. Boss said this shows that lifeguards are valuable to the safety of swimmers and no price can be put on them.

Boss said he has nine lifeguards, with one head lifeguard who is also a Charlevoix Police Officer. Those lifeguards are trained and retrained every year.

"We have the best crew I have ever had," Boss said.

Library saves money on bond bid

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public Library will be able to save the community money due to receiving a good bid on bonds.

Valerie Meyerson, director of the Charlevoix Public Library, said the library board is pleased with the result and the rate from Stone and Youngberg LLC.

"I'm really excited because I think it showed their strong international support in Charlevoix's strength as a community," she said.

The $7.45 million project will cost taxpayers $600,000 less than what was originally expected over the 20 year life of the bond. It will cost taxpayers 4.16 percent a year.

The original levy was to be .75, but it immediately dropped to .65, Meyerson said.

The library received 10 bids and Meyerson said the rate they're getting from Stone and Youngberg LLC is the best Tom Colis, the library's bond lawyer, has seen all year.

"We're thrilled," she said.

Underage drinking a problem

Charlevoix teenagers can face many troubles if they decide to drink.

By GINA ATTEE
Special to the Courier

As of Aug. 1, Minor In Possession charges in the District Court in this year alone have topped 180, already surpassing last year's total of 174 charges.

Law enforcement is cracking down on underage drinking, but are their efforts a futile attempt to put a dent into an issue that has plagued a generation of teens for years?

Underage drinking seems to have become an accepted part of "doing what you're not supposed to do," said Scott Kelly, director of Bay Area Substance Abuse Education Services (BASES).

Teens granted with driver's licenses are also hitting the road after drinking, seemingly without regard for the seriousness of a drinking and driving offense.

Eventually, with law enforcement hot on the tails of teenage drinkers, teens are going to face consequences for their actions.

Fines paid by underage drinkers make their way through the system to fund county and state programs such as public libraries. Substance education programs do not receive any of this money.

Luckily, there is enough money in Bay Area Substance Education Services (BASES) to support programs that help deal with underage drinking.

The Charlevoix Courier is looking in-depth at this problem this week.

Festival decides to eliminate Friday fireworks show

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix Venetian Festival has tentatively put its Friday night fireworks show on hold due to budget issues.

According to the Venetian Festival, the fireworks display has generated a debt of $25,000 over the past four years. The decision to eliminate this show does not affect the Venetian Festival's annual Saturday night fireworks show.

"This is not an easy decision for us," Venetian Festival president Dan Barron said. "We have been wrestling with this decision for a few years."

Barron said the fireworks are the most expensive portion of the festival, hence the reason for eliminating the event. He added the festival has looked at other cost cutting plans, such as shortening Venetian to Wednesday through Saturday in downtown Charlevoix, instead of Sunday to Sunday — as was done this year.

Barron said this year there were two events on Monday and Tuesday — the Rayder Rumble at

Two Charlevoix soldiers, one war in Iraq

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Operation Iraqi Freedom is present in the minds of Americans, but two Charlevoix residents will feel the effects first hand.

Sgt. Troy Drebenstedt and Spc. Country J. Middleton are facing Iraq from opposite sides. Both men are with the First Infantry Division and are 88-M, wheeled transportation and transport personnel.

Drebenstedt, 21, has served in the Army for the past four years, but has never been oversees until now.

"It's nice being around people going through the same thing," he said. "We help each other."

He is currently home for two weeks as a part of his mid-tour leave, which is his first trip home since leaving for Iraq six months ago.

"It's really nice being near family and friends and eating real food," he said.

Drebenstedt enlisted in the Army to follow in his father, Robert Drebenstedt's, footsteps and to serve his country.

"I like the stuff they do and the choices you can have through the Army," he said.

His choice to join led him to Iraq, which Drebenstedt said helped him grow as an individual.

"It makes me look at things differently," he said.

Even though he has been involved in some scrimmage, Drebenstedt feels fairly safe.

"I feel like the Army's going through great lengths to make a soldier feel protected," he said.

Being a soldier is a choice and one that Drebenstedt is proud to have made.

"It means to put your country before yourself," he said.

After serving in the Army for four years and hearing nothing for two, Middleton, 28, was recently called back and is set for deployment to Iraq.

"Although it's a major interruption in my life, it's just one more obstacle that I'm ready to jump," he said. " I feel that I am ready to serve my country in another conflict."

Middleton said he feels prepared for what lies ahead due to his prior military experience.

"I also feel that the training I received in knowledge and leadership can help with the military missions and aiding the motivation of the soldiers," he said.

Middleton has served overseas as a part of Task Force Falcon, a multi-national peacekeeping mission in the Kosovo Campaign. His service also lead him into Bosnia and Albania.

"I wanted to go in because I wanted to serve my country and experience new things," he said.

The Army was a natural choice for Middleton since he has three family members that previously served.

Following his family lineage, Middleton was also able to understand world events from a first-person point of view.

"Seeing it changes your life and makes you a better person, I think, when you're able to see it first hand," he said.

The Army enabled Middleton to actively deal with world events instead of other branches of the military that work just as hard but are more removed from the situation.

Middleton said he likes the Army because of the challenges presented to him and how it made him grow as a person and see life in a new way.

Having to depart from loved ones isn't easy, especially when you're headed into hostile situations.

"I feel nervous and a little bit scared because this conflict is worse than the last one I was involved in," he said.

Middleton keeps updated on what is going on in Iraq, but the facts aren't making deployment easier.

"And knowing by the recent events of what's happening, it makes everything more unexpecting," he said. "You don't know who you're fighting."

Despite the interruption his life is facing, Middleton said a military person has to do what needs to be done.

"You're bound by duty, honor and integrity to fight for your country no matter the reason for it," he said.

Middleton said there's no difference between being a soldier or remaining a civilian when it comes to the person, but a soldier is something more than employment.

"Being a soldier is more than just a job," Middleton said. "It's fighting for what this country stands for."

Soldiers not only defend the country, they personally give up a portion of their lives for the betterment of others.

"It's a sacrifice you give for American freedom and freedom across the world," he said.

The war in Iraq comes home for writer

Courtney E. Pace

Staff writer

Iraq. I read about Iraq and saw some issues discussed on the news, but it was always an illusive identity that was far, far away from me. I was wrong.

The impact Operation Iraqi Freedom has had on me is more clear now than before. I care more about what is going on and seek out knowledge of our troops because Iraq has invaded my life.

My boyfriend, Spc. Country J. Middleton, recently received orders for deployment to Iraq. Never did I think a military conflict so far away would end up in my own backyard.

He told me his life has been interrupted, but doesn't complain about it. A true man, a true soldier for he is facing a great challenge head on.

I am worried about him going, as everyone is when a loved one heads overseas to a hostile situation.

Knowing he served for four years in the Army and took part in Task Force Falcon, a multi-national peacekeeping mission in the Kosovo Campaign, makes me feel a little better.

Country is not the only soldier who is facing this great leap of courage. There are more soldiers in Charlevoix who are currently serving overseas and they should all be recognized for the sacrifice they are making.

Iraq has become a four letter word, pitting neighbor against neighbor in a vicious dispute about our government's intentions.

All of the fighting is ridiculous. Our government is making money off this wâr as it does in any war, but that is really beside the point. Whether you believe in the war or not, it is happening.

I for one, am against the war. I don't believe the reasons the American people were given for our involvement with the war, which have shifted since Sept. 11. One fact, however, remains the same: Our service men and women are over there dealing with the conflict firsthand regardless of why the war was declared.

People need to remember that just because someone may be against the war, they are not against the troops. Men and women are giving the utmost sacrifice for a cause they themselves may not believe in, but are upholding an oath.

Country and others are going to fight because they pledged themselves to defend the United States against foreign and domestic terrorism.

I only hope this conflict doesn't become like the Vietnam War where our brave servicemen, most who were drafted, were put down for fighting.

Soldiers, whether enlisted or drafted, do not create a war. All service men and women should be appreciated for what they do. People can hate the government for what it's doing, but not the troops.

Keep the service men and women in your prayers. They didn't start the war, but are there to try and resolve the situation.

Country is displaying utmost courage, honor and integrity as he prepares to leave the safety of his home.

I am having a difficult time preparing for his departure and I know his family is too.

God is the only comfort I'll have when Country goes. Our families will console each other, but God is how all of us will be connected despite distance.

Iraq. The meaning of the word is different now than what it was before. I pray for Country and for all the other service men and women who are going into a situation I myself wouldn't want to face.

Fall changes for the good

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Some mornings the air is especially crisp and cool; the sky is often a more intense blue than before, the sidewalk sales are over. Pellston airport temperatures have been below 40 degrees and all the Queen Anne's Lace is in full bloom.

For many years this was the saddest time of the year for me. It signaled the end of summer in Charlevoix and the need to return to Luther College in Iowa, where a new crop of students was waiting. I enjoyed my work at the college, but it could not compare with days in Charlevoix. It is now nine years since we began living here full time. The sadness associated with this time of year has dissipated, evaporated, deliquesced: It is gone.

It is barely possible that world peace could be established if leaders, movers and shakers on the international scene were required to spend autumn in Charlevoix.

The vegetable garden is producing at a rate far beyond our capacity to use its largess. A word of warning about summer squash. We had tired of zucchini and branched out with three completely new varieties, Magda, Butter Scallop and Kuta, all of which the seed catalog described as prolific. The seed catalog lied. Prolific does not begin to explain their growth. One end of the garden is a waisthigh squash wilderness, and every two days for the past month it has generated eight to ten pounds of Magda, Kuta and Butter Scallop. Some days I have loaded a cart with squash and placed it by the road in front of our house. It must be good, it has all disappeared. Someone even looked longingly at the cart.

The patriotic section of the garden has produced red, white and blue potatoes. I may make red, white and blue potato salad for election day.

The salmon have arrived in numbers great enough to almost match the garden in productivity. Few things in life compare favorably with a fish that is fun to catch and so enormously satisfying to eat.

Our late summer robin family has grown and gone from their nest just above our back door. The neighborhood cats sat watching the whole process of feeding, growth and first flight with great interest, but we believe that all four offspring made it to independence and will be on their way to Georgia to spend the winter.

I submit the following as an annual reminder. If the leaves of your Maple tree are developing dozens of black, dime sized spots, don't be alarmed. It only means that you have a Norway Maple, and it will not be harmed by the spots. The leaves have done their summer's work and are ready to retire. If you cannot consider the spots to be ornamental, plant a Sugar Maple. They don't get the spots.

The only autumn sadness that remains is that I am not a poet who could write an ode to this magnificent season in Charlevoix.

Handicap parking

Editor:

I am a former full time resident, current Charlevoix property owner, part-time visitor and eventual summer resident. I also am a Spinal Cord Injury survivor of 40 years who uses a wheelchair.

For many years people with a mobility impairment have been denied access to the communities in which we love and live. In July of 1990, George Herbert Walker Bush signed the Americans with a Disability Act into federal law. A section of this law specifically provides for access to parking. In Michigan it is 4 percent of total parking.

The city of Charlevoix has never been in total compliance with this law. Over the years I have watched county and city government provide little or no cooperation in providing ADA parking and architectural access advice, direction or resource materials to merchants doing renovations.

What access to downtown business that has been accomplished was entirely on the business owners initiative. Thousands of people with disabilities in Michigan alone have disposable income that they would like to spend. To ignore this fact in my view demonstrates a lack of vision from city of Charlevoix officials. It is also astonishing that access parking would be removed in such a arbitrary manner with no provision for replacement. When a city official refers to a survey regarding access parking then I know that they have little understanding of ADA law or enforcement.

The ADA simply provides inclusion into American culture. As the baby boomers age the numbers of physically impaired people will grow. It is simply shortsighted and myopic to ignore the obvious. My sincere wish is that someday I will independently be able to shop, spend and buy in every business in the city I love. Universal access benefits all Americans.

Dogs not a problem

Editor:

As Casey Stengel once observed, "It's deja vu all over again." I thought we had put the issue of dogs in the park to bed last year. I now read that Ms. Picha and her grandson are back complaining. The mayor has again chimed in and I see that the Courier has issued an endorsement of this proposal, which is somewhat silly based upon its lack of facts.

Our chief of police reported that this ordinance (as it was being suggested) was next to impossible to enforce. The issue is not enforcement per se, but a realistic appraisal of the "danger." Ms. Picha brings up before the council that people can trip over dog leashes and the claim that her grandson had a near death incident last year when he was "almost" bitten by a dog at the craft show. The Courier suggests that if you were the first child to be bitten by a dog at one of these events, how would you explain that unfortunate event.

First off, anyone who is pitching this idea has no statistical data to suggest that dogs in the park, during a festival or otherwise, are hazardous to anyone's health. I suggest one of the reporters check the county clerk records to determine how many dog bite lawsuits have been filed within the last ten years in this county. The Courier's editorial clearly indicates that nothing untoward has happened to date and thus there are no facts to support this proposition.

The newest wrinkle to this argument seems to be the "what if" argument about somebody slipping on dog poop in the park. Well, from my observations of the park area I note that every dog is on a leash and that the owners are very diligent about picking up after their dog. I would humbly suggest that the topography of the park is of greater danger to kids and older folks than the chance of slipping on dog poop. At the most recent art fair, I counted two dogs in the morning and three dogs in the afternoon. All were well-mannered. No one was fleeing for their life. As the city attorney rightfully pointed out last year, it is the dog's owner that is liable for injuries caused by the dog, not the city.

This whole issue of bringing forth an ordinance to ban dogs in the park should be approached cautiously. All cities and municipalities have inherent power to pass ordinances based upon a showing that the ordinance is "in the public health, safety and welfare." This falls under a broad police power category of ordinance making.'

This ordinance making, however, should be used judiciously. It is not a matter of enforcement or lack of enforcement as the Courier suggests but, rather, whether the punishment fits the crime so to speak.

Do dogs in the park, either during festival or non-festival times, represent a clear danger to the public safety, health and welfare? I would suggest not. Until the National Rottweiler Association comes to Charlevoix for a convention I suggest everyone step back a pace and think this issue over. The thought process I have witnessed to date seems to be half-baked. I would suggest everyone rationally think about this notion based upon statistical evidence rather than the Chicken Little theory of ordinance making.

Please help

Editor:

I am writing this letter as a plea to my community for help. My name is Yvette (McDermott) Harris, daughter of the late Robert L. (Hoppie) McDermott and Vickie (Connaghan) McDermott. I have no family except for my half-sister and half-brothers from my mother's previous marriage. I lived with and grew up with my parents in Charlevoix. I have helped care for my parents through many operations, doctor's appointments, financial situations and general household care.

After my mom, who was 79, fell and broke her hip she had to go to Boulder Park Nursing facility and I continued to support my father at home and visit her daily even though I had two jobs and a family. My father was diagnosed on Christmas Eve, 2001, with lung cancer and died in January of 2002.

Even though it was my parents' wish for me to take possession of the house; everything happened so quickly that a will was never made up. I have been living in my parents' house for 13 months and have paid off the principal/interest owed on the house.

My step-siblings want their mother's share of the house. Because I have no money to buy them out, it is forcing me to become homeless. I have until Aug. 30, 2004 to vacate my parents' home.

I have exhausted all of my possibilities and I have nowhere else to turn. I am hoping that someone will give me advice on whether they can legally force me out of my parents' home. I am also looking for someone or a financial institution that could loan me the money to pay them off so that I can stay in my parents' home.

I have no telephone, but a message can be left at my friend's house, 547-5116. I pray that there is some help out there somewhere and thanks to my community for your support.

Glen McDonough: April 20, 1934 - Aug. 19, 2004

Glen McDonough, 70, of Charlevoix, died Thursday, Aug. 19, 2004, at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey.

A Mass of the Resurrection was, Monday, Aug. 23, at Saint Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Pat Cawley and the Rev. Thomas Neis co-officiated. Burial followed in Saint Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

McDonough, a husband, dad, brother, uncle and to so many, friend, was born on the shores of Beaver Island Harhor, April 20, 1934, the son of William Patrick and Sophia (Haugen) McDonough.

He married the love of his life, Elanor M. Gallagher, also of Beaver Island, on July 29, 1959, in Charlevoix.

Throughout his life his family, friends and Beaver Island were all that mattered, all that he loved. Great joy was his whenever there was Beaver Island music to be played or heard, whether it was at a house party, in the hall on the island or anywhere his beloved family, friends and the music that they shared, gathered. Those who know and love him can envision his perfect smile and his special saunter as he moved from table to table in the Hall, greeting both young and old with a handshake, hug or both, either gesture filled with the joy and the soul of an always happy man.

Thursday afternoon, with the lake as blue as the sky, he was fortunate enough to have his wife, son and cousin, Carol Bunting, with him in his room on the top floor of Northern Michigan Hospital facing west over Little Traverse Bay; his beloved birthplace just beyond the horizon.

A Veteran of the U.S. Army, Glenn was also a member of Saint Mary's Catholic Church, the Old Fashioned Michigan Fiddler's Association, the Jordan Valley Fiddler's and the Michigan Electrical Inspectors Association.

Resident recounts Berlin Olympics and Hitler

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Olympics conjure up images of great athletes competing against each other and representing their country, but for one man the Olympics signify a whole lot more.

Les M. Freidinger, a former Charlevoix resident, attended the 1936 Summer Olympic Games when Adolf Hitler began his campaign of world domination and racial purity.

"You could really sense the police activity although you didn't see them," he said. "But he (Hitler) really had control."

Some of this control may have been helped by the public's view of the German army or their lack thereof.

"They claimed, or it was rumored, that there was a tunnel built from downtown Berlin to the stadium in which Hitler and his gang would move to the Olympics," Freidinger said.

Every action the government did was in some way preparing them for war, Freidinger said, which eventually became clear to the young college graduate.

Upon graduating from Northwestern University, Freidinger agreed to accompany a friend to Europe and attend the Summer Olympics in June of 1936. Packing their suitcases, the pair joined a travel group run by an acquaintance of Freidinger's friend.

The voyage lasted about five days as the pair took a boat from Montreal to Liverpool, England. Freidinger said back then the only way to really travel was by boat because there weren't commercial airlines how we know them today.

Freidinger said the ship he took to England was the S.S. Athenia, which was the first ship sunk in World War II because the Germans claimed the boat was carrying munitions.

Other college students accompanied Freidinger on the voyage. He said there were a lot of college students roaming around Europe and attending the Olympic Games, which enabled him and his friend to receive student passes. These passes allowed entrance to museums and other attractions for free.

"Students were apparently not supposed to have much money," he said.

Freidinger only attended the track and field events held in a stadium built by the German government. It was here that Freidinger saw Hitler.

"He was there every day," Freidinger said.

Freidinger said Hitler's racism was apparent during the international competition because he would only award Caucasian athletes personally and let someone else in his gang award athletes of a different ethnicity, such as the famed American Jesse Owens.

"The thing that bothered me was that Hitler wouldn't give Jesse the gold medals," he said.

Owens, an African American track and field wonder, received four gold medals during the Summer Olympics for the 100 and 200 meter dash, the 400 meter relay and the long jump. For each event he either set an Olympic record, a World record or both.

Freidinger said Ralph Metcalf, an African American track star, also did not receive a gold medal from Hitler for his efforts on the field.

The racial tension wasn't confined to those participating in the Olympics.

Freidinger said he and his friend were approached by several Europeans while they bicycled through different countries.

"Europeans had a lot of respect for Americans," he said. "They were eager to talk to you."

Through talking to different people, Freidinger said he and his friend were told Hitler wanted to take over.

"After we had been in Europe for awhile I really got a feeling Hitler was going to take over," he said. "You could feel it coming."

A former German World War I Prisoner of War and a young girl in Vienna, Austria helped make Hitler's motives even more clear.

"She (the girl) said Hitler was going to come in and take Austria," he said. "She wanted to come to the United States and wanted my address."

Freidinger said he didn't want to become involved in something of that nature so he gave the girl his school address.

"She was determined to get out of Austria some way, some how," he said. "I often wondered about her and how it turned out."

Freidinger said a picture began developing in his mind about what the future had in store.

"You could feel there was going to be a war," he said.

The size of the war was one thing Freidinger hadn't expected.

"There wasn't any doubt when I came back from that trip that Hitler was going to take Austria, but I didn't realize it would start a big war," he said.

Freidinger and his friend ended up staying an extra month and had to make their money last until they could get home.

"I'll tell you, traveling with one suitcase for three months," he said. "I don't know how I did it."

Despite all that happened between the 1936 games and the current Olympics, Freidinger still loves to watch the athletes compete.

"What you're seeing in the Olympics are the greatest athletes in the world, and I mean the world," he said.

Churches unite for service at high school

In the spring of 1996 the front page of the Detroit Free Press carried a story about New Hope Missionary Baptist Church, an African-American church in the city of Wayne, a southwest Detroit suburb near Metro Airport.

The story recounted how the church had been vandalized with cans of spray paint. On its walls had been painted racial slurs and symbols. Hurtful taunts were there for all to see.

Then a good thing happened. Because of the media response, members of Charlevoix's Community Reformed Church became aware of the situation and were prompted to respond that same day with a phone call to New Hope's pastor, Virgil Humes. They expressed concern and regret for what had happened. They also sent a bouquet of flowers for their altar for the coming Sunday.

That simple exchange of compassionate words and flowers has blossomed into a living and growing relationship of love between two quite diverse congregations.

One church's members are black, the other's are white. One is an urban church, the other is rural. To say these two churches function in two different worlds is a grand understatement. But there are extraordinary similarities between them. Those similarities became obvious to members of the two churches when they began visiting each other.

In the summer of 1996, a group of Community Reformed Church members traveled down to Wayne to visit New Hope Church. They had no idea what they would find. What they found were folks that greeted them with hugs, fed them like kings and queens and welcomed them back to stay in their homes the next time. The following year, members of New Hope came north to visit in Charlevoix for a weekend. Members of the two churches have been exchanging visits each year since 1996, opening their homes to each other. Each year their fondness and respect for each other grows.

This year, members of New Hope Missionary Baptist Church will be visiting Charlevoix on Aug. 28 and 29. They will eat, play and renew acquaintances at a church picnic on Saturday, and will worship with Community Reformed Church during their Sunday morning services at 9 a.m. and 10:45 a.m. In order to have plenty of space for visitors and friends, these meetings will be at the Charlevoix High School auditorium.

Most of New Hope's choir takes part in these visits, and the auditorium will be filled with the sounds of the combined choirs of the two churches, bringing contemporary gospel energy to Northern Michigan. The Pastor Virgil Humes will bring the message.

The community is welcome to worship with the "sister" churches. Charlevoix High School is located on Marion Center Road. A time of food and fellowship will be offered between services. For more information, contact the church at 547-9482.

Sheriff searches for downed aircraft

Marine and Road Units from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office along with the U.S. Coast Guard responded to a possible downed aircraft in Lake Michigan in the vicinity of Big Rock and the Charlevoix Pier Head at about 7 p.m. Aug. 20.

The reported downed aircraft was seen flying low near the water. Only one report was received by 911 dispatchers.

Boaters on the lake at that time told officers that nothing unusual was noticed in the area. The FAA was also contacted to find out if any aircraft was lost on radar of late in a flight plan. The FAA reported that everything was normal.

At about 8:30 p.m. the U.S. Coast Guard received a call about a low flying aircraft near Norwood Township flying south. However, the observer said that the pilot of that aircraft was not in trouble and the plane continued with no incident on a southerly course along the shoreline.

The U.S. Coast Guard dispatched a rescue helicopter from Traverse City and assisted in the search operation. After hours of searching on the lake and from the air, the operation was terminated after no aircraft or wreckage was located.

(Left) The Charlevoix Municipal Airport and the Civil Air Patrol hosted the Yankee Air Museum's B-25D "Yankee Warrior"World War II bomber plane. After being renovated, this is the first year the bomber is officially flying on the air show circuit. Those who came to see it were able to crawl up inside the plane and take photographs. St. Mary Pre-K changes times

The Pre-Kindergarten program at St. Mary School in Charlevoix is adjusting the times of the current program to suit the changing needs of today's parents by extending the Pre-K hours.

Unlike many preschool programs, St. Mary Pre-K will run from 9-11:30 a.m., Monday-Friday with drop-off beginning at 8:40 a.m.

A three-day option is available for those interested. Program director, Heather Sape, will continue to provide quality education for the developing 4 and 5 year old children, who must be 4 years old by Dec. 1.

"Some of the benefits of the five-day program are that the child is given more time to complete tasks over five days instead of the traditional three days. A five-day program also helps ease the transition into kindergarten," said program director Heather Sape.

For the second year, St. Mary's will be offering quality child care for children ages four through eight from 11:30 a.m. - 4 p.m. with extended hours available. This program is open to the community with drop-ins available.

St. Mary School is currently accepting registrations for Pre-K through grade six for the 2004-2005 school year. For more information, or to register your child for any programs, please call the office at 547-9441.

Sewer line going in on north side

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Construction occurring on Boyne City/Charlevoix Road will enable the city's sewer system to take in more residents than the current one.

City Manager Michael Weisner said the sewer line is the property of Charlevoix once completed, but residents in Charlevoix Township will be able to use its services as well.

"It will be our system and we'll be treating the residents as individual customers," he said.

Weisner said the city will handle the residents who wish to use the system through monitoring use and collecting fees.

Residents in the township will be receiving information concerning what the cost will be to hook up to the city's system in the near future.

Weisner said the preliminary start up date for the new line will be sometime next spring. As for now, construction is still underway.

Jim Manthei, construction manager with Manthei Development Corp., said construction along the road is nearing completion, with only asphalt laying remaining. The next phase is to work on constructing the sewer line in the adjoining neighborhood.

Manthei said construction started about a month ago and is slated to be completed by mid-November.

Controversial movie comes to Charlevoix

A controverisal movie by filmmaker Michael Moore called Fahrenheit 9/11 may be making waves around the country, but it is barely making a ripple in Charlevoix.

The movie began playing at the Charlevoix Cinema on Friday, with additional showings on Sunday and Monday. More shows are planned for this weekend.

Cinema owner Bill Supernaw said, " When you have got people saying you have to see this movie and people saying you can't see this movie, I want to give people a chance to see it."

The movie, a documentary, is about President George W. Bush's actions after Sept. 11, 2001. It has been proclaimed as brilliant by many liberals, but decried as false by many conservatives.

Just getting the movie to the theaters was a feat, as some theaters were threatened with boycotts and the original distributer of the movie — Disney — bailed out of the deal — forcing director Moore to find a new distributer and producer.

But Supernaw said the movie has not caused much controversy in Charlevoix — a known conservative stronghold.

"I didn't have anyone say they were disgusted by it. I think that just anti-Bush supporters are seeing it," Supernaw said.

He said ticket sales have been OK, with 185 sold in the first three days.

Supernaw said he is a member of the local Republican party, but only because he is good friends with its head John Haggard. He said he votes for either party in elections and supports both.

"I am kind of all over the map," he said.

As for the movie, Supernaw said he could not find any lies in it, just Moore's view of the Bush family and current events.

"You would have to see it for yourself to tell it is libelious or malishous," he said.

County Repbulican chair Haggard said he has not seen the movie and does not plan on seeing it. But that doesn't mean he is against Moore or his movie.

"I am not really a documentary movie person," he said. "Anybody can do whatever they want. That is the benefit of this country. Micheal Moore is making himself a multi-millionare with what he is doing."

Member of the local Democratic Party Rosemary Horton said she was surprised to see Moore's movie being shown in Charlevoix.

"I thought this town was so Republican, he (Supernaw) wouldn't dare show it," she said.

Horton said she has seen that movie and liked it.

"I know people are saying it is very biased, but I think the facts in the movie speak for themselves," she said.

Public Notice?
Without it in your newspaper, you're left guessing what the government's doing in your community.

Public notice is the people's right to know the issues that affect them directly, and people know the place to find public and legal notices is in the newspaper. What you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. Public notices have been posted here since the days of colonial America. In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. Why guess? That is why you have, and read, your newspaper... where your right to know is already being served.

Property for skatepark set on city property

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Skaters and rollerbladers will be able to continue honing their craft at the Charlevoix Community Skatepark's permanent location.

The permanent skatepark will be constructed on the southwest corner of the land parcel currently housing the Water and Electric plant on West Carpenter Street across from the baseball fields.

As of now, this property will house the skatepark for five years.

Vicki Hankins, secretary of Charlevoix Community Skatepark Inc., said the city will continue owning the park for liability reasons.

"It will be a city owned and operated skatepark at no expense to them (the city) because volunteers will be running it," Hankins said.

City Manager Michael Weisner said the city will use staff time to monitor volunteer activities, construction and future plans.

However, he said there's no direct cash outlay coming from the city.

"I guess the volunteers have aspirations to have full-time people there other than volunteers," he said.

The idea is to have the skatepark sustain itself, which would allow a city employee to oversee the park.

"Once that permanent park is up and running, we believe it will be self-sustaining," Hankins said.

Hankins said the employee would not be paid from the city budget, but by funds that are generated through user fees and area fundraisers designated for that purpose.

Everything will go well as long as the park can provide its own funding.

"The city made a commitment to operate the skatepark for five years as requested as long as there was not a net cost to the city's general fund," said City Attorney Jim Young.

Young said the park will sustain itself through revenues it generates by any fees, gifts, grants or the services of volunteers.

The Charlevoix Community Skatepark Inc. is currently awaiting the receipt of some grants that will now be available due to the permanent location.

Hankins said the project is ever evolving, but the first step is to create an outdoor, seasonal and supervised park.

Future plans include an indoor, year-round facility for young talent to practice their skills, but all depends on the availability of funds.

Vickie Daman, president of the Charlevoix Community Skatepark Inc., said the indoor facility will depend on the skatepark being granted a permanent home and not one for just five years.

Currently, decisions are being made concerning which vendor to go with. There are designs laid out by both vendors indicating what the park would look like at the temporary location next to the old middle school.

Hankins said the goal is to build the skatepark all at once, but if funding isn't adequate to that purpose the park will proceed from either vendor one piece at a time.

The projected opening date for the new location will be during the spring of 2005 weather permitting.

For now, the temporary location will continue running until Oct. 31.

The skatepark will have a more permanent home on the southwest parcel of land next to the Water and Electric Plant on West Carpenter St. across from the baseball fields. The skatepark is guaranteed use of the land for five years.

Sheriff seeking driver who left accident

On Aug. 13, 2004 the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office was dispatched to an unknown accident on M-75 near Industrial Drive. When Deputies arrived on the scene it was discovered that the second vehicle involved in the accident had left the scene.

Robert Perrine of Central Lake was to operator of the first vehicle that had stopped, and was waiting to turn into Industrial Drive when he was struck in the rear of his vehicle by a green Dodge truck.

According to witnesses the driver of the truck stopped and checked his bumper for damage and then left stating that he was going to call the police, which records indicate he did not do.

Perrine was taken by ambulance to Charlevoix Area Hospital where he was treated and released for a neck injury.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is asking anyone with information on the second vehicle that caused the accident to please call 547-4461.

Suspect vehicle is a dark green, full size Dodge pickup, 1998-2004 model, believed to have a regular cab (not extended) but not verified. The driver was an approximately 30-50 year old male with salt and pepper hair.

Sidewalk sales

People flocked downtown to check out what area merchants had to offer during the annual sidewalk sales. Different items ranging from clothing to knickknacks were available to purchase.

Charlevoix Rotary Club to have annual golf tournament

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual "Porker" golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 2 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Billed as "The Affordable Golf Tournament," the entry fee is only $40 per person.

"We have had players comment that it is almost as if we are paying them to play because of the amount and quality of the prizes distributed at the tournament," said tournament director Tim Petrosky. "Last year we distributed gifts with a retail value of more than $3,000 to golfers. Everyone went home with a prize."

The event is a four-person scramble. The entry fee includes golf, a buffet dinner at Giuseppe's Restaurant and the traditional tournament trademark: oodles of prizes. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, and to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle.

"This tournament is more about fun than competition, although we do have strong teams every year," said Petrosky. "Year after year area businesses generously donate great prizes that pretty much assure everyone goes home with a smile on their face no matter how they golfed."

Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop. The event is limited to the first 20 teams that register.

An optional skins game and "mulligans" will also be available to teams. The shotgun start is at 4:30 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:30 p.m.

Rotary uses proceeds from the event to benefit the community with an emphasis on area youth.

Hunter education clinic to be next week

A Hunter Education Clinic will be Aug. 28 at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, located north of Charlevoix on US-31.

Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m., in the clubhouse. The days activities will conclude at 4 p.m.

There will be a lunch break, and registrants are asked to bring a drink and sack lunch.

This clinic is open to all residents 12 years of age and up, or who will be 12 prior to purchasing a 2004-2005 hunting license.

A testing session, for those who complete the Aug. 28 clinic, will be in Charlevoix, with the time and date to be announced at the Aug. 28 clinic.

Attendance is mandatory at both sessions (clinic and testing) to receive the Hunter Education Certificate.

This clinic is free and conducted with the help of the DNR, members of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and volunteer instructors from the area.

Shade trees available through city for streets

It's time to have those gaps in the street tree-line in front of your property filled.

Call Charlevoix City Hall at 547-3270 and ask for your free shade tree, which will be planted by a city crew this fall. Choose from Maples, Little Leaf Linden, Callery Pear and American Elm.

Due to the devastating loss of Ash in South Michigan due to the Asiatic Emerald Green Ash Borer, too many of one type of tree such of Maples in Charlevoix is a recipe for possible disaster. Ash are on hold until the city can determine what impact the Ash Beetle has on Ash in our area.

If you requested a tree last year and have not received it, call the above number to verify your request still is on the list.

It will be planted this fall unless it has been canceled for a valid reason. The main reason for carryover requests to this fall from last year is bad weather.

Sue Hocquard accepted a certificate of appreciation on behalf of the county transit, thanking the drivers and staff for always going the extra distance. Their services don't go unnoitced. Drivers who stopped by got pizza, pop and certificates. Friday Night Fireworks

Planning for the 2005 Charlevoix Venetian Festival was already well underway, even before the ashes of the final, stunning fireworks shells had fallen unto the still waters of Round Lake at 10:40 p.m. on Venetian Saturday, July 24, 2004. Another successful Venetian Festival had again been vividly punctuated by spectacular fireworks displays on Friday and Saturday evenings.

The Venetian Board has since been collecting the balance of revenue for the 2004 Festival. The final tally has, unfortunately, fallen short of meeting the Festival expenses for the fourth consecutive year. The brilliant firepower and choreography of the Friday night Lake Charlevoix fireworks display, which was first staged in 2000, has carried with it considerable expense resulting in a fireworks debt totaling $25,000.00 over the past four years.

The Venetian Board has thus reaffirmed its decision to suspend the 2005 Friday night Lake Charlevoix fireworks display. The Festival is not in a position to again stage the Friday night fireworks unless additional funding is realized to bridge the revenue shortfall.

> The decision to suspend Friday night fireworks is a difficult one which has been deferred for several years, due to the great community pride shown in this world class display, staged in the aftermath of the 1997 fireworks tragedy.

The possibility of reinstating Friday night fireworks still remains, and in order to do so the Venetian Board is calling upon individuals and businesses who have not yet financially contributed to Venetian to now do so and for current contributors to make an additional, one-time contribution to the "fireworks fan club." Summer clubs, property associations and marinas located on and around Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix are requested, in particular, to accept a leadership role to prompt immediate member contributions to the "fireworks fan club" and to promptly implement an annual $100 per dwelling/boat slip Venetian assessment to help support both the present and future Festivals. Such modest, institutional type support from those in Charlevoix possessing financial wherewithal and "front row seats" would readily ensure the long-term viability of two evenings of world class pyrotechnics.

Please send contributions payable to the "Charlevoix Venetian Festival" to P.O. Box 120, Charlevoix, Michigan 49720. Please reference the "fireworks fan club" and feel free to call 231-547-3872 for more information.

The Venetian Board is otherwise diligently working on exciting plans for the 75th/Diamond anniversary of Venetian, which will occur on July 17 - 23, 2005. In the event the Festival is able to reinstate Friday night fireworks, the Master Pyrotechnicians of Venetian have promised as an anniversary bonus to Charlevoix, the most energized fireworks displays ever launched north of the 45th parallel.

No matter the future shape of "Venetian" it will remain our summer jewel, due to the "labor of love" given to the community by the legions of dedicated volunteers and contributors, who are truly the lifeblood of Festival support. Please stay tuned for further updates.

Reading group to discuss 'Da Vinci Code'

The Little Traverse Community Reads group invites the public to a discussion of the best-selling novel, "The Da Vinci Code" by Dan Brown on Monday, Sept. 13 at the Petoskey Public Library and on Tuesday, Sept. 14 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Since spring of 2003, "The Da Vinci Code" has captured the interest of readers worldwide and has remained on the bestseller lists of many publications including The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and Publisher's Weekly.

It was Brown's hope that the novel " . . .would serve as a catalyst and a springboard for people to discuss the important topics of faith, religion and history."

The Little Traverse Community Reads group hopes that the public will join in on the conversation about this popular work.

Though many people have taken the story to be factual, it should be emphasized that "The Da Vinci Code" is a work of fiction.

Details of the story, which include organizations such as Opus Dei and the secret organization called The Priory of Sion, actually do exist. But, as in all good fiction, the author has put his own spin on the story.

The plot centers on a Harvard symbólogist, Robert Langdon, who is involved in the murder of the curator of the Louvre. Near the murdered body, police find a code that they cannot decipher. Langdon is summoned to help answer the riddle and becomes entangled in the mystery.

As the chase begins to discover the meaning of the code, clues lead Langon to the paintings of Leonardo Da Vinci.

Langdon soon learn the murdered curator has sacrificed his life in order to protect a sacred trust of the Priory of Sion.

The story is fast-paced with many twists and turns not only taking place in the present time of the story, but also in the past history and behind the meaning of many of Da Vinci's paintings.

Brown is a graduate of Amherst College and taught English at Phillips Exeter Academy before turning to writing full time. His family is talented as well. His father is an award-winning math professor and his mother is a professional sacred musician. His wife is an art historian and painter, who has collaborated in his research for his thrillers.

In 1996, Brown's interest in code breaking led to his first novel, "Digital Fortress." He has authored several best selling novels including "Digital Fortress," "Angels and Demons" and "Deception Point."

His next Robert Langdon novel will be about the brotherhood of the Masons and will take place in the United States.

The Little Traverse Community Reads invites the public to join the discussions of this popular novel. The program begins at 7 p.m. on both evenings and refreshments will be served.

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Carol Kurburski is the new face of Charlevoix's Copy Plus in the Captain's Corner Plaza on M-66.

Kurburski purchased the business on June 28, after managing the place since it opened two years ago.

She said she bought the business because the owner wanted to sell it and she thought it would be a good chance to be her own boss.

While the couple do have a home in Petoskey, she said she is looking for a new home in Charlevoix.

Copy Plus of Charlevoix can take care of your packaging and shipping needs.

Hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Saturday. After hours appointments are available.

Cross country team opens season

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While school may not be in session yet, both the boys' and girls' varsity cross country teams kicked off their seasons with nice finishes in the Benzie Invitational last week.

Girls' coach Mary Plude said, "I was real pleased with the way the squad took out their race and ran as a team. We had some great senior leadership at some important places in the race and the sophomores really stayed committed to one another to bring the group in together."

Boys' coach Ken Plude said, "They looked pretty good for being tired. They had just returned from (running) camp on Beaver Island."

The girls' team finished eighth out of 16 teams overall and the boys' team finished seventh out of 16 teams overall.

Individual results for the girls' varsity team were: Theresa Martin in thirty-fifth, with a time of 21 minutes, 53 seconds; Emily Westenbroek in forty-third, with a time of 22 minutes, 10 seconds; Brittney Lamb finished forty-sixth, with a time of 22 minutes, 13 seconds; Mia Matchett finished fifty-second, with a time of 22 minutes, 21 seconds; Caitlin Taylor finished fifty-fourth, with a time of 22 minutes, 25 seconds; Sonya Plude finished seventieth, with a time of 23 minutes, 15 seconds and Anna Taylor finished seventy-third, with a time of 23 minutes, 30 seconds.

And 18-year-old county resident was injured in an automobile accident on Sunday, August 22, 2004 on Griffin Road in Evangeline Township.

At approximately 6 p.m. a 1994 Chrysler Town and Country minivan driven by an 18-year-old Charlevoix County resident lost control of his vehicle and struck a tree.

The minivan was traveling on Griffin Road when it swerved to avoid an ATV as it rounded a corner. The driver of the minivan struck a stump which caused him to lose steering control.

Upon striking the stump, the air bags were deployed into the drivers face resulting in the driver suffering a broken nose. The driver was transported to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey by private vehicle where he was treated and released.

Sheriff George Thomas Lasater is asking that anyone with any information regarding the ATV to contact him at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at 547-4461.

Braun to play 100 holes for program

A local athletic event that has become a summer tradition is about to be repeated as Belvedere golf professional, Steve Braun, will again play 100 holes in a single day.

Many have asked why he puts himself through the physical and emotional agony. The simple answer is he is a dedicated believer in Charlevoix's Junior Golf Program and the potential it has to impact young people so that they can learn life skills through the game of golf.

As in the past, pledges made go into the program's scholarship fund, which allows deserving junior golfers to attend the Ferris State University's week long golf camp.

Braun tees off at 6:30 a.m. on Monday, Aug. 23 and finishes approximately 12 hours later. Those interested in pledging in support of the Junior Golf Scholarship Fund or in monitoring Steve's progress can do so by calling the Belvedere Golf Club at (231) 547-2611 or Dean Davenport at (231) 547-6433.

Friday fireworks could be brought back

FIREWORKS

Charlevoix High School on Monday and the Kickoff at the Castle at Castle Farms on Tuesday.

He said the Rayder Rumble may continue to be an event with the Venetian Festival, but he is not sure if it will be every year or every other year. The reason it is being kept, he said, is because the Rayder Rumble actually raised money for the festival through admissions. The Rayder Rumble pitted the 2004 and 2001 Charlevoix High School varsity basketball teams against one another.

As for Castle Farms, Barron said the festival spent about $12,000 to put on that event as a way of testing the waters at that location and to create a relationship with the owners of the Castle, Linda and Richard Mueller. The festival was trying to see if the Castle would be a viable location for future events where it could charge admissions.

Barron said there are no plans at this time to include the Castle in next year's event lineup. However, if the Castle wanted to host an event where the festival did not have to help pay for and could actually raise money from it, this could change, Barron said.

Barron stressed that the decision to eliminate the Friday night fireworks is not set in stone. If the festival were to raise enough money to support another year of it, the festival will add it back into the line-up.

To help raise this money, the Venetian Festival is encouraging area summer clubs, property associations and marinas located on and around Round Lake and Lake Charlevoix to donate to a "fireworks fan club."

The festival is suggesting a $100 donation per member of these organization to help support future events, saying this is a modest donations considering these organizations "front row" seats to the fireworks.

Contributions payable to Charlevoix Venetian Festival can be sent to P.O. Box 120, Charlevoix, MI 49720. Call (231) 547-3872 for more information.

The Venetian Festival will be July 17-23 next year.

How to get your news into the Courier

If you have a news item you think would be perfect for the Charlevoix Courier, feel free to call 547-6558, e-mail news@charlevoixcourier.com or visit the Courier office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

News items include events sponsored by non-profit organizations. Please inform us of your event at least two weeks in advance.

Our coverage area is the city of Charlevoix and its immediately surrounding areas, including Beaver Island.

Because of space limitations in the newspaper, we generally try to avoid publishing "check-handing" pictures or "ribbon-cutting" pictures. However, we will work with your organization to get a picture that reflects the event and is visually interesting to our readers.

Due to time constraints on the staff, we cannot attend every event we are notified of. If you have a picture of your event, we will gladly consider it for publication. But, please, contact us before your event.

It should be noted, each story and picture is dealt with on its individual merits. Any policies outlined above may be suspended by the editor or general manager of the Charlevoix Courier if necessary.

City, county officials deal with drinking issue

DRINKING

drinkers.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said that they have put forth a "significant increase in law enforcement."

The midnight shift of law enforcement, which runs from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m., is making "a serious effort to check out party spots," said Lasater.

In fact, many concerned citizens have been calling in to report possible underage drinking, mostly due to the noise level of parties.

Kelly said that the busting of large parties is a relatively new phenomenon. He noted that he has seen a few fairly large parties busted this summer.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson believes that minor drinking still remains average compared to other years, but the days of giving warnings to underage drinking offenders are gone.

"We've been teaching it as a serious offense," Halverson said, "We don't give warnings anymore."

Why are teens drinking?

There are many ideas behind the reason for underage drinking, but there is a vast difference between reasons given by the minors doing the drinking, and the adults who catch the minors.

"There are a multitude of reasons for underage drinking," said Halverson.

Halverson acknowledged the relative availability of alcohol to minors, as well as the fact that opportunity often presents itself to teens.

"Alcoholism," he said, "also can play a part."

Peer and social pressure along with examples set by adults are the reasons that Lasater says he believes are behind underage drinking.

You'll also hear many teens offering the excuse that there's "nothing to do in Charlevoix."

Katie Lieberman, who was charged with an MIP this summer, will tell you those exact words.

When Kelly heard this excuse he helped get a book called "Getting Connected" to many Charlevoix Public School kids. The book cited many of the things to do in Charlevoix.

The book wasn't as successful as hoped for.

In fact, Kelly said, "a year later, they were still giving the same excuse."

Could it be, as Kelly will suggest, that as children age they lose their creativity? Or could underage drinking just be an accepted part of having fun to a younger generation?

"Younger kids create their entertainment," said Kelly. "As they grow older, they lose that creativity."

Drinking and driving

Many teens receive their driver's licenses about the time that they become involved with underage drinking, which often leads to drinking and driving.

"A minor tends to be inexperienced in the effects of alcohol," said Halverson.

This inexperience with alcohol may cause a teen to believe that it is safe to drive when it really isn't.

"The younger the driver, the more the attitude that nothing's going to happen," said Lasater. "It's a false sense of security."

The responsibilities of the parent become very important in this situation. Teens need to know that if they call their parents to pick them up, the drinking issue will be dealt with later.

"Parents need to say, if you get into a situation, call us," said Lasater. "The message has to be loud and clear."

"Minors may not feel that option is available to them," said Halverson.

Zero Tolerance laws also hold underage drinkers to higher standards when it comes to a drinking and driving offense.

"The law is much stricter on minors than on the general public," Halverson said.

"No parent wants to hear their kid is spending the night in jail," said Lieberman.

Getting caught

Even if there isn't a concrete reason for underage drinking, there is definite punishment for offenders.

A first offense alone will cost a teen 60 hours of community service, and about $200 in fines and costs.

Surprisingly, most teens are aware of the punishment before they get caught.

"I even talked about it (the punishment) with my friends," said Lieberman of the night that she was caught.

When a teen gets caught drinking, it doesn't necessarily mean that there is a serious problem. In fact, studies show that 80 to 90 percent of teens drink before graduation, with less than 5 percent encountering serious problems with alcohol.

"It's not like we're a bunch of alcoholics," Lieberman said.

Kelly added that when a teen gets caught, "it just means they got caught."

Only further investigation, such as in the form of a BASES assessment, can determine the likelihood of further problems.

Where those court fines are going

Surprisingly, if you look into the money from MIP fines, you'll see that 100 percent of the money goes back into state and county programs, which means no money ever reaches programs that help deal with the underage drinking problem.

Programs such as BASES are often required as part of the District Court's sentence, but they receive no government financial aid.

In fact, about 95 percent of money used to run the BASES comes from fees for services, meaning the money that they earn by charging for services. The other five percent of BASES income comes from donations.

Renovations done to the building in the past have relied 100 percent on grants.

"Contributions stay here," said Kelly. "The fund-raising is for the kids."

Where to get help

When a minor receives an MIP, he or she will often be required to attend "Zero Tolerance Education" classes at BASES.

When asked how successful the class has been, Kelly said that out of the 100 percent of kids that promise they'll never get in trouble again, about 20 percent turn out to be repeat offenders.

The class, said Kelly, is used to "help them identify if they're at risk for future problems."

Law enforcement strongly believes that the BASES program is doing its job.

Halverson said that the BASES program has been "a great addition to the process."

He added that the program is good for both raising awareness and determining alcoholism.

"It's a worthwhile option and a good tool to deal with the problem," said Lasater.

BASES is also a teen hangout open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday.

Kelly acknowledges that most people think BASES is a place where all the druggies hang out, but he said that BASES is "the most drug-free place around."

Studies show that the greatest time for underage drinking offenses is from 3 to 6 p.m. on weekdays, when teens are least likely to be supervised.

"If the kids use the teen center, hopefully they won't need the substance abuse programs," said Kelly.

Library fate under debate

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The debate is still on over what will happen to the current library once the Charlevoix Public Library moves into the new facility.

When the library moves into the former Charlevoix Middle School off Grant Street, ownership of the current Clinton Street location reverts back to Charlevoix Public Schools.

Connie Saltonstall, property heir of the current library, wants to see the money used from the sale of the building go toward paying off the debt of the new library.

"As long as the assets given to the library go toward the new library, it's still following my parent's wishes," she said.

Saltonstall is referring to her parent's wish that the land would only be used for educational pur-

After being held up in construction, the new Charlevoix City Hall is ready to open its doors to the public on Sept. 17.

City Manager Michael Wiesner said the idea is to allow the public to see the new facility. He said they can familiarize themselves with the layout through posted floor plans and other items.

"It's a very nice facility," he said. "It should work very well."

The project cost $2.8 million, which Wiesner said is pretty close to the original totals. He said some plans were updated within the last year and construction bids came in a littler higher than expected.

"We're happy with the cost," he said. "We think it's a very quality building that will last for years."

City officials were originally scheduled to move back in earlier this year, but Wiesner said construction took the contractor longer than intended.

Wiesner said the city didn't put a completion date on the contract so prices wouldn't be affected should construction go over. He also said it enabled the contractor to work at his own pace.

"It worked out fine," he said. "There's plenty of room to oper-

The Secretary of State's office mails notices to motorists 45 days before their driver's licenses or license plates expire tq give them ample time to renew. Licenses and plates that expire on a day when state offices are closed, such as a holiday or weekend, can be renewed the following day without penalty.

Branch offices are open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. On Wednesdays the majority of offices are open 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. with those in city centers open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Smaller branch offices may close during the lunch hour.

For more information visit the Department of state web site at www.Michigan.gov/sos.

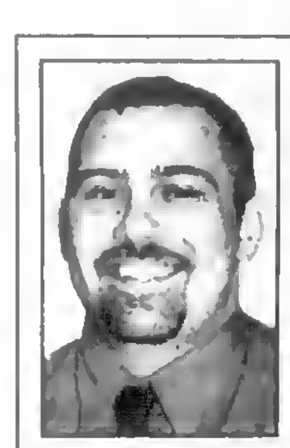
Never give up on any task you take on



Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

It's amazing when lessons present themselves to you.

You can never be ready for them. They just appear very quickly but their impact stays around for eternity. Just this weekend I was presented with a lesson that I thought I had learned a long time ago. I was wrong.

Over the weekend I was competing in my final Scottish Highland games event of the season. In case you don't know, these are those athletic contests where the competitors all wear kilts and lift very heavy things, such as big poles that look like they should have telephone wires attached to them (they are called the caber).

But due to many events that have taken place in my life over this summer, such as a new baby and endless renovations to a new house, I have found very little time to get ready for these final games. So, I went into them not expecting the greatest of achievements for myself, but not expecting to do too poorly either. I was feeling healthy, strong and mentally ready for tossing around some serious weight.

Perhaps I had gotten too cocky. You see, this month is also the one year anniversary of having come down with the first symptoms of Crohn's Disease. In case you don't know what that is, it is a disease where your body attacks your intestines, causing pain, bleeding and non-stop trips to the bathroom. When I was first diagnosed with it, I lost about 30 pounds and was very weak. Since then, I have gone into remission, gained back my weight, returned to the gym, was competing on the highland athletic fields in May and eating like there was no tomorrow.

But, this disease seems to have a way of getting you when you least expect it. The day before my final games of the season, perhaps as a reminder of one year ago, I found myself running to the bathroom and experiencing those wonderful stomach pains.

What had I done? It is tough to say. But, just this little bout with it weakened me and I found myself struggling to get ready the next morning for those games.

Once at the games, I could feel myself being sapped of energy. With every throw, every strain and every push, I felt the need to lie down and take a nap coming over me.

In the first event, the 56 pound weight for height, I didn't even get it over 8 feet — my record is 9. In the second event, the 20 pound bag of straw for height I could not make 16 feet — my record is 20. I was giving up. The games were over for me. I was going to end up in last place.

Then something happened. I began to think of those who came before me in my family. McBains throughout history, McBains who have never given up. I have had family members who fought diseases much, much worse than mine and faced odds more against them. Always never giving in. And there currently are still members of my family not giving in, not even to life threatening diseases like cancer. They fight on in even in the dark hours.

Here I found myself wanting to give up after a couple of bad finishes in a couple of highland events because my old nemesis Crohn's decided to say hello again? These people from my past never gave up in situations much worse, whether it be facing down massive armies on the field of war or facing a long battle with cancer. Who am I to give in so quickly?

"Don't give up," I said to myself in my head with the old Gaelic saying coming to mind, "Cuimhnich có leis a tha thu (Remember the men from whence you came)."

And something happened. I forgot about the pain in my stomach. I forgot about the weakness I was feeling. I forgot about being sick. I just remembered my history, my family and my motto: "Don't give up."

With that I went into the caber toss — the 18 foot long pole that we toss end over end. I bent over, cupped my hands and hoisted it up with one end in my hands and the other pointing straight into the air.

"Get your balance....relax your shoulders....now....RUN!"

And I ran, stopped, lurched down and exploded my arms into the air, bringing that pole up and over in a nice turn. I was back in the game. I was myself again.

As a fellow competitor put it after that: "I knew you were holding it in."

In the end, I smashed four personal records on Saturday: in the stone putt, the 56 pound for distance, 28 pound for distance and hammer toss. I gave it my all in each one and each one broke my previous record by at least a couple of feet and finished in sixth place overall out of nine — not bad for not even placing in the first two events.

I was not out there competing against my disease anymore. I was out there being myself, having fun and giving it my all. Mostly I was out there because I never gave up and never will.

Flowers look great

Editor:

The petunias lining US-31 and Bridge Street are magnificent; they are blooming their heads off. What a beautiful show. I don't believe I've ever seen such full colorful blooms. Drive in from the north, don't miss MacDougall Bed and Breakfast or Barron and Golski's office, a lovely floral show complementing what Keep Charlevoix Beautiful has done. The downtown hanging petunia baskets are simply delicious. Would someone please tell me how they do that? Kudos to everyone who helped make all this happen.

Go to Iraq

Editor:

I enjoyed reading the Charlevoix Courier while visiting Charlevoix this week.

Another northern Michigan publication offered an idea that I endorse. Would the people who support the Bush/Cheney ticket please volunteer to go to Iraq? If you are unable or unwilling to fulfill this moral commitment please choose one of your children or grandchildren to go in your place.

Family responds to school plans

Editor:

Our community is very fortunate to have the opportunity to create a larger library using the old middle school and gymnasium. We believe that when the current library moves into the new facility, the current library should be sold and the proceeds of the sale be used to pay down the debt of the new library.

The Charlevoix School Board believes they should get the property because when it was quit claimed to the library they had a reverter clause. We disagree with this because no school funds were used to build that library.

Following is the financial history of the current library:

The Charlevoix Public Schools ran the library until 1997 when it became a District Library.

The first Andrew Carnegie Library was built in 1909 and cost $12,000. $10,000 was given by Andrew Carnegie and $2,000 was raised locally.

The current library was opened in 1967. No school funds were used.

The land was donated by Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Saltonstall. There was a fund from a .5 mill levied for the support of the library. $74,092 came from federal funds approved by the State Board for Libraries. The School Board sold the old library for $7,800. Other donated funds came from the Kiwanis Club, The Art Ranger Memorial Fund, the Shakespeare and the Dickens Club, local industries and both local and summer residents. Mrs. Julius Gilbert (Edith) and Mrs. Pat Hawley headed a committee to raise these funds.

The precedent was set using funds from the sale of the old library to be used for the new library. The School District has already received $635,000 from the city for the old school property and the library has agreed to buy 10 of the 13 lots from the city for $488,650.

There is a restriction on the current deed saying that if the current library is no longer used for educational purposes it will revert to the Saltonstall heirs. We pledge to remove that restriction for the sale of the library if the proceeds go to the new library. We will not remove the restriction if the school board takes back the library. The school board does not need to have their offices in a prime downtown location and the city would benefit from tax revenues if the use becomes commercial.

We urge the school board to allow the library to sell the current library when the new one is complete. It is the right and fair thing to do.

Drain Commissioner needs support

Editor:

I submitted two bills to the county. One is payment to an engineer and one for attorney fees. Both bills were returned to me with the request that I stipulate from what account of the Drain Commissioner's office they should be paid.

1) The engineer's fee for inspection of the Deer Lake Dam has been paid for by the county commissioners from county funds for many, many years. I have no fund for dam inspections. The Drain Code designates oversight of dam inspections to the Drain Commissioner. The inspection is complete and the Deer Lake Dam meets state standards.

2) The counsel of Mary Beth Kur in her Feb. 24, 2004 opinion on standards promulgated by the Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner was misleading, incomplete and inaccurate and has made it difficult for this office.

The counsel of the leading experts on Michigan drain law, Hubbard, Fox, Thomas, White and Bengtson, P.C. would not have been necessary had the information I offered the commissioners and prosecuting attorney's office been reviewed. The law offices of Hubbard et al. supported the information I brought to the county and prosecuting attorney and addressed and corrected the prosecutor's errors.

An elected official should not have to fight county commissioners and the prosecuting attorney to accomplish her duties. The headlines on the Feb. 26, 2004 Petoskey News-Review front page read, "Prosecutor: Beemon overstepped her bounds." The article quoted the prosecuting attorney at length. Her statements must be corrected. Mary Beth Kur has still not responded to a request by the Charlevoix County Commissioners to review this counsel.

The city of Charlevoix is considering modifications to the outlet in Round Lake of the "Charlevoix Consolidated Drain No. 1." The north and south branches of this drain are under the authority of the drain commissioner. These drains carry storm water to Round Lake from throughout the city of Charlevoix. The Round Lake Harbor and Marina project is an ideal time to upgrade these drains so that oil, gas, solids and pollutants do not enter the Harbor.

A recent incident in which an individual dumped over a gallon of transmission fluid in the street above a city drain a block from Round Lake highlighted the importance for upgrades. Timely action by a citizen and the fire department prevented the fluid being washed to Round Lake by a storm the next day. As you are aware, all city drains run directly to Round Lake with no filtering or separation devices.

The ongoing difficulties along Waller Road in Charlevoix Township and in other areas of the county as well as proposed developments in Eveline and Marion Township involve the drain commissioner.

The support of the prosecuting attorney and county commissioners would be helpful in fulfilling the responsibilities of the drain commission's office. Thank you.

Venetian board makes wrong move

Editor:

In my personal opinion, (the Venetian Board of Directors) have made a deeply divisive and fundamental error in logic in suggesting a summer club/property association assessment to help defray the cost of the Venetian Festival.

To begin with, the Venetian "Festival" began as a commercial venture to promote Pine Lake - Round Lake harbor and upper Lake Michigan to the boating public and transient summer visitors. It was a venture by the chamber of commerce of Charlevoix, its merchants and real estate people all of whom had a financial interest in the promotion of the area. (I helped my father in the early 30s string Japanese lanterns in our modest little boat's rigging, as he responded to a request for entries into the boat parade).

The summer clubs/property associations occupying the shoreline of Pine Lake (which name was changed to "Lake Charlevoix" to further benefit the commercial interests in the village of Charlevoix) did not come to northern Michigan to be entertained by either boat parades or fireworks; they came to enjoy the peace, serenity and beauty of Michigan "Up North" and they have made a substantial contribution to the community. The Belvedere Club, itself the largest taxpayer in the community, and not a commercial venture, contributes annually between $2 and $3 million to the local economy in salaries, taxes, scholarships and benevolence (of which we have incomplete records). The clubs and visitors are the very entities that this "festival" was initiated to entertain. And now you are asking them to help you entertain themselves?

If an "assessment" as suggested is like a "tax," (and I think it is) I do not see any of the aforementioned clubs represented on the Venetian Board of Directors. Had they been, it is possible that a wiser approach to the solution of the problem may have been suggested. And taxation without representation is an anathema to all Americans, even "up north."

The summer home associations/clubs have always been approachable and will continue to help local benevolence, such as the Charlevoix Pool, Crooked Tree Art Center, the Community Hospital and the Charlevoix Public Library and in fact have given the Venetian Board of Directors the use of the Belvedere Casino at no charge to facilitate its annual meeting/party/dance. Just use of the building costs our own members, should they wish to use it, at least $2,300 per night minimum!

Our own Belvedere Club has always been willing to include in our intra-member correspondences solicitations for help to local organizations, such as hospital, pool, library and others. Whether or not they would be willing to even do that for what the Belvedere Club sees as a commercial promotion, I do not know.

We note with interest at the bottom of your Venetian Festival Program that Victories Hotel and Casinos were running shuttle buses to and from East Park festivities. In the New London, Conn., Sailfest Festival, the entire cost of a magnificent fireworks display was paid for by the Native American tribes and their casinos since they become beneficiaries from the transient tourist population who come to view such things. This festival took place on July 10 in New London and Niantick, Conn.

The bride wore a two-piece, strapless, ivory and cream colored dress with a lace up back and rhinestone embellishments to the cathedral length train. She also had a French bustle with elbow length veil. She carried a bouquet of antique cream roses with cream ribbon wrapped stems.

The maid of honor was Emily Martinus. The bridesmaid was Marcie Kirkman. They wore red, two piece, sleeveless, dresses with a-line skirts. They carried deep red roses with stems wrapped with red ribbon.

The flower girl was Madeline Zawisza. The program attendants were Megan and Mariah Zawisza. They wore red dresses.

Losing a spouse, parent or child due to death is sometimes more than we can bear.

Also emotionally taxing is getting divorced, losing your job, moving, dealing with a chronic illness, or even losing a pet.

Loss of any kind is the focus of a series designed to help people cope.

A series of five weekly sessions for coping with a loss will be from 4:30 to 6 p.m. on consecutive Tuesdays from Sept. 14 through Oct. 12 at Community of Christ Church, 777 Vogel Street, in Boyne City.

The Grief Support program is sponsored by Hospice of Northwest Michigan (formerly the Charlevoix County Hospice), Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Agency. The program is designed to help those grow through grief, and learn the five tasks of grief work.

The facilitators for this program are Pastor Carl Litchfield, Hospice Spiritual Advisor, Margaret Lasater, Bereavement Coordinator and Julie Spencer, Social Worker.

Anyone is invited who has suffered a loss or who is helping a loved one deal with a loss and who would benefit from the support of others.

Hospice would appreciate anyone interested in attending these classes to pre-register by calling the hospice office at (231)536-2842. There is no charge for this program.

Hospice of Little Traverse Bay offers free grief support services to children and teens who have lost an important person to death. Support often involves teaming kids with someone their age who has experienced a similar loss.

Mitchell: When my dad died, I was really sad, until I learned that I wasn't the only one who had someone die.

Andrew: It helped me to be able to tell my story to other kids, and to hear their stories, because we were in the same spot.

Jon: The first day back the principal came up to me and said, "I'm sorry about your dad." It helped me have a good year at school.

Hospice of Little Traverse Bay's Children's Program is also available to children whose lives are disrupted by a family member's serious illness, helping prepare them for the days to come. If you know of someone who could benefit from this free service, please call Hospice of Little Traverse Bay at (231) 487-4825.

Council votes for lower lease at airport

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

During the Aug. 16 city council meeting, council approved a lower land lease for renters at the airport, but not all members agreed.

The land lease fee for the airport has been lowered from its previous rate of 79 cents per square foot to 70 cents per square foot in order to keep a potential renter interested.

It was said during the meeting that the potential renter was misquoted the price as being 70 cents and since no one has shown interest in renting over the past five years, the airport wanted to lower the rate to keep the client.

Third ward council member Shirley Gibson and first ward council member Bill Haggard voted against the lower rate.

"I just felt that a mistake was made," Gibson said.

She said the city made the error and changing the rate is not the way to correct the situation.

"Two mistakes don't make it right," she said.

After repeated attempts, Haggard was unable to be reached for comment.

The current renter on the Barnard Hangar has been paying the 79 cent rate and council discussed either crediting their next payment or refunded the amount they have overpaid.

First ward council member Bob Timms voted yes for the rate change.

"Well, I figured everyone ought to be on the same page," he said.

He said it's fair to have everyone pay the same rate for the time being and if the cost goes up in the future everyone will be on the same page.

Second ward council member Karen I. Campbell voted yes to change the rate to 70 cents, but now regrets her decision.

She declined to comment on why she would change her vote.

According to the city council packet, the 70 cent per square foot land lease fee will increase for the north central region due to the Consumer Price Index, which will be applied in 2009 and then every five years after.

Charlevoix to host BASS championship

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The boys are back in town as they prepare to show their skill and patience during the Michigan BASS Chapter Federation's State Championship from Sept. 9 through Sept. 11 in Charlevoix.

The federation is an affiliate of the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society and the championship is the largest single BASS tournament in Michigan.

Paul Sacks, state championship chairman, state secretary and scholarship director, said when the championship came to Charlevoix in 2000 the turnout was good and the people were kind.

"We love the area and the pristine waters," he said. "Charlevoix will always be on our schedule."

This year approximately 220 members will be competing for 13 coveted positions. There are currently about 900 members in the Michigan BASS Chapter Federation, which consists of 60 clubs throughout Michigan.

During the championship, the 220 anglers will fish in Lake Charlevoix and the connecting waters, Sacks said. Those that make it into the top 13 will then compete at the Northern BASS Divisional in September 2005.

From here, out of the 13 Michigan anglers, one individual will advance to represent Michigan in the BASS Regional Championship where they will fish against 10 other states.

Five regions are competing and only the top five will progress and represent the amateur side of BASS at the BASS Master's Professional World Championship.

The five anglers will then fish amongst the professionals and attempt to win over $1 million in prizes and sponsorship money,

Fishermen to be on lake in large numbers

BASS

Sacks said.

The Michigan BASS Federation, however, is not all about fishing.

The Michigan BASS Federation Inc. has a scholarship fund, promotes youth events and also helps with local community service projects.

Sacks said the scholarships are available for any member's family interested in the pursuit of higher education.

Sacks said this program allows children to learn three different ways to throw at targets stationed 10, 20 and 30 feet away.

Winners advance to the State Championship given once a year and those winners go on to represent Michigan at the BASS Master's World Classic.

Sacks said it gives the children a chance to fish with the professionals and to win scholarships and sponsorship.

"We do a lot of stuff around the community," he said.

Some of the community service projects are hosting fishing tournaments for scouts, helping to sponsor the Big 10 State Championship for college fishing and to help the Paralyzed Veteran's Association, which they've been doing for the past four years.

Participants will launch their boats from Ferry Beach, where they will fish for both large and small mouth bass because both species are legal for the championship.

The winner will be determined by the total weight of all fish caught over the two-day period. Sacks said the maximum number of fish that can be caught is 10, five per day.

The championship is run in a catch-and-release fashion.

"We promote conservation to the utmost," he said.

Anglers will go through staging in Captain's Corner on the corner of US-31 and M-66. Boats will be given a thorough check before being allowed in the water.

There will be four flights, with the first leaving around 7 a.m. and the last returning around 4:30 p.m. Sacks said this will help reduce the crowd on Lake Charlevoix.

Anglers can also enjoy competing for the Big Fish Pot. Winners will be chosen for the largest Big Bass caught each day.

For more information on the State Championship and the Michigan BASS Chapter Federation call Sacks at 248-819-3192 or e-mail him at psacks1@aol.com. An Internet site is also available, but it is currently under construction. The site is www.michiganbass.net.

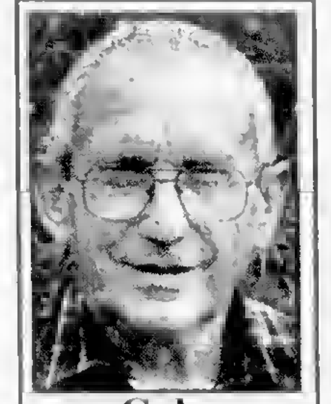
Campbell, Carlson competing for mayor seat

ELECTION 2004

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Votes will be cast on Nov. 2 for city council representatives, and both candidates for mayor are ready to take on the challenge.

Incumbent Gabe Campbell and former council member Norman "Boogie" Carlson both hope for the best.



Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

Campbell, 71, has been mayor for the past two years and served on city council for eight years.

He has lived in Charlevoix for 37 years and served on several committees including the Credit Union Board for 13 years and officer of the local D-480 for 19 out of the 20 years he worked there. He also served on the St. Mary's School Board when his children were young.

Campbell is running for mayor again because he wants to continue to serve the Charlevoix community and ensure everyone is treated equally.

"Well, basically I'm still not happy with what I consider to be selective enforcement," he said.

He said there are some people in town who get away with things others can't.

"I see it all the time," he said.

Campbell said he doesn't want to keep bringing up the issue between John Winn's bushes and Richard Georgi's sprinkler system and former flower garden, but they are examples of selective enforcement.

The city isn't forcing Winn to trim his bushes or doing it for him, but Georgi was forced to remove a flower garden and possibly an in-ground sprinkler system.

To resolve the issue of selective enforcement, Campbell believes everyone should follow an ordinance or it should be thrown out of the books.

"That's what I've always believed," he said.

Aside from his concern with selective enforcement, Campbell said he doesn't think there's enough accountability and wants to see a small, one page monthly report by all city department heads.

"We should avoid getting into the pitfalls of what happened at the wastewater plant," he said.

Campbell is referring to the discharge permit violations that happened at Charlevoix's Wastewater Treatment Plant. The violations had been ongoing until city staff realized the information they did receive wasn't adding up.

Campbell's platform also includes issues concerning development in Charlevoix.

"I like to see things progress, but I like to see a little handle on it," he said.

He is not anti-development, but doesn't believe the city needs some things such as more condominiums and a Wal-Mart. Campbell said he has nothing against Wal-Mart, but doesn't think it would fit well in Charlevoix.

"It (Wal-Mart) would drastically change the Charlevoix we know today," he said. "We don't necessarily have to look like every other town."

Campbell also said he doesn't have anything against city administration, but said some people could work harder.

"I could see some doing their job a little better or taking up a different job," he said.

Openness in government is important to Campbell, who said council has very limited closed sessions that deal with contracts and other items of a that nature. Otherwise, Campbell wants the public there.

"I don't think we should ever have anything to hide," he said. "We work for the people, we should be accountable to the people."

Campbell's campaign is not going uncontested.

Carlson, 37, has lived in Charlevoix for 29 years and has sat on the Zoning Board of Appeals for two years and was on City Council for four years.

He has been involved in the community through being president of the Charlevoix Jaycee's for two years and a member for three. He also coaches youth sports.

Carlson said he is running for mayor because he enjoyed his time on council before and he didn't want to run against current third ward councilmen Sherman Chamberlain Jr.

"I did not want to run against Sherm Chamberlain for council member because I think he's a good councilman," he said.

Carlson said he thinks incumbent Campbell is a good person, but doesn't share the same political views.

Carlson also said he'd like to think people are encouraging him to run.

"I've gotten a lot of positive feedback from the community so far and I hope that carries over to the election," he said.

When he was on council, Carlson said he always tried to listen to people who wanted to express their opinion, which he will carry over as mayor if elected.

"I believe you're there as an extension of your constituents," he said.

The platform Carlson is running on includes issues important to him such as assisted living, parks and the marina.

The assisted living situation that was recently resolved by Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas is one that Carlson thinks could have been avoided.

Carlson said he thinks the issue should have been handled at the council level and never should have involved the courts, saving time and money.

The marina is especially important to Carlson, who said the current facility is rundown and tired.

"I believe we have one of the finest ports on the Great Lakes," he said.

After upgrading the beaches and Mt. McSauba, Carlson thinks it's time to concentrate on the marina.

"It's common sense to upgrade the facility to mirror our image of Charlevoix the Beautiful," he said.

He is also concerned with several infrastructure projects such as roads, water, sewer and electric.

"For the most part department heads and council have worked well together in accomplishing what we need around town," he said.

Openness in government has been an issue with Carlson in the past.

"I believe the people should always have a voice in what's going on," he said.

Carlson said there are some things that belong behind closed doors such as hiring interviews, contract negotiations and legal situations.

"If you're in a lawsuit and discussing strategy, you can't have everyone knowing what you're talking about before going to court," he said.

Along with openness in government is the issue of selective enforcement.

Carlson said he doesn't know all the facts about the Winn and Georgi issue, but he thinks people in general should have to follow the same rules.

Carlson said, however, that if someone wishes to follow legal proceedings in order to get permission for a variance in the ordinance then they have the right to do so.

He said a variance shouldn't be based on how much money someone has or who they know, but be based on the facts presented and whether or not the person fulfills the requirements for the variance.

"Rules that are there should be followed and enforced equally by all the people," he said.

Foundation announces grant deadline

Once again, it's time to put local charitable dollars to work on behalf of the community.

The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation are inviting nonprofit organizations, educational institutions and municipalities who are in need of funding to submit grant requests in support of their projects.

During the next few months, the community foundations and their Youth Advisory Committees will review grant proposals to help fund health initiatives, community development projects, education, the arts and cultural events, environmental efforts, and human service programs. The Youth Advisory Committees, which are made up of representatives from high schools throughout Charlevoix and Emmet counties will award grants to programs that serve children and teens.

Programs chosen for funding must serve residents of Emmet County or Charlevoix County, meet a demonstrated need, provide a service and/or enrich life for local residents. The deadline for grant requests is Oct. 1, 2004.

Call the community foundation in your area to discuss your proposal and request a grant application. Foundation staff are available to offer advice and assistance to organizations interested in applying for funds.

Both community foundations are grassroots charitable organizations made up of various funds and all of them established by local donors. Some funds are earmarked for specific causes, and others are open-ended to meet changing needs. The funds are held in permanent endowment, so they can continue to grow and generate income to enhance the quality of life in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, now and for generations to come. Together, the community foundations grant-making total amounts to more than $8.5 million.

For more information about the grant-making process, establishing a fund, or making a gift, please contact the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation at 616 Petoskey Street, Petoskey, MI, 49770, by phone at (231) 348-5820 or at or the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI, 49727, by phone at (231) 536-2440.

Hospital group treated to party

Entertainment was provided by country and western band, "Hard Left." Foundation staff and staff from Boyne Rehab Center prepared brats, hot dogs and chicken for those attending.

While there guests were treated to a tour of the facility with explanatory comments coming from owner, Mike Stowe. Members also had an opportunity to view the proposed plans for the expansion of Boyne Rehabilitation Center in Boyne City. Cindy Banner, physical therapist from Boyne Rehab, was on hand to answer questions and talk with those interested about the Women's Health program being offered.

"We want to see this program grow," Banner said. "What we offer for women is unique in Northern Michigan. Many physicians in Petoskey and Charlevoix were referring their special needs women patients downstate. We're now able to offer those services here in Boyne City. We just need the space to grow."

The proposed expansion will double the space at the Rehab Center, and includes a pool, gym and a community education room. The gym will be used for sports medicine and other PT services, while the community education room is intended to provide meeting space for programs on healthy diet and nutrition, diabetic education, cardiac rehab and other beneficial programs for the community.

For additional information about the planned expansion or to find out how you can help, call 547-8502.

Robys recreating original Appletree

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Part-time Charlevoix residents Steven and Anne Robys' dreams of recreating the original Apple Tree Building are taking shape on Auld Street.

Last year, the couple tried to get developers to give them the old Appletree Building located on Bridge Street in Charlevoix to put on their property on Auld Street — the developer was planning on tearing the historic building down to make room for a new three story residential/retail construction. But the whole building could not be moved to the couple's Auld Street property and they settled to taking pieces of the structure instead and they are in the process of recreating the original, smaller, building.

"It is going to be very nice for the city. I think it will be a good contribution to the city. People can be proud of it," he said.

Steven said he has been building an exact replica of the Appletree's dimensions and the original building from the 1870s since November 2003. He said the original building was modified by Charlevoix's famous architect Earl Young for his office, hence the reason it looks a little different than the building many people remember on Bridge Street.

After being used as an office for Young, the building became the site of the retail business called the Appletree for about 30 years. That business has since moved just north of its original location on Bridge Street.

"It (Roby's building) is the exact size of the original building in the 1870s. Nobody had grandiose things. It was built to suit a purpose," he said.

But, there are many familiar aspects to the building too. Steven is using the stone facade from the old Appletree and has rebuilt the Appletree's fireplace inside of the building using all of the stones from the original Earl Young fireplace.

The Robys' recreation will be used as a guest house with downstairs bedroom and artistic workroom for Anne. To add more Charlevoix flavor to the building, the Robys' said they are using as many Charlevoix crafts-people and builders that they can and once it is finished, he plans on furnishing it with artwork created by Charlevoix artists.

Steven said work should be done in about six months. At that time, he said he will also be refurbishing the couple's cottage next door using the same style as the Appletree recreation.

Construction on the Bridge Street building that will replace the former Appletree Building has begun.

Hospital Guild celebrates 50 years of service

With 50 years of fund-raising and assistance to Charlevoix Area Hospital, the Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild will host its annual membership tea from 2 to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 15, in the hospital cafeteria.

Attire from the1950s is encouraged and the celebration tea is open to everyone.

The Charlevoix Area Men's Chorus will perform at 2:30 p.m., refreshments will be provided and door prizes and prizes for the "best dressed 50's" will be awarded.

Reservations are requested by Sept. 9, to Rebecca Parker at 547-8651.

During the past 50 years Guild volunteers have donated thousands of hours to the hospital working at the information desk, filing, providing tours, knitting baby caps, working throughout the hospital, sewing Christmas stockings and toys and providing assistance in countless ways to the staff and patients of Charlevoix Area Hospital.

In that same time period, the Guild raised and donated to the hospital several hundred thousand dollars for equipment needs. In the early days, kitchens tours, home tours, fashion shows and bake sales generated income that Guild members donated to the hospital. More recently the Guild has hosted art and book sales, this year adding Geranium sales.

By far the most significant contributions from the Guild now come from the Gift Shop at the hospital, which is owned by the Guild. Volunteers buy for and staff the Gift Shop helping to raise dollars to assist with hospital expansions and purchase needed equipment and the same time providing a service for staff and hospital guests.

For more information about the Guild celebration or to find out how you can become a Guild member, call Rebecca Parker, Volunteer Coordinator at 547-8651.

St. Mary Pre-K taking students

The well-established Pre-Kindergarten program at St. Mary School in Charlevoix is adjusting the times of the current program to suit the changing needs of today's parents by extending the Pre-K hours.

Unlike many preschool programs, St. Mary Pre-K will run from 9-11:30 a.m., Monday-Friday with drop-off beginning at 8:40 a.m.

A three-day option is available for those interested. Program director, Heather Sape, will continue to provide quality education for the developing 4 and 5 year old children, who must be four years by Dec. 1.

"Some of the benefits of the five-day program are that the child is given more time to complete tasks over five days instead of the traditional three days. A five-day program also helps ease the transition into Kindergarten," said program director Heather Sape.

For the second year, St. Mary's will be offering quality child care for children ages four through eight from 11:30 a.m. - 4 p.m. with extended hours available. This program is open to the community with drop-ins available.

St. Mary School is currently accepting registrations for Pre-K through grade six for the 2004-2005 school year. For more information, or to register your child for any programs, please call the office at 547-9441.

Former resident celebrates 100 years

By B. JON GOHS
Special to the Courier

In a time when many think the world couldn't get any worse, one former Charlevoix resident realizes just how fortunate she is.

Born Aug. 24 1904 in Charlevoix, Michigan, Mary Marguerite (Margie) Swinton recently celebrated her one-hundredth birthday. And although she spent most of her life in California, her memories of Charlevoix are fond ones.

"Charlevoix was just a little place. I remember when they put cement up the bridge street hill. Before that they had planks," she said. "The first time I walked on it I was so disappointed it didn't have the clump sound when we walked on it."

According to Swinton, In early twentieth century Charlevoix there were no organized playgrounds, but that didn't stop them from having a good time.

"We lived on the Lake, it was our playground." she said.

And, she added, "I learned to swim at the early age, because if you didn't swim, somebody would push you in."

In 1924 Swinton attended the University of Michigan where she became a member of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority. In 1927 she married Gerald W. Richardson and four years later they had a son, Gerald Douglas. Then in 1933 Swinton's family moved to Wisconsin, but she didn't begin teaching until she graduated from the University of Lacrosse at Wisconsin.

"I got my degree there, but I didn't teach until the war (World War II) came along and they were short on teachers-the principal asked me if I would teach part-time," Swinton said.

After a short stint teaching in Wisconsin, the Swinton family again moved.

"Then I moved to Palm Springs (California) and taught third grade at Cathedral City. We then we moved to Newport beach and I taught in the Orange County school system," she said.

According to Swinton, when she wasn't teaching, her true love was travel. And over the years Swinton enjoyed bird watching, fishing and travel. She saw all 50 states and several countries including New Zealand, England and Scotland.

"I went to Europe by myself and I thought I'd never travel again, so I went to Switzerland, France, England and Scotland because that's where I hailed from," she said.

She added, "I loved it, but when I was in Paris I was so lonely I arranged for my son and his wife to come out, they were newlyweds, and their arrival was the highlight of Paris."

And although Europe was nice, according to Swinton her trip to Africa in 1965 was the best.

"The most sensational trip was going to Africa," she said. "I went on an animal safari in Kenya loaded into a Landover."

It seems Swinton also had a fondness for golf. And, as the best golfer in her age group, Swinton played well into her mid-90s.

"Here at leisure world we have a great course and many amateurs," she said.

"I took lessons from someone in Charlevoix, but it didn't improve my game," she added. "I liked to play, but I never wanted to work at it."

And although she doesn't travel like she used to, Swinton won't let a little thing like a century slow her down.

"I walk a little, I go places on the bus twice a week though I'm not flying around anymore, but I'm fortunate," she said.

According to Swinton, she is overwhelmed by friends and family wishing her well on her one-hundredth birthday.

"I'm flattered," she said. "I have a great many of my family here right now and the party was unbelievable. My son and his wife had it catered and they did a wonderful job."

She added, "I have a neighbor who was a graduate of Julliard and he played the piano at the party and we sang."

Aside from not getting to visit Charlevoix as often as she would like, Swinton's regrets seem to be few for someone of a hundred years.

"I've been very fortunate," she said. "I wish I realized I would have all this-I would have written it down, but I lived it."

She added, "Tell them I love them. Charlevoix will always be home to me."

Paintball guns cause problems

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating several recent reports of illegal use of paintball weapons or soft pellet pistols.

Sheriff George T. Lasater wants to stress that it is a one-year misdemeanor to shoot paintballs at a vehicle on the roadway. If a crash occurred because of this act the suspect could face a homicide charge if a person in the vehicle were to die.

The second incident took place in Charlevoix Township when residents reported seeing teens with a handgun in a vehicle. The realistic looking weapon turned out to be a pistol designed to shoot soft pellets, but investigators are concerned that in a low light situation the person displaying such a weapon could put a police officer in the position of not knowing what was being brandished.

Lasater wants citizens to be assured that all such violations will not be treated lightly and violators will be prosecuted accordingly.

Healthy cooking author to speak in county

Deanna House, well known for her "performance style meals" and entertaining programs will present three different programs on September 1 and 2, all related to healthy eating for cancer prevention.

"Low Fat Foods Aid Cancer Prevention" will be House's topic at 12:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Sept. 1 at the Jordan Valley Public Library in East Jordan. "Antioxidant Sampling" will be presented at 7 p.m. that same day in the cafeteria of Charlevoix Area Hospital, in Charlevoix and at noon on Thursday, Sept. 2 House will present "Recipes for Health & Wellness" at the Boyne Public Library in Boyne City.

Sponsored by the "Circle of Strength," cancer support and education program of the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation, House will demonstrate the preparation of recipes designed to improve and maintain a healthy lifestyle while presenting appetizing alternatives to day to day meals. Those attending the program will have the opportunity to watch the preparation of the meals, receive recipes and taste samples of the prepared items.

Tickets for the program are $5 per person, $4 for those 60 years and older or those recent participants in the "Get Moving Charlevoix County - 100 Miles in 100 Days" program. Reservations are not required, but help insure there is enough food for sampling. To reserve space, call the Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation office at 547-8502. Those unable to attend may also call the Foundation office to have copies of the recipes from all three programs mailed to them.

House is a freelance food writer appearing regularly in the Kalamazoo Gazette and The Grand Rapids Press newspapers and she is the author of four cookbooks. She is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin-Stout and has taught junior high, senior high and adult home economic classes.

Sheriff doesn't use solicitors

The Sheriff's Office receives approximately five calls a week for a business person or senior citizen in Charlevoix County who has been contacted by someone over the telephone who indicates they are soliciting for law enforcement.

They usually state the proceeds will benefit local law enforcement and many times they use the name of the local departments and the name of the Sheriff.

Your local law enforcement in Charlevoix County appreciates the fact that residents want to support their police agencies, but these telephone solicitations are, on the whole, of no benefit to your local law enforcement agency.

The Sheriff's Office supports the Michigan Sheriff's Association. All contact are made in person or by mail with a letter of introduction from Sheriff Lasater on department letterhead. In summary, a good policy to follow is to not get involved with law enforcement telephone solicitation. If you have a question, feel free to contact Sheriff George T. Lasater personally at (231) 547-4461.

Sheriff: Be safe with buses on the roads

Every day more than 20 million students nationwide use school buses to get to and from school and to ensure that our community is safe from tragedy this school year, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office recommends a number of safety precautions for both students and other drivers.

"It is very important that parents reinforce the school bus safety rules their children learn at school," Sheriff George T. Lasater said.

He also suggests that parents drive their child's bus route with them and practice the proper safety precautions at home.

Parents should teach their children the following rules of school bus safety:

- Always arrive at the bus stop early.
- Prior to boarding, wait until the bus has come to a complete stop, the door opens and the bus driver says that it's OK to board.
- Always walk on the sidewalk when preparing to cross the street near a bus. If there is not sidewalk available, walk as far away from the road as possible.
- Make eye contact with the driver so that you are sure he or she sees you.
- Never walk behind the bus.
- If you are walking alongside the bus, walk at least three giant steps away.
- Take extra care to make sure that clothing with drawstrings and book bags do not get caught in the hand rail or door.
- Never stop to pick something up that you have dropped when a bus is stopped. Wait until the bus has driven off to avoid not being seen by the driver.

Motorists

- Remember that children can be unpredictable in their actions. Take extreme care when traveling in a school zone and drive slowly.
- Slow down and prepare to stop whenever you see yellow school bus lights flashing.
- Never pass a school bus when the red lights are flashing. This is a sign that children are getting off the bus.
- If there are no sidewalks, drive cautiously. Be alert to the possibility of children walking in the road or crossing the street.
- Be aware of children playing near school bus stops.
- Learn and obey the school bus laws in your county.

For further information contact Sheriff George T. Lasater at (231) 547-4461.

Charlevoix football team falls in opener

By B. JON GOHS
Special to the Courier

The Rayders varsity football team plan to use Friday's loss to St. Ignace at Kipke field as a learning experience.

"We lost 28-18," Said Rayders Head Coach Don Jess, "We made too many mistakes. Against a good team like St. Ignace you can't afford to make mistakes."

The Rayders got on the board with a first quarter TD to show St. Ignace this wasn't going to be a cakewalk.

Quarterback Cody Crain was 17 of 26 for 303 yards and three TD's which helped keep the Rayders afloat despite throwing an interception.

It wasn't until the last six minutes of the fourth quarter, when Charlevoix fumbled a punt return putting St. Ignace on the offensive drive, that the Rayders were in trouble.

Despite the games outcome, the Charlevoix defense, lead by Even Keller, kept St. Ignace in check.

"The defense played pretty well for us last night," Jess said of Friday's game.

Rayders offense also looked strong as evidenced by reeeiver Ben Bergman who lead scoring and offense with 13 receptions over 247 yards for two touchdowns. Mitchell Klooster caught three passes over 46 yards to score one touchdown.

Running back Russell Williams had 11 carries for 70 yards.

According to Jess, the best thing to do after a loss is to stay on track.

"We'll continue to throw the ball and we're going to stick to the same game plan," he said. "We just can't turn the ball over."

He added, "We're going to have a good weck of practice"

In keeping on track, the day after Charlevoix's loss, Jess headed to Benzie Central to exchange game tapes.

Jess said, "The kids get to see them (game tapes) and we get to learn some things about the next game."

. Last year's loss to Benzie by two points has Jess prepared for a tough game.

"We're going to have to play good defense and limit the mental mistakes," he said.

But, all in all, Coach Jess has high hopes for this season.

Council race to feature heated contests

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

ELECTION 2004

Voters will head to the polls on Nov. 2 to decide who they want representing them on city council.

Three incumbents are running against three competitors, some who have sat on council before.

In the first ward, incumbent Bill Haggard is running against Rebecca Doan, who is new to the political scene.

Both Haggard and Doan could not be reached after repeated attempts to contact them. A follow up story on the two will be published later.

For the second ward, incumbent Karen I. Campbell is running against former mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, who was unable to be reached after repeated attempts to contact him. His campaign story will be published once he is contacted.

Campbell, 61, has lived in Charlevoix for 45 years and has been involved on council for the past two years.

She was actively involved with issues concerning the parks and beaches along with being on the cemetery board. When her children were in school she volunteered her time for the school.

Campbell is seeking re-election because there are some issues currently underway that she'd like to see through.

She hasn't thought about a platform yet; but issues important to her concern the city parks and the marina.

"I would rather leave the park alone as is," she said.

The marina should be redone, she said, but left as it currently is. She said the docks need to be redone, but should be left in the water where they are now.

The city cemetery is one place Campbell would like to see some action taken. She said the cemetery board hasn't done anything since forming and she'd like to see an interest taken in preserving the cemetery.

Campbell also supports Charlevoix youth. She said the youth need a place to go where they won't be kicked out. She said she has seen children and teenagers get kicked out of East Park for playing hacky sack.

That is why the future of the skatepark is something Campbell would like to see through.

"It's important for kids," she said. "It gives them something to do."

Another issue important to Campbell is openness in government.

"I think the council should be informed on everything that's going on," she said.

Throughout the year, Campbell said she's seen an increase in the number of people that attend city council meetings. However, she'd like to see more.

"I wish more people would come to them (council meetings) and express their opinions and thoughts and what not," she said.

In the third ward, incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. will be fighting for his seat against political newcomer, Dave Scott.

Chamberlain, 54, has worked in Charlevoix since 1969, but has been a full-time resident since the fall of 1972. He is co-owner of the surveying company Ferguson and Chamberlain.

His political involvement includes working on the Marion Township Planning and Zoning Board for about eight years, which he served as chairman midway through his term. He also worked on the city of Charlevoix's Planning Commission for four years and was appointed to city council in 2000 to finish out a former councilman's term. He has since served on council for four years.

Chamberlain is seeking re-election because he wants to be a part of planning Charlevoix's future.

"Putting together the master plan attracted me the most," he said.

Chamberlain said the previous plan formed in 1982 is fantastic because some of the things planned then are actually issues facing the city today. He also finds the plan important knowledge for a council member to have.

"I think it should be mandatory reading for every councilman and city planner," he said.

Chamberlain is also seeking re-election because he said he is capable of making tough financial decisions the city will face in the future.

Due to state budget problems, Chamberlain said the city will receive less money and will then need to look into what is important in order to avoid putting a burden on the taxpayers.

"We need to look at what kind of levels of service we want for this community so we can live within our budget without raising the millage," he said.

Chamberlain's platform includes fiscal responsibility for the city and objectiveness for council members.

He said council members should hear both sides of the argument before they make their decision instead of coming to a meeting ready to vote.

The issue of openness in government is something Chamberlain thinks is working as is.

"Well, I think the current way it's set up now is fine," he said.

Chamberlain said it's better to discuss issues such as real estate negotiations and lawsuits behind closed doors. Decisions, however, are made in public.

Chamberlain said people typically leave once council goes into closed session and as a result aren't there to hear the decision, which is made in public.

One solution, he said, is to tell people to hang around until council comes out of closed session to witness the decision.

Chamberlain said there should be no secrets kept from the public.

Scott, 45, said he is running for council because he is looking for a reason to get involved in the community and to help correct some minor problems. He is the owner of Michigan Talk Radio Network.

Scott became involved in politics when his filed complaint was never responded to. He then started going to city council meetings last May and hasn't missed but one meeting since.

"I found some issues that were problematic that have motivated me to get involved," he said.

He has lived on and off in the Charlevoix and Petoskey area for the past 10 years, but has been in Charlevoix recently for four years. He has never run for office before or held any political position, but has been involved in community affairs in Petoskey.

An issue very important to Scott is to have fair government.

"It's very important the city no longer hands out no-bid contracts," he said.

Scott said the rules don't seem to apply equally to everyone in Charlevoix and he'd like to see that changed because it's a great community.

Scott said City Manager Michael Wiesner violated city ordinance by not putting the airport contract out for bids. He said the city ordinance states that any contract for goods and services over $20,000 needs to be put out for bidding.

"I believe we never, ever should have the city manager sit down behind the closed door of his office and negotiate a contract when the city charter and Charlevoix law requires a bid," he said.

Scott said he was at the city council meeting when other vendors came and pleaded to council to let them bid on the airport contract, which went to Island Airways.

"Our city government is not open enough and it needs to be more open," he said.

Scott said he wants to represent the third ward with a fresh voice and to actually be there for them. He said Chamberlain has abstained 14 times since January 2003, which lessens his representation of the people because their voice isn't heard.

Another issue important to Scott is to stop wasteful spending.

"We need to make sure we're being careful about the money we spend to protect the services we have," he said.

He said Wiesner has warned the council to be prepared for revenue shortfalls due to budget problems with the state, which Scott said he is prepared to deal with.

"We have to be prudent about the way we're spending money," he said. "We need to know where every penny is going."

He would also like to bring new businesses to town and create new jobs to keep younger people in the area.

AAA gives safety tips during school hours

Between 3 and 6 p.m. - pick-up time at most schools and day-care centers - is the most dangerous time of day for children under 13 years of age, according to the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS).

That's when the most children are killed by motor vehicles.

Drop-off time - between 6 and 9 a.m. - accounts for 11 percent of child motor vehicle deaths. Taken together, the time periods when children are either coming from or going to school or day-care account for more than one-third of all child vehicle deaths. As the school year begins, AAA's annual "School Open" campaign reminds motorists to use caution in school zones and residential areas, where pedestrians, bicyclists and other motor vehicles, including school buses, operate during drop-off and pick-up times.

"Motor vehicles remain the number one cause of death for children ages 2-14," said Richard J. Miller, AAA Michigan Community Safety Services manager. "Loading and unloading children from school buses and passenger cars requires careful attention and deliberate action."

During 2002, the last year for which data is available, 88 children under age 16 lost their lives in traffic crashes in Michigan, and 9,269 were injured. Restraint use in Michigan is lowest for children ages 11-15 (74.3 percent).

In its "School's Open" campaign, AAA emphasizes that driving carefully begins with focusing on basic traffic safety practices, such as the proper use of seat belts, child safety seats and booster seats.

"It's vitally important that all children age 12 and under be properly restrained in the back set," said Miller. "Caregivers often don't realize they need to alter the type of child safety seat as children grow, which means that booster seats are underutilized or used incorrectly. Typically, children between the ages of four and eight are candidates for booster seats."

Miller urges motorists to follow these safety tips:

- Slow down in or near school and residential areas
- Drive with your headlights on - even during the day - so children and others can see you.
- Look for clues such as school safety patrols, adult crossing guards, bicycles and playgrounds, that indicate children may be in the area.
- Scan ahead between parked cars and other objects for signs that children could dart into the road.
- Practice extra caution in bad weather.
- Always stop for school busses that are loading or unloading students when red lights are flashing (unless you are driving in the opposite direction on a divided highway).
- When using a booster seat, always use the shoulder harness. Don't tuck it behind the child's back. Make sure the lap belt fits low and tight across the lap/upper thigh area and the shoulder belt fits snug crossing the chest and shoulder to avoid abdominal injuries.

Arts center to host Hayes documentary

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have a showing of the documentary, "Beyond the Gridiron," at 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 24.

Petoskey film producer, David Crouse, has teamed up with Chip Duncan of Duncan Entertainment to produce a new one hour public television documentary "Beyond the Gridiron: The Life and Times of Woody Hayes." The documentary is being distributed by NETA and will air on PBS affiliates nationwide this fall.

This is the first in-depth television biography ever produced on Woody Hayes. CMU Public Television will air the documentary at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 26 and will rebroadcast it at 10 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 28 (CMU Public Television airs in Petoskey on Channel 6).

Considered one of the greatest football coaches of the twentieth century, Hayes was a study in contrast. Hard-nosed, demanding, often ill tempered on the sidelines; Hayes was genuinely concerned about the young men in his care. He was a mentor. Many players attribute their present success in life to Hayes' strong influence.

Woody Hayes enjoyed a long and acclaimed career as the head football coach of the Ohio State University Buckeyes. This biographical account provides an in-depth look at Hayes' life on and off the field, as well as the times by which Woody Hayes was influenced.

The show features interviews with current Ohio State University head football coach Jim Tressel, golfing legend and Ohio State University alumnus Jack Nicklaus, two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin of Ohio State, and former players Greg Lashutka, Rex Kern, Daryl Sanders and Alan Natali author of Woody's Boys.

Also interviewed was former Michigan head football coach Bo Schembechler. Schembechler played for Woody at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio and then became an assistant coach for Hayes first at Miami of Ohio then at Ohio State. When Schembechler was named head football coach at Michigan in 1969 it began what many would call the greatest rivalry in college football.

Hayes and Schembechler bounced back and forth in a series of games that would determine national champions and Rose Bowl appearances. Four times during the first six years of their rivalry, both teams were ranked in the nation's top five when they met. While fierce competitors on the field they were very close friends off the field.

For more information please visit www.CrouseEntertainment.com.

Following the film, David Crouse will host a meet and greet to discuss his experiences with filming the documentary. There is no charge for this event.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located in downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. For more information, contact the arts center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

ate at the temporary location."

City Hall was originally scheduled for opening on Sept. 10, but was moved back one week because of delays in transferring phones and computer networking systems.

City officials will start work in their former home on Sept. 20, which is also the day of the first city council meeting in council's chambers.

Council member Bill Bellows said he has been looking forward to moving back into the council's chambers for some time.

"Yes, it certainly will be nice to have a better location for our meetings," he said.

Mayor Gabe Campbell said he thinks the new facility will be a lot more efficient than the way it was before.

"I think the people will be able to hear better," he said. "I'm happy."

The next step is to move the police and fire departments out of the building and into the temporary location at the old Post Office building.

Wiesner said he's not sure when the departments will move and won't know until late September. However, he said the contractor is responsible for coordinating the move.

> "We think it's a very quality building that will last for years."

Traffic on Bridge Street

Over 20,000 people afoot cross bridge, besides 3,172 autos and other conveyances.

The question has often been asked by both summer people and year-round residents if there was any way of knowing the amount of traffic passing over the swing bridge during twenty-four hours. Up to the present time one could make a guess in regard to the matter and could but use their imagination as to the number.

On Thursday, August 6th, Street Commissioner E.B. Ward and other men in the employment of the city took an accurate count of the number of bicycles horse-drawn vehicles, automobiles and people afoot passing to and fro across the bridge from 7:00 a.m. Thursday to 7:00 a.m. Friday, and the figures they produce are most astonishing.

Number of bicycles - 846.

Number of horse-draw vehicles - 1,075.

Number of automobiles - 1,251.

Number of people afoot - 20,218.

These figures show the actual traffic on the bridge during a period of twenty-four hours. It does not mean in any sense of the word that this number of individuals crossed the bridge but once but covers the actual number and times persons, rigs and automobiles made the trip across the bridge. It also gives one an idea of the wear not only to the bridge itself but the entire street running both ways from the bridge.

It has been known that the traffic on the streets of Charlevoix was heavy during the summer season, but the figures above show the volume of travel away beyond all estimates made.

There have been many days when the amount of travel on Bridge Street went beyond these figures, while at other times it will fall short. At a later date the count will be again be taken, showing the comparison between the two days.

Exploding tanks rattle windows

Saturday evening last, at about eight-fifteen o'clock, the fire alarm sounded for one of the most disastrous conflagrations that this city has seen in years.

The driver of a gasoline truck, belonging to Brown & Wallace, was filling his truck at the company's storage station, near the old sugar factory on the Pere Marquette tracks, when he discovered the top of his truck tank afire. He barely managed to escape the rapidly spreading flames, which completely destroyed the truck and spread to the two big storage tanks, which exploded with a concussion that shook windows within a radius of a half-mile and brought startled residents of the town to their doors and windows.

The fire department responded promptly, as usual, and in their wake came hundreds of speeding cars, strung out along the roads leading south of town like a procession of huge fireflies. By the time the fire apparatus reached the scene, the flames and a vast, spreading mushroom of black smoke hung over the doomed station and all that the firemen could do was to keep the two loaded tank cars of the Sinclair Company, that stood on the tracks directly in front of the storage tanks and subjected to the full heat of the blaze, wet down as much as possible. So well did they do their work that the piles of stacked lumber, flanking the burning tanks, were barely singed. After the hose lines were connected and a stream paying on the flames, the firemen, with the help of bystanders, moved the heavy tank cars along the track to the north and out of the reach of the fire.

The coal shed, owned by Harry Widdifield, which stood just to the south of the oil station, caught fire early in the evening and soon burned to the ground. Fortunately, it was empty and the loss was confined to the building, itself. The sheds of Heise & Yettaw, on the north side of the station, were kept wet down and remained unharmed, probably due to the fortunate fact that a strong west wind was blowing, driving the flames and smoke lakeward.

Crowds of people lined the bluff above the tracks and many ventured onto the flats, close to the scene as the fierce heat of the blazing oil permitted. The resort special, northbound, was forced to halt for an hour, until the flames had somewhat subsided, and the passengers, piling out of the cars, joined the spectators from town.

The tanks that were destroyed were of 12,000 and 10,000 gallon capacity, respectively and the wrecked truck held 300 gallons in her tank. The owners estimate that 3,000 gallons of kerosene and from 10,000 to 11,000 gallons of gasoline were consumed in the disaster, and, figuring the cost of equipment, electric pump, fittings and tank truck, as well as the hindrance to business at this time of year, place their loss at $6,000.00 No insurance was held on the station.

The driver of the burned truck can advance no theory as to the cause of the fire. He used an electric flashlight in working about the tanks and claims that his engine was not running at the time the tank valves were open. It, therefore, remains a mystery.

William Wallace, of the oil firm, left Tuesday morning for Chicago, where he will purchase two new storage tanks and other necessary equipment, which will be shipped at once, so that there will be no interruption of the company's business here. They certainly have the sympathy of all who watched so much of their summer's hard work vanish into smoke.

Mrs. Jennie E. Hampton selling valuable property

Lots in the well-known Crouter addition on the North side, now owned by Jennie E. Hampton of Ann Arbor, and recognized as the most desirable resort property in Charlevoix, will be sold to the highest bidder at public sale on Saturday, July 26th, on the grounds, commencing at 2:00 p.m. Music will be furnished by the Ellsworth band.

Crouter's addition is laid out along the Lake Michigan waterfront and already contains many valuable summer homes, some costing as high as $20,000. The lots are good size, with 50 foot frontage and varying in depth from 130 to 175 feet. They were assessed from $100 to $1,500 each. The streets are laid out and developed.

The lots unsold are so located that two or more may be purchased by one person, so as to make a large ground if desired. The soil is rich and heavy, capable of making a lawn in one season.

The reasons for this sale are that the owner no longer lives in Charlevoix and is unable to handle this property and dispose of it by correspondence. She prefers to make a sacrifice rather than attempt to develop the property or sell it through an agent. All lots will be sold with no reservations. A recorded plat may be seen or copy furnished on application to owner.

A clear and absolute title by warranty deed with abstract of title will be furnished to each purchaser.

At the close of the sale, numbers corresponding to the plat numbers of the lots sold will be drawn and someone will receive a lot for the sum of one dollar.

Saltonstalls question future use of building

LIBRARY

poses.

The Clinton Street library was built with funds that came from the sale of the Andrew Carnegie Library and help from local groups throughout the community, Saltonstall said. The Saltonstall family donated the land for the current library.

Saltonstall said this is why money from the sale of the Clinton Street facility should go toward the new facility. She also thinks it's ridiculous to turn the building into administrative offices.

"I don't think the school has a right to that money," she said.

Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent John Sturock said the school board wants to use the building as the administrative central office.

"The replacement of this office has been on the agenda a long, long time," he said.

The current central office has been in use for about 20 years and Sturock said it was intended as a temporary facility.

Sturock said the land will still be used for educational purposes if the building becomes administrative offices.

The argument about who owns the building goes back to 1994 when Proposal A was passed in Michigan. Proposal A mandated that public libraries should be their own entity and not operate under the control of school boards. The law also stated that libraries should have their own boards.

Charlevoix established a library board and began collecting .5 mill for operating expenses.

At that time the school district owned the Clinton Street library. Sturock said a school district can't by law give away its assets because the building belongs to the community.

With a need to follow Proposal A, in 1997 the school district deeded the building to the library for $1. With the deed, however, came a reverter clause that states the school district will regain ownership of the building once it is no longer used as a library.

Sturock said in 2000 it was realized that the quitclaim deed was never officially filed with the Charlevoix County Clerk leaving the library without ownership of the building. The situation was corrected and another quitclaim deed was filed.

Recently, Sturock said he discovered that the reverter clause was inadvertently left out of the current deed. The library's attorney and the school district's attorney both agreed the clause must be added to the document.

But, Saltonstall said there is a restriction on the deed stating that if the library is no longer used for educational purposes, ownership reverts back to her and her sister, Wendy Saltonstall Post.

However, Saltonstall said she and her sister will remove that restriction only if proceeds from the sale of the Clinton Street library go toward the new library. She said they will not remove the restriction if the school district regains ownership of the library.

Charlevoix Public Library Director Valerie Meyerson said at this point the library board isn't concerned with the current location.

"Right now it's not really an issue for us until we move," she said. "The issue is really doing what's fair for the taxpayers."

Meyerson said the library board is focused on closing the bond sale and then progressing toward purchasing the property of the future location.

After all that is set in place, Meyerson said the board will look into the fate of the Clinton Street library.

"We're not going to rush into anything," she said. "It'll straighten out in time."

Check to contractor could cost city

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The city of Charlevoix is trying to keep from paying a bill over $200,000 that may have been caused by a "mistakenly written" check.

According to Charlevoix Mayor Gabe Campbell, the issue started when Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi wrote a check for $222,978.36 in April 2004 to the construction firm that worked on the 2001 Belvedere Avenue and Michigan Avenue's repaving projects, CCMS Associates, Inc. However, Brandi wrote the check to just the construction firm and did not include the firm's insurance provider, United Fire and Casualty Company.

What happened then was CCMS Associates cashed the check, but did not pay the subcontractors for their work on the project. This forced the insurance company, United Fire, to pay the subcontractor. And now, United

Mayor may push for changes

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The issue of a check that may cost the city over $200,000 has at least one city council member and the mayor upset, saying a mistake made by city officials may end up costing the taxpayers.

A check was written by City Treasurer Rick Brandi in April 2004 to the contractor hired for the 2001 repaving of Belvedere Avenue and Michigan Avenue for around $222,000. However, the contractor did not use the check to pay off the subcontractors on the project, forcing the contractor's insurance company to foot the bill.

Because of this, the insurance company, United Fire and Casualty Com-

Braun shoots 100 holes for local Junior Golf program

Playing 100 holes of golf in one day did take just about as long as he expected, but, Steve Braun, teaching Professional from Charlevoix's Belvedere Golf Club, was surprised that he was able to play his 5 rounds of 18 holes with such consistency.

Starting at 6:35 a.m., Braun finished his 100 holes at 5:30 p.m. He expressed his gratitude to cart drivers and helpers: Rosemary Corradi, Mary Bradley, Bob Hoffman, Barry Pierce, Marsha Braun and Dean Davenport, for their help. He also expressed his gratitude to the many supporters that pledged financial support for his golf playing project.

Braun has been a teaching pro in the Charlevoix area for several years; first at Dunmaglas and most recently at the Belvedere Club.

Prior to his stay in Charlevoix, he was a pro in the Flint area and was associated with that community's Junior Golf Program, which won the Golf Digest's award as National Community Program of the year. He is also one of the area pros that has volunteered time to teach the highly acclaimed Charlevoix Junior Golf Program.

Money raised will help purchase more loaner clubs and provide scholarships to deserving area youngsters that are awarded grants to attend the week long golf academy at Ferris State University.

Be safe around buses this year

EDITORIAL

School is in session in Charlevoix County, meaning those familiar buses will be on the road.

Now is the time for us to rehash some basic safety rules for those buses, with tips from Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater.

The number one rule is for drivers to remember that these buses carry children and when they stop, it is to either pick up children waiting at the side of the road or to drop off children. This means it is very dangerous and very illegal for you to pass a stopped bus — with red blinking lights showing — with your vehicle. It does not matter how late you are for work or any other excuse you have; if you hit a child because of this selfish behavior the full weight of the law will be brought down upon you, as it should.

Lasater has these simple rules for motorists when they are approaching a stopped bus or children waiting for a bus.

- Remember that children can be unpredictable in their actions. Take extreme care when traveling in a school zone and drive slowly.
- Slow down and prepare to stop whenever you see yellow school bus lights flashing.
- If there are no sidewalks, drive cautiously. Be alert to the possibility of children walking in the road or crossing the street.

Lasater also has tips for parents of children at bus stops. He suggests that parents drive their child's bus route with them and practice the proper safety precautions at home, such as:

- Always arrive at the bus stop early.
- Prior to boarding, wait until the bus has come to a complete stop, the door opens and the bus driver says that it's OK to board.
- Always walk on the sidewalk when preparing to cross the street near a bus. If there is no sidewalk available, walk as far away from the road as possible.
- Make eye contact with the driver so that you are sure he or she sees you.
- Never walk behind the bus.
- If you are walking alongside the bus, walk at least three giant steps away.
- Take extra care to make sure that clothing with drawstrings and book bags do not get caught in the hand rail or door.
- Never stop to pick something up that you have dropped when a bus is stopped. Wait until the bus has driven off to avoid not being seen by the driver.

Let's make this a safe school season.

Expert advice needed when hunting for fall mushrooms

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

With the coming of fall, mushrooms begin to pop up all over. We are usually aware only of the fruiting structures that are produced annually.

For most of our growing season the fungi have lived invisibly underground as microscopic fibers engaged in the decomposition of almost anything plant or animal that falls to the earth and remains moist.

The mushrooms emerging in your lawn are much like the apples on a tree, if we imagine that the whole tree is growing out of sight underground.

The morel, one of the few spring mushrooms, is not closely related to those that we see in the fall. It is one of the few that most people are willing to pick from the wild and use as food.

In general, we are likely to be suspicious of wild-gathered mushrooms. While the fall varieties may be even more delicious than morels, most of us have been taught from childhood that they are "toadstools" and are probably poisonous.

There is a Latin saying, which translated is, "If you awaken in the morning after an evening meal of wild mushrooms, you know they were good ones."

Short of being able to identify any mushroom with certainty, that is the only test available. There are NO simple rules that can distinguish poisonous mushrooms from the edible and delicious kind.

An Herbal (a listing of plants and their uses) from the sixteenth century had this to say: "Fungi ben mussherons. They be cold and moyst in the thyrde degree and that is shewed hy theyr violent moisture. There be two maners of them, one maner be deedly and sleeth them that eateth of them, and he called tode stooles, and the other dooth not."

Tode in that sentence is not about little hopping things, tode is a German word for death.

If you remain adventurous after that description, look to one of the good guides to mushrooms. Alexander Smith, a long time member of the faculty at the University of Michigan, produced "The Mushroom Hunter's Field Guide" some years ago.

More recently a fine book titled "Mushrooms Demystified" by David Arora provides more information than you may need in your search for mushroom identity.

This last one is the finest book on North American mushrooms that I have ever seen. Many shorter and less technical manuals and guides can also be useful. Most have color photographs and enough information to make it safe to eat at least a few of the common wild kinds to be found at this season.

Nutritionally most of our fall mushrooms have enough protein content to recommend them as food. They even have vitamins. Overall, they are about as nutritious pound for pound as watermelon or most vegetables.

If you wish to feast on wild mushrooms, the best advice of all is to find someone who really knows mushrooms and go collecting with them. Then enjoy a meal together. Anyone willing to eat what they collect is probably a good choice as a source of information.

Even if you choose not to eat any of them, the fall mushrooms can be a source of aesthetic delight. They come in a truly marvelous array of colors, textures, shapes and sizes. David Arora's book lists more than two thousand kinds, and they are all fascinating, whether eaten or just observed.

Letter response

Editor:

I am writing to you in regard to a Letter to the Editor in Sept. 1 (last week's issue), Stating "Would the people who support the Bush/Cheney ticket please volunteer to go to Iraq and if you are unable or unwilling to fulfill this moral commitment, please choose one of your children or grandchildren to go in your place."

I think this statement is disturbing and I believe that attitudes like that have not made us the country we are today.

I have been in the military for over four years and I wouldn't expect a person with an attitude like that to protect our freedom.

Instead of using your energy spreading negative statements, try using it to support the men and women overseas and homeland who do choose to protect the country we live in.

Vote out Campbell

Editor:

Mayor Gabe Campbell falsely accuses me of receiving special treatment regarding the planting of trees and shrubs on my Belvedere Avenue property.

The truth is, on Sept. 6, 1994 the City Council voted to approve my site plan which very specifically included the trees and cedar hedge that he now cites as an example of selective enforcement.

We received no variances in the building and landscaping of our home because we did so within the confines of all city rules and regulations and we needed none.

Campbell knows this full well as he was a city council member at the time. Prior to the council's approval, the planning commission voted unanimously to send it to the city council, and they in turn all voted to approve except Campbell.

City Attorney Jim Young warned Campbell at the time that if you turn an applicant down for a project, you must give them the specific reason allowing them the opportunity to correct any deficiencies.

Campbell's comment was, "I don't have a reason, I just don't like it."

I let it go at the time because the plan passed without his blessing.

During a June 2004 city council meeting, the mayor requested that City Planner Gerry Harsch relook at my site plan approval and compare it to the ordinance to see if there was any "wiggle" room for him to use.

In a July 15, 2004, memo from Harsch to City Manager Michael Wiesner, Harsch verifies that what we did is what was on the site plan and was approved by the city council. In his opinion, everything is within the homeowner's rights.

Mayor Campbell has seen this memo, but in spite of it, continues to personally attack my integrity.

This entire issue began in 1999 when a resident on Hurlbut Street complained that if we were allowed to build our proposed home, it would block her view of the lake.

There is absolutely nothing in our city zoning ordinance that guarantees a non-lakefront property owner a view of the lake.

She had no view of the lake long before we bought the property.

For many years she looked at Bellinger Marine storage buildings and large, mature trees on the south side of Belvedere Avenue.

Then Bellinger Marine and its storage buildings were removed, and the city re-did Belvedere Avenue and cut all the trees down between Bridge and May streets.

She simply got used to her new view of the lake while half of the property stood empty until building began.

Now she is complaining about my trees and hedge. The trees are not even as tall as the house, and the only thing my hedge is blocking is her view looking directly into my house. I thought trees were a good thing, in fact, do we not still have a "Tree City, USA" designation?

One of the things I love about driving down Park Avenue and Dixon Street and other streets in Charlevoix is the tunnel of trees. That is what we once had on Belvedere Avenue before they were removed.

Perhaps the mayor should be more concerned with conducting himself as an elected official as opposed to a dictator. He wasted thousands of dollars in legal fees in an attempt to remove planning commissioners.

We as taxpayers not only had to pay legal fees to defend his actions, but we also had to pay the legal fees for the defendants, all of whom were later reinstated for the remainder of their terms by the mayor.

The assisted living issue was even worse. That cost the taxpayers thousands of dollars and he was warned long before this went all the way through a trial that in all probability the city would lose, and we did.

In both cases the costs didn't matter. It was simply what the mayor wanted or did not want.

I ask myself, is this mayor truly a coalition builder? Is he trying to get important things done in an effort to make this an even better community in which to live?

I think not, and will be telling him so in November when I go to the polls to vote.

The swing voter

Editor:

The independent voter is faced, on one side, with George W. and HIS self-righteous backers. They believe the Bible (which Bible?) is more important than the Constitution.

On the other side, we have Kerry and HIS self-righteous supporters. They believe the problems in our country can be solved by throwing money at them — other people's money.

Neither offer a path down the middle where reasonable discussion could lead to logical problem solving and recognition that we are a country of diverse peoples.

Arts center to have shopping scramble

Golf outings are a dime a dozen, that's why organizers from the Crooked Tree Arts Center in conjunction with Downtown Petoskey and the Village at Bay Harbor have decided to create an outing of a different nature: the first ever Downtown Petoskey-Bay Harbor Shopping Scramble.

Shoppers will be able to test their skills on two shopping courses on Saturday Oct. 2, 2004. Proceeds from the event will benefit the Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Shoppers will gather at the arts center in the morning to enjoy coffee and breakfast treats. From there, they will head out to shop the front nine in downtown Petoskey. Each foursome will be encouraged to visit at least nine businesses before they break for lunch at Whitecaps Restaurant. Following lunch, the shoppers will head to Bay Harbor to shop the back nine.

After visiting at least nine businesses there, they will end the day at the Nineteenth Hole Party at Latitude Restaurant with great food, goodie bags and lots of prizes.

Some businesses will plan to donate a portion of their proceeds from the event to the Crooked Tree Arts Center or other local charities.

The cost to participate will be $50 per person or $200 per foursome. The cost includes breakfast, lunch at Whitecaps, hors d'oeuvres and special gifts. Registration for the event is now open and the deadline is Sept. 30. To register, call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

There are several men and women from Charlevoix currently serving in the military overseas. There are also some who have returned home from the front lines and others set for deployment.

Here are the brave men and women who are defending their country by simply doing their job: Scott Campbell, Troy Drebenstedt, Waylon Gross, Dawson Matter, Country J. Middleton, Elizabeth Powers, Jeff Riley, Sean Roberts and Gerald Zeitler.

Those who have returned home from the service are Mary Selph and Dan Bennett.

High tech incentive

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy Charter School is bringing back an old program to inspire new students.

The Student Technology and Arts Resources (STAR) program is a $500 scholarship that enables students to purchase needed items such as musical instruments and computers, Jonathan Winkjer, Northwest Academy administrator, said.

"We thought it was a good thing because it shows who we are and what our philosophy is," he said.

The scholarship is open to all new students automatically. Winkjer said returning students can enjoy the program only if they recruit a new student, and have to do so each year to remain in the program throughout their educational careers.

Students don't need to apply, but have to meet certain requirements. In order to remain in the program students must maintain a grade of a "C" or better in every class. Discipline is another factor, which requires students to stay out of trouble. Winkjer said this combination gives students a lesson in responsibility.

"It's money we could be giving ourselves a raise with," he said.

STAR proved to be very successful three years ago when it was started, but didn't last when a decision was made to not continue the program, Winkjer said.

"I think it's a shame it ever stopped in the first place," he said.

The items purchased for the students are theirs to keep forever and have no ties to the school.

"If that doesn't show the commitment, nothing will," he said.

Charles Maxwell Novak: April 30, 1911 - Sept. 2, 2004

Charles Maxwell Novak, 93, of Charlevoix passed away on Thursday, Sept. 2, 2004 at Grandvue Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

Charles Maxwell Novak

Max was born on April 30, 1911 in Charlevoix, the eldest son of Charles Michael and Margaret (MacKenzie) Novak. He graduated from Charlevoix Public Schools in 1929 where he had been an excellent athlete participating in varsity football and basketball.

Max attended Alma College and earned his bachelor's in 1934. He earned his master's from the University of Michigan in education administration and earned a second master's in guidance and counseling from Michigan State University.

Max taught and coached in Ellsworth and Pellston for a year and Remus for five years. While there, he met Frances Jeannette Boer of Jenison who was also teaching in Remus.

Max and Frances were married in Zeeland on Nov. 2, 1940. They moved to Charlevoix in 1941 and Max began his teaching career with the Charlevoix Public Schools.

He enlisted in the U.S. Navy during World War II as a Lieutenant J.G., serving in the North Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, and in the Mediterranean Sea. Max received an honorable discharge as a Lieutenant Commander.

After the war he returned to Charlevoix to continue his career as a teacher and principal. He retired in 1973 after 31 years in the Charlevoix Public Schools. Max was elected to the Charlevoix School Board, serving as president for 18 years. He also owned and operated Novak's Insurance Agency for 20 years.

Max was active in the American Legion, serving on the board of directors for Boys' State for many years. He also served on the Charlevoix Area Hospital Board for 37 years.

Max was a member and delegate to the National Education Association. He was elected to the Board of Directors for the Michigan Education Association. Gov. George Romney appointed him to the Michigan Public School Employees' Retirement Board.

He was a founding member of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and a member of both the Veterans of Foreign Wars and the First Congregational Church.

Max was an avid supporter of the Charlevoix Public Schools and the Rayder athletic teams. He was a coach and sponsor of five city softball teams. He was honored by the city and schools for his dedication to the youth of Charlevoix with the naming of the Max Novak Athletic Building on Sept. 18, 1993.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Frances in 1976, his brother, William Novak in 1997 and his sister, Marie Webb in 2002.

Max is survived by his children: Marilyn Novak of Charlevoix; Jeanette Novak of Damascus, Md.; Nancy (Frank) Letherby of Grand Rapids; Charles Novak of Rockford; and Carl (Kathy) Novak of Tecumseh; and his granddaughters Rachel and Kayla Novak of Tecumseh. Other relatives include Shirley Van Neuren of Jenison, Tom Novak of Monterey, Calif., Barbara (Bob) Woodrow of Kalamazoo, Tom (Jan) Webb of Petoskey, Louis (Betty) McKenzie and Maxine (George) Plumm of Charlevoix and Marian (Bob) Heacock of Mountain Brock, Ala.

The family wishes to express its deepest appreciation to the Grandvue Medical Care Facility staff for the excellent care given to Max in such a warm and compassionate way. We also are grateful to Dr. Craig Wendt and to the rehabilitative staff at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Eleanor Francis Marshall, while surrounded by her loving family, relinquished her spirit to the Lord on Sunday, Aug. 29, 2004, joining the only true love of her life, husband James "Bun" Marshall, who died nearly 19 years ago.

Also preceding her in death were her parents, Charles and Marcella (Wolford) Sommer; her mother-in-law, Frances Marshall; two brothers, Allen and Raymond; in-laws, Lester Orr, Maxine Sommer, Olga Sommer, George Marshall; and a grandson, David Spencley.

She is survived by three children, twin daughters, Sharlene (Gary) Spencley, Darlene (Michael) Borths all of Charlevoix, one son, Jim (Bonnie) Marshall of Kingsley; and 19 grandchildren, Scott, Melanie (Nancy), Dean (Patti), Jamey, Darsi, Lynn, (Joe), Paul, Shandra, Marci, Staci, J.B. (Katie), Jennifer (Jeff) and Joe (Michelle); 17 great-grandchildren, Keeton, Kolby, Jamen, Curt (Carmie), Tara (Waylon) Sasha, Shauna, Cortney, Melisa, KeNen, Cameron, Cooper, Klayton, Tekoa and Elijah.

She is also survived by one sister, Bernice Orr, of Petoskey; and one brother, Jay Sommer, of Charlevoix; very special in-laws, Margaret Sommer of Midland, Jean and Madonna (Marshall) Krueger of Redford and Mary Marshall of Brighton; several nieces and nephews very dear to her heart; and her very dearest lifelong friend, Jane Martin.

Eleanor was born Sept. 2, 1918, the daughter of Charles and Marcella (Wolford) Sommer. She lived in Mackinaw City her entire life until moving to Charlevoix in 1985. She graduated from Mackinaw City Public Schools in 1939 as valedictorian of her class. For the past three years, she had been a resident of the Grandvue Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

She was an active member of the Mackinaw City Women's Club for years, very involved in school functions, a member of St. Anthony's Catholic Church and of the Altar Society. She worked for many years at the Desy Gift Shops, the Dime Store and lastly for Heilman's fudge shops, all in Mackinaw City.

Eleanor was an extraordinary grandmother, and her happiest days were surrounded by her children and grandchildren. She was a fabulous cook, especially of time honored family recipes. Her brave indomitable spirit will be long remembered by the many people she loved and touched.

The family would like to thank the staff at Grandvue in East Jordan for the tender love and compassion given to her.

In lieu of flowers, contributions can be made in her honor to the Alzheimer's unit of Grandvue.

Visitation will be held 5-8 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 31, at St. Anthony's Church in Mackinaw City, with a memorial service at 7 p.m. A funeral Mass will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 1. A luncheon will immediately follow. There will be no graveside service.

The Nordman Funeral Home in Cheboygan is handling arrangements.

Board Eligible in Internal Medicine

Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey is pleased to welcome Peter J. Meyers, DO, to our medical staff. Dr. Meyers is the new Hospitalist, who specializes in caring for patients exclusively in the hospital setting and also in inpatient medicine. Dr. Meyers and the Hospitalist Team will manage patient's care, direct treatments, coordinate and consult with specialists, and remain in close touch with the patient, the family of the patient and their primary care physician.

Since primary care physicians spend most of the day in an office outside the hospital, he or she cannot always be at the bedside when emergencies or concerns arise. The Hospitalist Team and primary care physicians are frequently in contact throughout a hospital stay and discharge to make the transition in and out of the hospital as seamless as possible.

With the addition of Dr. Meyers to Northern Michigan Hospital, the Hospitalist Program is believed to improve patient care, better recognize needs of physicians and patients, ease the process of sending patients to NMH's inpatient service and improve communication back to the patient's primary care physician.

For more information about Dr. Meyers, or any of our physicians, please call HealthAccess at 1.800.248.6777

Council candidates state their issues

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

On Nov. 2, voters will choose who they want to represent them on city council.

Two candidates that were unable to be reached last week commented on what issues are important to them.

First ward incumbent Bill Haggard and second ward candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell are both experienced in politics and have lived in the area for awhile.

Haggard, 68, was born in the Charlevoix area and has lived here for most of his life. He co-owns Haggard's Plumbing and Heating and is a member and on the board of the Master Plumber's Association. His Charlevoix contributions have been more politically focused.

Haggard has sat on council for a total of 12 years and worked on the Downtown Development Authority for two years. He is running for re-election to the first ward because he wants to see some projects through to the end.

"I want to see the marina and [East] park go as smooth as possible," he said.

The two year process is something Haggard is ready to witness. He wants to see the docks rebuilt and the park renovated into an even better facility.

Haggard said he doesn't have a specific platform, but just wants operations to run as smoothly as possible.

One way this can be accomplished is to stay out of court more. Haggard said there needs to be more negotiations on the council level such as the assisted living situation.

Haggard said the whole ordeal could have been handled out of court, but a vote was taken against holding a public hearing.

"They voted to not put a public voice in and I didn't think that was right," he said.

Haggard said he may need a facility like Sunnybank Retirement Community when he gets older. He said having one in Charlevoix is nice because then people can be around all their memories, especially if they've lived their whole life in Charlevoix.

Haggard said assisted living still needs to be incorporated into the zoning ordinance, but he said that shouldn't be a big issue.

Having an open government is important to Haggard.

"There's just some legal stuff you have to have closed session on," he said. "Otherwise the public should be informed."

Haggard said the legal stuff are things like lawsuit negotiations and issues with employees.

Haggard is for openness in government because he believes the people have a say and closed sessions can cause suspicion.

"Because we're not trying to hide anything and they'll think you're trying to hide something," he said.

Russell shares some of the same beliefs as Haggard.

Russell, 60, owner of Charlevoix Towing, has lived in Charlevoix all his life. He served as mayor for four years and was on council for 11 years. Aside from politics, Russell has helped the community by donating equipment to the baseball fields.

Russell is running for city council because of family issues.

"I don't believe two members of the same family should be serving at the same time," he said concerning Mayor Gabe Campbell and his wife Karen I. Campbell.

He is also running because as a business man, he is concerned about the fate of local business.

"Charlevoix businesses are dying," he said. "It was a slow year."

He said a business can't survive on 30 or 60 days in the summer. Russell said the community should support a longer business season and an earlier start.

Russell said people may complain about the traffic, but it's a necessary inconvenience.

"Without that traffic, it's a long year," he said.

Russell said the business district is more than just downtown.

"I don't know what the answer is, but somebody's got to sit down and get back on track," he said.

Aside from businesses, affordable housing is another issue Russell is concerned about.

He said the younger age group in Charlevoix can't afford to stay in town to live and work.

"It's beyond their means to buy anything," he said.

Bringing in more into the industrial part of the city may increase the number of jobs for the younger crowd, he said.

Aside from creating more business and housing, Russell believes the government should be open except for issues concerning individual problems and hiring.

"I don't think anything should be hidden from anybody," he said. "I don't know why you'd want to hide anything."

Harbor Industries hosts Day of Caring

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Harbor Industries is gearing up for its first annual Day of Caring on Sept. 16, which involves area volunteers and businesses.

The Day of Caring started a few years back with Harbor Industries helping out with about two volunteer projects per year.

"The ideal goal for this is that people get interested in volunteering and go out and volunteer on other projects," said Jennifer Archambault, human resource assistant for Harbor Industries.

Archambault said if people don't wish to carry on their volunteer work year-round, the hope is that they will come back for the Day of Caring next year.

The Day of Caring is set aside for area people to lend a hand with local projects, some of which include painting the caboose at the Raven Hill Center, doing cabin repair work at Camp Dagget and assisting senior citizens through the Family Independence Agency.

"Many other communities do this," she said concerning the volunteer work.

Archambault said Tim Parker, vice president of Harbor Industries, is actively involved with United Way, which led to the Day of Caring.

Last year, Harbor Industries built teepees at Challenge Mountain. Archambault said the project allowed floor and office personnel to work as a team, which helped build teamwork skills for the company.

Before events get underway on Sept. 16, there will be a kick off meeting to inform volunteers of the day's events.

Currently, there are several projects lined up, but not as many volunteers. Those interested in helping out with a project individually or as a team can contact Archambault at Harbor Industries by calling 237-6242 or by e-mailing her at jennifer_archambault@harborind.com.

Council candidates discuss parking

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

ELECTION 2004

Sometimes it seems like there just aren't enough parking spaces in Charlevoix during the busy summer months, but does this mean we have a parking problem?

City council candidates look into all aspects of the parking situation in Charlevoix.

First ward incumbent Bill Haggard said he doesn't think there is a parking problem. He said Charlevoix has adequate parking, but more spaces could open up downtown if store owners parked further away and not right in front of their stores.

"We wouldn't need meters if property owners wouldn't park there," he said.

There has been talk about the possibility of having a parking structure in Charlevoix. Haggard said such a facility isn't necessary.

"I doubt you'd ever need that," he said.

Haggard said the parking lot down by the United States Coast Guard ship the ACACIA, used to be roped off and designated as paid parking. He said the idea didn't last one year until they took it out because no one would use it.

"People have a tendency to park in front, then go to the mall and walk 40 miles," he said.

The size of Charlevoix also limits the possibility of such a structure.

"We just don't have the room," he said.

Instead of a parking structure, Haggard would like to see more businesses and stores brought into the city.

Venetian can cause some grief with parking, but Haggard said he doesn't see the problem since it only lasts a few days. He did, however, say that serious thought would have to be put into looking at the parking situation if Venetian occurred year-round.

Handicapped parking is something Haggard supports. He'd like to see a drop off area put in downtown, which would help some people get to the festivities. He said it could be located on a corner so the driver can easily get in and out.

"I'm all for handicapped parking and Americans with Disabilities Act regulations," he said.

Haggard said whatever is necessary to bring the city up to ADA standards should be done.

First ward challenger Rebecca Doan was unable to be reached for comment after repeated attempts.

Second ward incumbent Karen I. Campbell said there is plenty of parking for people who come and visit in the summer. She said the festival is run in a nice manner and she doesn't mind walking, but not everyone can do that.

"I don't think we have a problem with parking except for handicapped," she said.

These issues have been brought to her attention from people she's talked with that need handicapped parking.

One issue centered on the handicapped parking spaces on Clinton Street across from Murdick's Famous Fudge. The spaces are blocked by vendor trucks during downtown festivals and art fairs.

Campbell said one solution could require putting one handicapped parking space per block along both sides of Bridge Street.

Handicapped spaces are one battle, but Campbell is also focused on the proposed parking for the new marina.

"I don't think marina parking is necessary because they come in on boats," she said. "Let them take the Ankle Express like everybody else."

Second ward challenger Alvin "Butch" Russell said a parking problem does exist in Charlevoix, but only on certain occasions.

These occasions include the Venetian Festival and several smaller festivals.

"There's still lots of streets to park on," he said. "They do find parking."

Russell said people are willing to walk a long ways when going to a larger city or a shopping mall, but seem to have a need to park up front in Charlevoix.

The problem isn't year-round, but there has been some talk concerning a parking structure in Charlevoix. Russell said such a structure could save money on parking in the long run due to property values, but isn't the best idea.

"I don't know if I want to see a parking structure downtown," he said. "I don't think we need it."

If the public supports the idea of a parking structure and the cost isn't a problem, Russell said he would then support the project even though he personally doesn't agree.

Russell doesn't think there's a parking problem in Charlevoix, but he isn't too sure about the handicapped parking situation.

He said he'd have to look into the issue more in depth, but there is probably a problem.

Bridge Street is busy, but Russell said there should be handicapped parking spaces on some of the corners and more van accessible parking.

Incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said he doesn't see a problem with parking since 42 months out of the year there is plenty of parking.

"It's not worth spending the public's money on more additional spaces in town," he said.

The traffic created by the Venetian Festival and other downtown festivities such as Apple Fest is something Chamberlain said isn't a big problem.

These festivities create fund-raising opportunities for organizations such as the Knights of Columbus, who charge for parking, Chamberlain said.

There has been some talk over the years concerning a parking structure in Charlevoix. Chamberlain said a structure like that is not likely in the immediate future.

"That's something that should be incorporated in a 20 year master plan of Charlevoix," he said.

Chamberlain said he doesn't see a need for a parking structure in his lifetime, but it is something he thinks the planning commission should look into.

"It's an idea the public should at least think about," he said.

Instead of more parking, Chamberlain would like to see better usage of space in downtown Charlevoix. He said private developers could come in and build, which would be one way to help expand the city's tax base.

"I think the downtown area needs more people," he said.

Downtown parking is not a problem now, but Chamberlain would like to see more handicapped spaces for East Park so everyone can enjoy what the park has to offer.

In November 2001, Chamberlain was hit by a Ford Ranger and was forced to be in a wheelchair.

"It was an eye opening experience," he said.

Chamberlain said he always questioned different handicapped laws, but after the accident he really saw a need for more accessibility.

Bridge Street is a dangerous place for someone in a wheelchair, which is why Chamberlain thinks Clinton Street is a better place for more handicapped spaces.

"The population is getting older and older," he said. "It's time to rethink the number of handicapped parking spaces downtown."

Parking is not that important of an issue for third ward challenger Dave Scott, but it is something he feels should be studied more in order to ensure the best is being done for downtown businesses and employees.

"It's not worse here than anywhere else," he said.

Many downtowns face the same problems when it comes to parking, Scott said, but parking issues are relative to the area.

People in a larger city don't think twice about having to walk a short distance to get to the store they want to shop in, Scott said. Charlevoix residents and tourists are different.

"Ultimately, people want to park right in front of their business or place there going to shop," he said.

During the summer months many people flock to Charlevoix causing the towns vehicular traffic to swell. The expectation some of these people have of being able to park up front is something Scott said the city needs to meet.

Scott said he has only had to walk three or four blocks at the worse during the hectic summer months.

"The overall impact of Venetian is positive, so I personally am willing to put with the inconvenience," he said.

Venetian's impact on the downtown area creates some traffic backup situations, which was handled differently this year by staging some events out at Castle Farms.

"I'm not willing to shell out money to solve a problem that occurs one week, each year," he said.

When asked about the suggested parking structure, Scott said such a structure would be out of character for Charlevoix and would cost a lot of money to construct.

"I can't think of anything worse," he said.

One issue in town concerns handicapped parking, which Scott thinks Charlevoix could use more of.

"It may be a good idea to identify a couple more handicapped spaces," he said.

These spaces would then be readily available during hectic times and offer more parking options. Scott said he doesn't mind walking a few more feet in order to provide more spaces for individuals who need to be closer to the entrance.

"I'm never upset when I go to a mall and see unused handicapped spaces," he said.

Scott suggested creating some spaces in the downtown area for expectant mothers along with those designated for handicapped parking.

Chicago Club fund strives for healthy lives

A fund started four years ago by Chicago Club members is already making life healthier for lots of Charlevoix school children.

Called "Quick Action for Kids," the special fund at the Charlevoix County Community Foundation is used to promote healthy youth initiatives and meet the immediate healthcare needs of Charlevoix students.

To date, 57 grants totaling more than $27,000 have been distributed by the fund, providing medical and dental services to children whose needs might otherwise go unmet, and helping to support projects like Fit Kids that encourage healthy lifestyles.

"In a community where families may work seasonally or lack health insurance, minor health issues can become major problems," said Chicago Club member Richard Platt, who helped launch the fund. "We hope that these modest investments in children's health will yield big results in the long run. Quick Action for Kids grants focus on prevention, correction, and rehabilitation, where a one-time expenditure can make a real difference for a child."

In addition to traditional medical or dental care, the fund helps cover the cost of eyeglasses or hearing aids, speech or physical therapy and personal hygiene. When school personnel identify a child's health need, they can make a request for assistance directly to the community foundation. If approved, the necessary money is immediately granted.

"This unique, rapid-response fund helps fill a healthcare gap," said Bob Tambellini, community foundation president. "All of us are grateful to the Chicago Club for demonstrating their commitment to Charlevoix and its young people in such an innovative way."

The Chicago Club fund is one of 150 funds currently managed by the Charlevoix County Community Foundation — each one designated to support a specific cause or address general needs in education, the environment, health and wellness, civic improvement, the arts, youth or recreation.

Started in 1992, the community foundation now has net assets of more than $10.5 million and has distributed a total of $4.5 in grants to the area.

More information about the Quick Action for Kids fund or other programs of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation is available by calling the foundation at (231) 536-2440, or writing c/o P.O Box 718, East Jordan, Michigan, 49727.

Horton Bay church to host a financial seminar

As a part of its continuing series of community outreach programs, and as a service to the community, Horton Bay United Methodist Church will present a financial seminar called "Ask a Broker."

Derek Chowen, a stockbroker from Charlevoix, will conduct the session, which is subtitled, "Everything you always wanted to know about investments, but didn't know who to ask."

Derek Chowen

Chowen will include a discussion of current financial market conditions and investment strategies, followed by a question and answer session. He has previously participated in financial briefings to the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce Business Breakfasts, the Charlevoix Rotary Club and other civic groups.

The seminar is open to the public, and will be at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 13 at Horton Bay United Methodist Church on Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. The public is invited.

Lasater warns: don't call and drive

Sheriff George T. Lasater would like inform the driving public in Charlevoix County that although most Americans agree that the use of cellular telephones while driving can be hazardous to their health, more motorists than ever are making calls while behind the wheel.

During 2001, there were 822 crashes in Michigan resulting from cell phone use with five of them being fatal.

Ninety-one percent of all Americans believe that the use of cellular telephones while driving distracts drivers and increases the likelihood of accidents.

However, despite this belief, self-reported cellular telephone use while driving continues to increase.

Last year in the United States, nearly 110 million people used cellular phones compared with approximately 5 million in 1990.

There are two dangers associated with driving and cellular telephone uses. First, driver's must take their eyes off the road while dialing. Second, people can become so absorbed in their conversations that their ability to concentrate on driving is impaired.

The National Safety Council found that among those engaged in a cell phone conversation, twice as many missed simulated traffic signals when compared with drivers not talking on the phone.

There are four preventative measures to remember before talking on a cellular telephone while driving:

1) Pull over to the side of the road to make or take calls on your cellular telephone.

2) Use a hands-free device when available.

3) Do not engage in stressful or emotional conversations that may divert your attention from the road.

4) Do not take notes or look up phone numbers while driving.

Also, it is important to always wear a safety belt. It is the best defense against injury if you are involved in a crash.

Mayoral candidates discuss parking issue

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's parking is always under fire during the hectic summer months, when the vehicular traffic swells and the bridge openings create a traffic jam a mile long, but does this mean there's a problem?

Gabe Campbell

Incumbent Campbell said he doesn't necessarily think there's a parking problem, but he does think there's a problem with the parking for the assisted living site on the north side of town.

"This particular year I've been downtown and I haven't had a problem parking," he said.

Norman Carlson

Campbell said he is upset with the businesses that have left the downtown area. He said there are only a handful of businesses that remain that don't sell candy or T-shirts.

"I'd like to see more businesses," he said.

There has been talk about putting up a parking structure to help with the overflow of traffic. Campbell said he'd only agree to building such a facility if the already open blacktop areas were sold in order to have businesses use the area.

Campbell said if there should be talk of putting up condominiums instead of businesses, then he wouldn't agree.

Overall, Campbell thinks Charlevoix provides enough parking for its citizens.

"I think there's adequate parking," he said.

However, handicapped parking is another story.

Campbell said there should be at least one handicapped parking space on every block and he likes the idea of having a drop off area downtown. He said this wouldn't work for everyone, but at least it would be good for some people in the community.

Campbell said people who can walk a great distance should be courteous and leave the closer parking spaces downtown open for those who need to park closer to where they're going.

Mayoral challenger Carlson said parking isn't that big of a problem since the vehicular congestion only occurs a few weeks out of the year.

"I personally, aside from Venetian and the art fair, don't think there's been that big of a problem this year," he said.

He said the proposed marina parking at the old middle school off Grant Street will open up more spaces downtown once everything is finalized.

"It seems that no matter how much you get, people always want more," he said. "They want to be close."

Carlson said he personally doesn't mind walking a little ways from where he had to park.

The suggested parking structure is not a good idea to Carlson. If funding for such a facility were to come from the taxpayers, Carlson said it would be a waste of money.

Aside from the money, the structure itself may not fit with the community.

"I don't think that could be done tastefully," he said.

Carlson said he thinks there are other ways to alleviate vehicular congestion during the summer months.

"I just don't think we need a parking structure, myself," he said. "Not right now."

During Venetian, Carlson said it's expected that parking will be harder to find.

"I think people have been to Venetian enough to know it's going to be hard to get a parking spot," he said.

Carlson finds Charlevoix to be pretty accessible overall, but he doesn't know the exact situation concerning handicapped parking accessibility because he isn't handicapped.

"I'm not handicapped, so I don't know the trials and tribulations they go through," he said.

Carlson said handicapped parking on Bridge Street may not be safe for people when getting out of their cars. He also said the city should look into not blocking off the handicapped parking spaces on Clinton Street across from Murdick's Famous Fudge during festivals.

Overall, Carlson said he can't say for sure whether or not there's a problem with handicapped parking because he doesn't have to use the spaces and has a different point of view.

"I don't know, I don't have to deal with it," he said.

Will survey of handicapped parking work?

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

After a month of gathering information on the amount of usage handicapped parking spaces receive in Charlevoix, city officials may find it was a waste of their time the city doesn't already have the minimum amount of spaces.

While Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson wasn't available for comment by press time after repeated attempts to contact him, he said in a previous interview that the police department was conducting surveys to determine how much the handicapped parking spaces are used in Charlevoix.

He said once all the data is gathered it will be analyzed to determine whether or not more spaces are needed due to the usage history.

If all of the parking spaces are full most of the time, then more spaces may be necessary.

Halverson said his parking people are checking the spaces a few times a week and at varying times in order to get a more accurate determination of usage.

But, Eric Holland from the Department of Justice said a city has to meet the minimum requirements for handicapped parking by law.

If those requirements are met and the city wished to look into more handicapped parking, then the survey could be helpful in determining if there is indeed a need for more spaces.

However, the survey is useless if the city is not compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act.

Donald Dawkins, 57, is tired of being treated like a second-class citizen in a community he loves and says he wants more done than just a survey by city officials.

"I'm not the only one in Charlevoix who loves the community and feels this way," he said.

Dawkins has lived in northern Michigan and hopes to retire in Charlevoix. He currently resides in Sarasota, Fla.

Dawkins is an ADA activist and also a member of the National Independent Living Council. He is the former director of the Florida Spinal Chord Resource Center and has worked in the rehabilitation field as a counselor for about 23 years.

Last year he resigned from the Florida Spinal Chord Resource Center and owns his own business, Adaptive Resource Consulting Services.

When he was 18-years-old, Dawkins was in a car accident that left him paralyzed. He has worked hard his whole life to educate himself, have a career and raise a family and he won't sit by and allow society to shut him out.

"I love the place," he said. "By God I've worked hard and want access to the community."

Dawkins said Charlevoix needs to become more handicapped accessible and provide more parking in the downtown area. He also said the community needs to help enforce the ADA.

"It's the only piece of federal legislation that is trying to get the states and city municipalities to enforce it," he said.

Dawkins said every city must have two things: a plan and timeline that states how they are going to meet ADA goals and when and to have an individual that understands the law who will meet with builders and gives out building permits only if the plans meet ADA standards.

Dawkins said Stafford's Weathervane and Whitney's of Charlevoix are two restaurants in Charlevoix that have been ADA compliant for a long time.

"Those people grabbed this immediately. They have been compliant for years," he said. "Ironically, the Weathervane is one of the few places downtown with disabled parking."

Dawkins said the law specifically states how many handicapped parking spaces are needed per number of spaces available and it isn't something that can be arbitrarily enforced.

Approximately two years ago, Dawkins and his some friends went to Halverson to talk about bringing Charlevoix up to ADA standards.

Dawkins said Halverson said he would conduct a survey.

"This law is not designed to give people a special privilege," Dawkins said. "This law is designed to bring people into the mainstream American culture."

The city of Sarasota, Fla. spent thousands of dollars upgrading their handicapped parking signs. The money generated from fines given to people parked in the handicapped parking spaces is given back to the community through various improvement projects.

"This is a win, win situation if approached correctly," he said. "The city wins and people with disabilities win."

Dawkins said he wants to work with city officials in Charlevoix and hopefully bring the city up to code so everyone can enjoy the beauty surrounding them.

"I want it to be what it should be and can be and that's for everyone," he said.

City officials could not say if the city had the minimum amount of parking spaces at this time.

Furthermore, while the parking survey is complete, city manager Mike Wiesner would not release it to the public at this time, stating he wants the city council to see it first.

Sheriff: Beware of Internet scams

Sheriff George T. Lasater would like to advise the residents of Charlevoix County that Internet scams similar to those he warned area residents about last month are on the increase.

For this reason he is again warning all Charlevoix County citizens of the increased risk of receiving fraudulent e-mail correspondence. The ultimate goal of perpetrators of these scams is to obtain vital personal data from the recipient that can then be used to obtain money or goods fraudulently or for pursuits involving identity theft.

Lasater said with this particular scam there is always a guarantee of large sums of money generally in connection with the death of a long lost relative.

He said, it is extremely important to remember that if it sounds too good to be true, it most likely is, and it is much easier to prevent this type of theft from occurring than it is to retrieve what has been stolen. All fraudulent e-mail activity that is reported to this agency is being forwarded to the FBI for handling.

If you believe you have received this type of e-mail correspondence, please contact your local or state police agency or contact Lasater at (231) 547-4461.

Area twins invited to picnic on Sept. 14

Petoskey Area Parents of Twins group is inviting area families with twins or other multiples to its third annual Twins Summer Picnic.

The event will be at 5:30 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 14, at the Petoskey KOA RV and Cabin Resort on US-31 North in Petoskey.

The picnic will feature a cook-out and those attending are urged to bring a dish to pass. Playground equipment will be available for the children to enjoy.

Families involved with the Parents of Twins group gather at regular intervals in playgroups or at other functions to share the joys and challenges of raising multiple-birth children. Participants range primarily from Emmet, Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties.

Any area family with twins, triplets or more is invited to participate. For more information, call Sue McCloskey at (231) 348-5490 or Carlin Smith at (231) 347-4150.

Some old faces return to the classrooms

By COURTNEY E. PACE
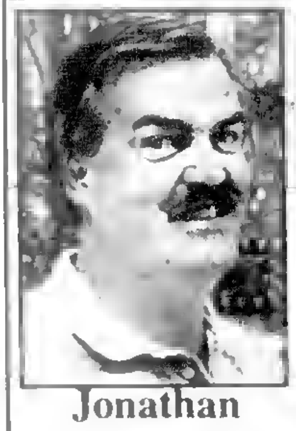
Staff Writer

The new teachers and administrator for the 2004-2005 school year are not new faces to the community or teaching.

The Charlevoix Elementary School is bringing Toni Wood out of retirement to join the staff as a part-time teacher in the special education department.

Steve Bennett



Jonathan Winkjer

"It just seemed like the right thing to do," she said.

Wood, 55, was born in Charlevoix but has lived and taught in other communities. She has been back in the area for 26 years and spent that time working as a teacher consultant for CharEm.

Through her work as a consultant, Wood evaluated children for special education needs and helped write their prescriptions, which specify the time they would divide between general and special education.

"I have had the opportunity to have a lot of training," she said. "I think I can bring that into the classroom again."

Wood has taught in the special education field for 33 and a half years. She is certified to teach the cognitively impaired, the emotionally impaired and the learning disabled.

She has taught special education in both a self-contained and a resource room setting. With a resource room setting the students are involved in a general education program and come to the room for help, which is the program at Charlevoix Elementary School.

Teaching at the elementary level is important for Wood because she wants to help children at the early stages in their lives. She believes a child's self-esteem can affect their performance in the classroom, which is something she doesn't want to be a factor.

Toni Wood

"[I want] to catch kids and try to boost them before their self-esteem is hurt," she said.

Wood is excited about teaching again.

"I'm looking forward to working directly with kids over a long period of time," she said.

Carol Madison is coming from the elementary school to teach fifth grade at the Charlevoix Middle School.

There are two returning faces at Northwest Academy Charter School that are now assuming new positions.

Steve Bennett, 53, is returning to the classroom part-time this fall to teach math and algebra to middle school children from sixth to eighth grade.

"I can't wait to get back in," he said. "I missed it."

Bennet has lived in Charlevoix for 12 years and owns and operates the MacDougall House Bed and Breakfast on Petoskey Avenue in Charlevoix.

His educational career started by his involvement with CharEm. Bennett has been involved at Northwest Academy before through his positions as a teacher and an administrator. He taught math full-time for five years and took on an extra responsibility as administrator during the last two years.

After a two year break due to personal events, Bennett chose to return to teaching.

"Administration wasn't what I wanted to do," he said. "I wanted to teach."

During that two year period, Bennett kept on teaching through his tutoring efforts and subbing.

"I enjoy working with kids and appreciate the challenges they present to me," he said.

With his passion for teaching and unique approach to math, Bennett said he is most looking forward to seeing the students and helping them to understand math better.

"I try to make the class something each kid can deal with on their own level," he said.

The traditional approach to math where students are presented the information and expected to learn it as is, doesn't appeal to Bennett.

"I try to teach what the kids want to learn," he said.

Bennett uses a positive approach to math because he doesn't want students to go into the class with a negative outlook.

Math is not a favorite subject to many students, but Bennett hopes to change that attitude by applying the information to everyday life and not leaving it as an illusive number.

"It's not just an idea, but a way of living, a way of functioning," he said.

Bennett isn't the only one taking on a new role at Northwest Academy.

Jonathan Winkjer, 44, is taking on a new position as administrator. Despite what the position entails, Winkjer said he is there to facilitate a free-flow of ideas and information.

"It's a whole staff thing," he said.

The staff of Northwest Academy is intimately involved in all the aspects of education and share many of the same teaching philosophies. Winkjer said the staff pulled together and decided what direction they wanted to go in order to make Northwest Academy a more dynamic place.

"It naturally evolved to what was needed, which personally is how I wanted it to be," he said. "Otherwise, I wouldn't want to be here in this position."

Winkjer lives in Harbor Springs but has commuted to Charlevoix for the last seven years.

His career in education started by being brought on board as the computer systems management person, which evolved into his teaching computers and language arts.

This year Winkjer will be teaching social studies and government for the first time along with doing his administrative work.

After doing government work and private consulting, Winkjer chose education because of the people.

"Anyway you package it, it's a rewarding experience," he said.

First day of classes

Golf outing to benefit Habitat

Swinging golf clubs so that others can swing home building hammers for affordable housing in the region — that's the charge of the Northern Michigan Habitat For Humanity Golf Outing.

The event will be Monday, September 13, at Boyne Mountain's Alpine course, and will also feature a luncheon at the resort's Beach House on Deer Lake.

Sign-up deadline is Friday, September 10, and advanced registration is required.

The day of the outing, a noon sign-in will be given with a 1 p.m. shotgun start. Registrants can contact Town & Country Cedar Homes at (231) 347-4360 or Habitat for Humanity at (231) 348-6926 for more information.

The outing's goal is to raise $10,000 for Habitat For Humanity.

Two previous fund-raisers this year for the organization have yielded $15,000.

Mary Margaret, Habitat's current head, started with the organization four years ago as affiliate coordinator. The organization has been in existence since 1992, she noted, and serves Charlevoix and Emmet counties. Since that time it has built 11 homes in the area, and is just starting its twelfth home in Emmet.

"We just closed on a home in Boyne City, and next year we have three homes scheduled," she explained.

The volunteer home building community is a mix of solid individuals, some of who are retired, and others from area church and youth groups.

Recently, members of the Harbor Springs Presbyterian Church have donated a home that will be built in the Alanson area.

Sundays at Four presents chamber orchestra

The Sunday's at Four concert series will host the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra in concert at 4 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 12 at the First Congregational Church in Charlevoix.

The concert will be led by Matthew Hazelwood, orchestra director at Interlochen Arts Academy and conductor of the Great Lakes Chamber Orchestra.

Violist Margaret Beck will be the featured soloist in Telemann's Viola Concerto in G Major.

Violinists Paul Sonner and Maggie Poxson will be accompanied by Marlys Manthei on cello and Robert Pattengale on the harpsichord. They will perform as the solo ensemble with the orchestra in Handel's Concerto Grosso, Opus 6, number nine.

The chamber concert will also feature pianist Michelle Mitchum with violinist Gloria Lewis, violist Laura Staubes and cellist Marga Eickholt in Beethoven's Piano Quartet, Opus 16.

The orchestra has completed three successful seasons performing throughout northern Michigan. The orchestra consists of musicians from Alanson, Bellaire, Boyne City, Charlevoix, Cheboygan, East Jordan, Gaylord, Interlochen, Petoskey and Traverse City.

The orchestra has developed a solid base of community support in the region.

Artistic director Beck and executive director Pattengale co-founded the orchestra and provided the organizational impetus and the performing members have responded with time, energy and talent.

Hazelwood provides continuity of programming and artistic development as the music advisor and conductor.

Sonner, violin instructor at the Interlochen Arts Academy, has recently been appointed concertmaster. Sonner, who also serves as concertmaster of the Traverse Symphony Orchestra, brings a wealth of professional experience to the orchestra.

There is no charge for the concert, but a donation of $5 will be gratefully accepted.

A reception follows the concert in the Fellowship Hall, which has been renamed Christiana Ransom Hall in honor and loving memory of a long-time member of the church.

Be sure to get your child their chickenpox vaccine

Despite the availability of a safe vaccine preventing the disease, several cases of chickenpox have been reported in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties in the past year, according to officials from the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves the four counties.

Chickenpox symptoms are usually mild, but chickenpox can be serious, especially in young infants and adults. According to the Centers for Disease Control & Prevention, about 12,000 people are hospitalized each year in the U.S. for chickenpox and about 100 die — including about 20 children — as a result of the disease.

"With the school year approaching, it's a good time for parents to check their children's immunization records to be sure they've received the varicella vaccine — that's the immunization that prevents chickenpox," said Joshua Meyerson, MD, Medical Director. "One of our primary goals at the health department is to prevent communicable disease outbreaks, including chickenpox, in the community."

Chickenpox can be very uncomfortable for healthy children and adults, with rash and blisters, itching, fever and tiredness. Once chickenpox takes hold in a community, it could also be passed on to those at risk of severe infection: Infants, pregnant women and patients with cancer, for example.

The Childhood and Adolescent Immunization Schedule recommends one dose of the varicella vaccine at 12 months of age or at any age if they have never had chickenpox. People who do not get the vaccine or chickenpox until age 13 or older, including adults, should get two "shots," four weeks apart, to protect them from chickenpox.

The chickenpox vaccine is available from physicians' offices and at health department offices in Bellaire, Mancelona, Charlevoix, Petoskey and Gaylord. However, the Michigan Department of Community Health wants to assure this vaccine is available to all children, regardless of families' availability to pay.

For more information, telephone the health department during regular business hours at (800) 432-4121.

There are many myths that keep people from getting the chickenpox vaccine for themselves or for their children. It does not increase the likelihood of getting shingles, a painful inflammation of the nerves.

"In fact, the varicella vaccine decreases the risk of contracting shingles," said Meyerson. "Also, the vaccine does not just delay getting chickenpox to an older age, it provides lasting immunity."

Many people believe they cannot get chickenpox vaccine if they are in contact with a pregnant woman or an immunocompromised individual, such as a cancer patient. According to Meyerson, the vaccine actually helps protect these types of people from getting chickenpox and transmitting it to their contacts.

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency is the local health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. Its staff is dedicated to preventing disease and injury and promoting healthy communities.

Saying goodbye

The first day of school can be an emotional event and some children don't want to part from their parents. A mother at Charlevoix Elementary School Tuesday kneels down and gives her child a big hug before leaving for the day. Children found their desks and said goodbye to parents as they prepared for the new school year.

Football team loses in tough matchup Friday

By B. JON GOHS
Special to the Courier

Will the third game of the season be charmed for Coach Jess and the Rayders?

They knew it would be tough going in, nevertheless, Charlevoix's 16 point loss to the Benzie Central Huskies was a disappointment Friday night.

"Offensively we had a tough time moving the ball," Jess said.

It seems the mental mistakes Coach Jess cited as last week's culprit again plagued the Rayders offensive line including two turnovers and several penalties.

"We made a few mistakes, but we played a pretty darn good football team. Give Benzie credit, they're gonna win a lot of football games this year," he said.

The offense had trouble, Jess said, but he also cited the good job his defense is doing lead this week by Ezra Bakker with 15 tackles.

"The defense played pretty well for us again," Jess said.

Benzie's double coverage of receiver Ben Bergman on most plays put a pinch on Rayders offense. And by the end of the second quarter it seemed as if Charlevoix would leave half-time skunked, but true to form, the Rayders turned it on with less than 30 seconds to go.

"The first touchdown pass was from Cody Crain to Eddie Waldron," Jess said.

Crain lead offense with 22 of 37 for 243 yards for one TD and one interception. The three yard pass was capped off with an extra point kicked by Jeff Golovich.

Crain's passing percentage is down 6 percent from 65 to 59 this week with the number of passes thrown being up by 11 from 26 to 37.

Again Charlevoix remained scoreless for most of the second half until the last quarter when Travis Burke made a strong 29 yard drive for a TD and Eddie Waldron had a two point conversion in the last four minutes.

Benzie's final touch down was the result of a fumble by Crain making the final score 31-15.

With two losses hanging over their heads as they begin week three, it seems the Rayders will alter their game plan only slightly.

"We're going to try and get the running game going a little more this week, but we're still going to run the hall," Jess said.

According to Jess, next week's game against East Jordan will be a challenge.

"They beat us the last few years," he said. "They have a good program — they made the playoffs last year."

East Jordan's coach and Coach Jess run similar programs.

"They do a lot of the same things we do; a spread offense and throw the ball a lot," he said. "Their coach and I went to the same college."

And Coach Jess knows just how to handle a team like East Jordan.

"We're going to try to shut down their passing game and get our offense going a little better this week," he said. "We have to cut down the penalties and mistakes."

The season is still young, according to Jess, and the Rayders have only begun to show their stuff.

"We're getting better," he said. "We showed a lot of improvement."

Charlevoix faces East Jordan at 7:30 p.m., Friday Sept. 10 at home.

sports jackets

Charlevoix High School was relatively quiet in preparation for the student's arrival on Tuesday. Classrooms were set up and ready to go and so were the Rayder sports teams. These baseball jackets hanging up inside a classroom are ready to be issued to the athletes who will wear them.

'Beyond the Gridiron' to be shown by arts center

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will have a showing of the documentary, "Beyond the Gridiron," at 8 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 24.

Petoskey film producer, David Crouse, has teamed up with Chip Duncan of Duncan Entertainment to produce a new one hour public television documentary "Beyond the Gridiron: The Life and Times of Woody Hayes." The documentary is being distributed by NETA and will air on PBS affiliates nationwide this fall.

This is the first in-depth television biography ever produced on Woody Hayes. CMU Public Television will air the documentary at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 26 and will rebroadcast it at 10 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 28 (CMU Public Television airs in Petoskey on Channel 6).

Considered one of the greatest football coaches of the twentieth century, Hayes was a study in contrast. Hard-nosed, demanding, often ill tempered on the sidelines, Hayes was genuinely concerned about the young men in his care. He was a mentor. Many players attribute their present success in life to Hayes' strong influence.

Woody Hayes enjoyed a long and acclaimed career as the head football coach of the Ohio State University Buckeyes. This biographical account provides an in-depth look at Hayes' life on and off the field, as well as the times by which Woody Hayes was influenced.

The show features interviews with current Ohio State University head football coach Jim Tressel, golfing legend and Ohio State University alumnus Jack Nicklaus, two-time Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin of Ohio State, and former players Greg Lashutka, Rex Kern, Daryl Sanders and Alan Natali, author of Woody's Boys.

Also interviewed was former Michigan head football coach Bo Schembechler. Schembechler played for Woody at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio and then became an assistant coach for Hayes first at Miami of Ohio then at Ohio State. When Schembechler was named head football coach at Michigan in 1969 it began what many would call the greatest rivalry in college football.

Hayes and Schembechler bounced back and forth in a series of games that would determine national champions and Rose Bowl appearances. Four times during the first six years of their rivalry, both teams were ranked in the nation's top five when they met. While fierce competitors on the field they were very close friends off the field.

For more information please visit www.CrouseEntertainment.com.

Following the film, David Crouse will host a meet and greet to discuss his experiences with filming the documentary. There is no charge for this event.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located in downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. For more information, contact the arts center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

Rayders' golf team third at Sept. 1 meet

Charlevoix's total score was 348. Rudyard took first with a 339 and St. Ignace took second with 346.

Coach Jim Glynn said, "It was a super team effort. We have four scores in the 80s and that is good team scoring."

Glynn noted Chris Wyniawskyj made the all tournament team and won a medal that day by shooting 85. Chris Bartling is still improving and was one shot out at 86. Plus Kyle DeYoung and Chris Golski are still showing improvement with an 88 for Golski and an 89 for DeYoung.

Matt Novotny scored 95 in the match.

Insurance company wants over $200,000

CHECK

Fire wants its money back.

"It was a mistake on the part of the administration," Campbell said. "We messed up ... I am pretty upset that it happened."

Charlevoix City Attorney Jim Young stated in a press release that United Fire filed a lawsuit against the city in federal court in Grand Rapids alleging the city improperly paid the balance to CCMS, when it should have paid it to the insurance provider. According to the federal court, the case was filed on June 25 by United Fire.

Young writes, "Because subcontractors were not receiving payments from CCMS for work performed on the infrastructure contract, United Fire was required to make those payments from the payment bond. The lawsuit alleges that because United Fire made payments directly to subcontractors under the payment bond, the city was required to pay the balance of the contract proceeds to United Fire and not directly to CCMS."

Upon learning of this in a July 19 closed meeting with council, the city requested its insurance provider to cover this balance, but the city's insurance provider denied this request. This means the city would have to cover the cost.

Therefore, the city has requested the insurance provider to reconsider its decision and the city council has authorized the city attorney to take "whatever action is required to be sure the city received all insurance coverage to which it is entitled under Michigan law and to take whatever action is appropriate against CCMS."

Young said, "The most important item to save money for the city is to get the insurance company to take over the payments."

He said the city has insurance coverage, and if there was any mistake made by the city in writing this check, "that is what insurance is for."

Charlevoix City Council member Sherman Chamberlain said the first step the city needs to take is to look at the facts. The city needs to find out how much the CCMS should have gotten out of that check the city wrote to it and how much of it should have gone to the insurance company, he said.

Chamberlain did say he believes a mistake was made in writing the check to CCMS in the first place.

Charlevoix City Council Member Shirley Gibson said the council was not made aware of this lawsuit until the July 19 meeting.

"City council members — at least some of us — never know anything until months after the fact. This is beginning to be business as usual at 201 State Street (city hall) and its poor management. The buck stops at the city manager's door," she said.

City manager under fire after check issue

REACTION

pany, is suing the city for around $222,000, saying they wrote the check to the wrong person. The case was filed in federal court in Grand Rapids on June 25.

Council was informed of this problem during a closed meeting on July 19.

But, according to some on council , this is just one more in a line of issues they claim council is being kept out of the loop on by city administration.

Charlevoix Mayor Gabe Campbell is one of those members. He said what particularly bothers him are people in public or people outside of the situation routinely are more informed than the council. He said council was informed of the check matter in a closed session on July 19. However, the next day, he was approached by a citizen who knew all about it.

"I don't know how he knew. He said everybody downtown is talking about it. He said he was going to go to the paper and I gave him my blessing," Campbell said. "People ought to know what is going on anyhow."

Campbell said he is getting tired of things like this happening, especially when something that they are told in a closed meeting is out in the public so quickly.

"There has to be some changes," Campbell said. "We are kept in the dark too many times."

He compared this latest issue to that of the wastewater treatment plant and the Charlevoix Marina plan being criticized by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ).

In the sewer treatment plant issue, a March 24 story in the Charlevoix Courier reported the MDEQ found several deficiencies in the operation, falsification of reports and violations in discharge from the plant in an investigation that was started in January 2004. It turns out the city had contacted the MDEQ after its own investigation discovered problems reaching back three years.

In the marina issue, a June 16 Charlevoix Courier story stated the city's plans for a new marina were under fire by the MDEQ as far back at April 2004. There were four issues cited by the MDEQ: the promenade is not needed; the bulkhead needs to be straightened, not curved; the docks are too wide and the city was interfering with the riparian rights of the Ward Brothers.

Campbell said council was not informed of the sewer issue until after the MDEQ was called in and did not know about the marina issues until the Courier story was published.

"No one is suppose to know anything. We are just supposed to nod our heads," he said of the administration's treatment of council. "I know we have a strong city manager type of government and whenever we ask for reports, they say we are trying to micromanage. Once I suggested a monthly department head report. I was told we don't need that. I think we do need that."

Campbell said this latest possible error by the city administration makes him believe that stronger.

"If we (council) are an obstacle to him (City Manager Mike Wiesner) to run the city, then he has a problem," he said.

Charlevoix Council Member Shirley Gibson also said she was angered by this check issue, calling it just one of the latest in "poor management" to come out of city hall.

"Considering all the problems that have been happening at city hall perhaps it's time to consider a change in the leadership. It seems that there is a lack of response to what the majority of Charlevoix wants," Gibson said.

But, Council Member Sherm Chamberlain disagrees.

He said he does not believe council has been kept in the dark by the city administration, saying the marina issue in particular has been "overblown."

But regardless of his disagreement with Gibson and Campbell, he said he agrees department head reports are a good idea. But, instead of monthly, he thinks they should be submitted quarterly.

However, City Manager Mike Wiesner questions this plan, saying it could waste the valuable time of the department heads.

Wiesner said the council currently receives Project Purchase Reports, which detail purchases over $1,000 and ongoing projects.

"When you talk of doing reports, reports take a lot of time to do. That is time taken away from getting the job done," he said.

Wiesner said he currently does not ask the department heads to prepare reports for him and opts for talking to them personally on a daily basis.

As for charges that the city administration does not inform the council in enough time, Wiesner said that is not the case at all.

With the wastewater treatment plant, he said the city started an investigation and informed council as soon as it knew exactly what was going on at the plant. With the city marina, he said council and the mayor have been following that along all the time in meetings. Wiesner said there was a two month period where he tried to contact another person in the MDEQ than the one that reviewed the city's marina plan to get a rereview. He felt it was an issue that was going to get resolved quickly. With this check, he said the city informed the council as soon as it had all the information.

"I like to get all the pieces together and have as much information as I can and then report it," he said.

Wiesner said this way he has all the facts together to give council as much information as he can and does it as soon as he can. This shows council the "big picture."

He said he has never been accused of this type of matter by any other council.

SCRAPBOOK

Writer remembers Charlevoix in the 1940s

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

I remember the 1940s, and the people who lived in Charlevoix then, for those were the years when I was growing up, and most of those in town knew each other. I am perusing the Charlevoix Directory published and printed by the Charlevoix Courier in 1940, and adding things I remember about these Charlevoixians.

Alfred and Lillian Brow lived at 207 Belvedere. He was a boat captain, and owned Brow Marina in later years. They had three daughters, Eleanor, Elaine and Marjorie. Lillian taught my Sunday school class at one time. Clayton Brown and his wife, Dorothy, lived at 308 1/2 W. Lincoln with their daughters, Bonnie, Shirley and Patsy. Patsy was close to my age. I wrote the story of Clayton's survival a few months ago when he and his fisherman companions were stranded on the ice in Lake Michigan.

Floyd Brown and his wife Marion, lived at 700 Park Avenue with their daughter, Brenda. He was the vice president of Brown Motors, the Dodge and Plymouth sales and service. This was owned by his father, Ben Brown. In later years, Floyd "Brownie" lived at North Point by us, on the lake. He owned a 1916 Dodge touring car, which was an open car. It looked similar to our Model T.

Beverly Bugg and his wife, Rosetta, lived at 504 Newman. He was a fisherman. His children were Beverly Jr., Charles, Rose Ann and Evertt. Beverly Jr. was in my class in the kindergarten and first grades. Fenton Bulow was the Charlevoix County Clerk and he and his wife Ruth, and girls Janet, Marilyn and Patricia lived at 308 Mason. Cecil Burns lived at 203 Grant Street. He was custodian at the Congregational Church in later years. Violet Bush, my kindergarten teacher lived at 409 Antrim. I can vividly remember her. She was a small lady, not too much taller than her students. Allen Campbell and his wife Anna, lived at 117 E. Upright Avenue. They also had a cottage in Norwood. Their children were Helen Mary and Herbert. Herbert and His wife, Margaret, lived at 105 W. Lincoln. Their niece, Sara Colcman was my best friend when we were 10 and 11 years old. I will never forget one day when Sara and I were at their cottage, and Anna made fried cakes. She fried them on her old range top, and then strung them up on a string over the stove. The aroma was wonderful and so were the fried cakes. I plan to make some for my grandchildren so they will remember their happy days at our house, and enjoy the sensations of watching fried cakes being made.

Don Campbell and his wife, Julia and daughter Anne, lived at 115 River St. He owned Campbells Boot Shop. Their daughter, Jeanne, was a student at that time. Kit and Eleanor Carson lived at 101 E. Dixon, with their son, Kit Jr. Kit Sr. owned the Kit Carson Lumber Company. He also built several distinctive homes in town. Fred Cartier owned and operated a clothier, tailor and dry cleaning shop at 115 Antrim. His wife was Hannah. His building was also the distribution place for the Grand Rapids Press. I was Charlevoix's first paper girl, and had a route in my neighborhood, where I delivered 30 papers every day. I received a penny a paper, making my salary $1.50 for the week. I carried them in a bag, and they were heavy. I was 10 at the time. Ernestine Chew was the Deputy Register of Deeds. She lived at 705 Bridge. She was sister of my aunt, Marguerite Ikens. Clarence Coblentz and his wife, Mildred lived at 209 Antrim. Clarence was deputy sheriff in later years. Albert Cook was vice president of Charlevoix Oil Company and lived with his wife, Helen, and son, Glenn at 602 Park Avenue.

William Cook was a plasterer, and later was Charlevoix Township Supervisor. He was the husband of my great grandma Cook, who was my grandmother Matilda Ikens' mother. My grandma Cook would eat dinner at my grandparent's home often. If she heard me singing at the table, (which I was very prone to do), she would say in broken English, "Not mit der singing at der table." She had come directly from Germany, and always had a brogue. Harry Craig was the manager of the Argo Milling Company. He and his wife M. Ione and children, Robert and Marion lived at 206 E. Dixon. Their other daughter, Martha, was student at the time.

The Cross families were fishermen. Archie and June and daughter, Ardis, lived at 200 E. Lincoln. Donald and Virginia also lived at the same address with their children Donald Jr. and Clarence. John H. Cross and wife, Hulda, lived at 118 E. Hurlbut with their children John Jr., Thelma Carol, and G. Charmaine (Jill). Hulda and her girls operated a wonderful restaurant in a building on Belvedere Avenue for years. Serving whitefish, delicious salad and lemon pie for dessert. Ralph and Alice Cross lived at 206 Mason. His wife was Alice, and their children were Charles (Bill) and Ralph, who was called Bruz. Hazel White was a sister to all the Cross Boys, and her husband, Jake, was also a commercial fisherman.

One day, when Dale was delivering milk to her house, he came to her door, and she said. "Dale, you must hurry today, and get your route done early. About one o'clock, we are going to have a terrible storm hit." She had an old fashioned glass barometer that had a pink liquid in it, and she said "The liquid in the glass is the lowest that I have ever seen it in my lifetime. I hope the boys out on the lake will be OK."

She always studied the weather, and her predictions were much more accurate than what we have today. We did have the storm of the century, and Dale hurried as fast as he could, and made it before it struck. It was a huge rain and thunder and lightning storm like he had not seen before.

Willis and Lillian Cross lived at 108 W. Hurlbut with their children, Willis Jr., and Marion. The Cross Families were well known and liked in town. Mark and Clara Cross also lived here in later years.

Rev. William L. Cruthers was the pastor of the Baptist Church and lived in the parsonage at 298 Mason. His wife was Vera, and the children were Sharon, Bethel and William Jr. Alvin (Hap) Cunningham and his wife, Norma, lived at 314 Antrim with their daughters, Bonnie Jean (BJ), Joyce and Judy Ann. He worked at the Charlevoix Oil Company. Annabelle Cunningham was his sister, and she was the deputy county treasurer.

John Curtis was my grandmother Ikens' brother. He and his wife, Sarah, lived at 541 Petoskey Avenue. His son John C. was also in the building business as was son Harold E. The boys called their business Curtis Brothers. Lloyd Curtis (no relation to the above), owned Curtis Pharmacy. He and his wife Edith and children, Suzanne and Frederick, lived at 207 Mason. Russell Curtis (no relation to the above), owned Curtis Pharmacy. He and His wife Edith and Children, Suzanne and Frederick, lived at 207 Mason. Russell Curtis, his brother, owned Curtis Market at 802 Bridge. He and his wife, Gertrude, and boys Gary and Tracy lived at 106 Wood Street. Dean and Margaret (Marge) Davenport lived at 103 E. Lincoln with their children, Dean, Mona and Margot. R.T. and Ruby Davis and children Patricia and Ritchie, lived at 200 Sheridan. R.T. worked for the state highway department.

I have a large library, and enjoy reading many of my books again, but I have always enjoyed this small directory more than any of my collection. I have gone through it and reminisced ever since I was a child. Trust you will remember many of these friends also.

Visitor praises Weathervane Terrace Hotel

It's so great when we get letters from our visitors with compliments on their stay. We were extremely pleased to receive a letter from a family from Appleton, Wisconsin. They stayed at the Weathervane Terrace Hotel and, upon arriving back home, realized they had left their son's blanket and teddy bear. When they called the Weathervane Terrace they were happy to find the manager and staff went out of their way to assure them that these articles were in the mail. They even went a step further and checked with the family to make sure they had received these articles. To quote the guests "we received unbelievable caring and compassion from Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites. It made us realize that in a world of competitiveness and business, there are still people who care enough to put this aside and make one little boy smile again." Great job Weathervane!

Be sure to attend the Grand Opening!

Football team excited for new year

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With a strong passing game and 11 returning seniors, the Charlevoix High School varsity football team should be tough this year, according to coach Don Jess.

On top of this, since this is Jess' second year, with this many returning seniors this means more players understand his way of coaching.

"The kids really picked up on things. They understand the offense and the defense. We are a lot further ahead than last year," he said.

On the offense, Jess is returning senior quarterback Cody Crain and wide receiver Ben Bergmann. Additionally, he said he has good junior running backs coming in.

On the defense, he said they will be tough. While they are not the biggest in the conference, Jess said they will be fast.

"I have a good mix of athletic and tough kids," he said.

Out of the 23 players on the team, 11 of them are seniors. They are: Crain, Bergmann, Mitchell Klooster, Nate Dube, Jeremy Godfrey, Michael Wojan, Jake Teuscher, Ezra Bakker, Jaimen Waha, Tony Miller and Robert Gretsch.

The rest of the players are juniors and one sophomore, Ray Jones.

"They are a good group of seniors who are good leaders. Everyone seems to be getting along real well too," he said. "The team unity is getting stronger every day."

While Jess highlights a lot of strengths on the team, he said the weaknesses are hard to tell right now. He was able to say they need to shore up the offensive line with their blocking skills.

"We have to be able to run the ball," he said.

As for the other teams in the region and conference, Jess said he did not want to say at this time who he is looking out for.

"I don't want to single teams out," he said.

However, the key to winning against those other teams this year will be stopping the run.

"That is something we couldn't do last year, that and staying healthy," he said.

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross country teams have state in mind

Both of the Charlevoix High School girls' and boys' cross country teams are looking good this year, according to their coaches.

Boys' coach Ken Plude said his team has a good chance of meeting its goal of getting to the state finals this year.

"We are definitely a top 20 type of team," he said.

However, he pointed out the team has a very tough regional, composed of many other teams who are in the top 20 cross country teams of the state, such as Harbor Springs, Benzie County Central, Mason County Central and Evart.

"It is a five way race," Plude said.

Plude said while the team is very good, they are still a young team. He has only three seniors this year, of which he believes only two will make the varsity running team.

"A majority of the team are sophomores and juniors," he said.

In fact, Plude said his top runner is Brandon Stevens, a junior. Second would be Scott Plude, a sophomore. In the third slot, he said Jacob Wimmer has been very consistent.

As for the other seven spots, he said the team has 10 guys who will be fighting it out for them.

"We have a lot of depth," he said.

Plude added, "This is probably the strongest group, as a whole, that I have ever had. Everybody has a good shot at breaking 20 minutes in the 5 kilometer."

Added to this, he said the runners are fun and hard workers.

While the boys' team is young, the girls' team is senior laden with 13 seniors out of 26 runners.

According to coach Mary Plude, this provides the team with good leadership. Added to this, she said she has a lot of sophomore runners that are very strong runners.

"While nine or ten girls can be on the varsity team it is going to be a really tough fight for varsity," she said.

In addition to this depth and leadership, Mary will be returning several runners with state experience. Theresa Martin, Sonya Plude, Anne Taylor, Lindi Edger, Mia Matchett, Caitlin Taylor and Emily Westenbroek all have been to the state meet, giving the team an added strength.

"We have a lot of experience and a lot of depth," Mary said. "Plus there are good girls on the junior varsity squad that are beating our varsity numbers from last year."

She said, to break down what this means, last year's team finished in eleventh at the state finals. This year's team has five runners whose times are already a minute better than last year.

As for the other teams in the conference, Plude said she believes they are stronger this year than the regional teams. She said it will be a battle between Charlevoix, Elk Rapids and Traverse City.

"If we are this strong at conference, we are doing really well," she said.

Golf team could be the upset in conference

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With the team showing improvement with each match, Charlevoix varsity golf coach Jim Glynn said his team could do really well this year.

"If we hold our own this year and keep on improving, we could have a real fine team," he said.

He said the team's improvement could lead them to an upset in the conference by winning a championship on Sept. 29 at Antrim Dells.

However, Glynn said the conference will be tough and is one of the toughest in the state, with four teams in it that are ranked among the top 15 in the state. To even get in third place in the conference, Charlevoix will have to battle Harbor Springs all year, Glynn said.

And in the regional, they want to be one of the top three teams in the regional tournament. The top three teams advance to the state finals.

The team is composed of seven varsity players, with seven waiting in the wings on junior varsity. Each week, the players compete against each other for a slot on the varsity team, which makes the makeup of the varsity team ever changing — especially in the last few slots.

But, Glynn said the team has 10 returning players, making them very strong, but very young, with only two seniors, co-captains Chris Wyniawskyj and Chris Golski.

The strength of this team is the balance these players bring to their scoring. However, with this balance, Glynn said their consistency in maintaining it is a weakness.

"They need to keep it (their scores) steady," he said.

Another strength is the good shooting of two players in particular. Glynn said both Wyniawskyj and Kyle DeYoung are shooting in the 70s. This makes the first three slots on the team easy to fill.

With Golski showing marked improvement in his play and the strong shooting of Wyniawskyj and DeYoung, Glynn said the real battle on the team are the fourth, fifth and sixth positions. Glynn has several players fighting for those slots, and all are working hard at it.

Soccer team facing a rebuilding year

By JEREMY MCBAIN

While the varsity soccer team really doesn't have a lot of experience, coach Josh Block said they should be showing a lot of improvement as the season goes on.

Block said he has 21 students out of the team, but only seven seniors and only three players have two or more years of soccer experience. Therefore he is teaching a lot of fundamental skills.

"But, I think that is what is going to help us be a good team later in the season," he said. "We are making the game simple and all playing food fundamentals."

To further put the team in a good spot, Block said he has got a good group of kids that "truly want to learn the game and become better at it."

For example, Block's starting goalie, Shannon Gillespie, has only got a few weeks of soccer under his belt, but due to his natural instincts and ability to learn the game he is doing pretty good at it.

"By the end of the year, we should be doing really good," he said.

Another player to watch this year, according to Block, is Andrew Tillotson. Block said he has been spending a lot of time this summer working on his skills and should be a good defensive player this season.

Block also spoke highly of seniors Curtis Petzak, Andrew Mailloux and Sparky Nitchman, saying they have a lot of talent and should be able to help the team greatly.

As for the teams to beat this year, Block said he isn't even concerned with that.

"This year that is not as important. Brining these players together on the field and getting them to play good soccer is," he said.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Basketball team has a lot of depth

By JEREMY MCBAIN

Charlevoix High School varsity girls' basketball coach Keith Haske is excited about this year's team — and his first team as the girls' coach.

Haske — also the varsity boys' basketball team coach — said the season is already looking real good, the players are great to work with and he has a lot of skills he can work with among them.

"These kids have picked right up on our philosophy and what we are trying to do on the basketball court," Haske said. "They are working hard and they are coming together as a team."

This year's team consists of 14 players with six seniors and seven returning players from last year. Among those, senior Grace Farrell has been playing since her freshman year, giving her four years of varsity experience, and senior Sarah Cross has been on varsity for four years. This not only gives Haske a lot of experience to work with, but also a lot of depth.

"In the preseason, our standout player was Grace Farrell. She is (6 foot, 2 inches), plays inside and is real tough. But, as we play a few games it is becoming evident that it is a whole team," he said.

In each game the scoring has been very balanced between players, with no one making a real break-out. This means any one of the players that go onto the court could be the leading scorer.

"Our depth is our strength. We can play a lot of kids and it really doesn't change the game that much," Haske said.

However, with the strengths come the weaknesses. This year, Haske believes the team's weakness is its rebounding and being consistent on offense.

"Every so often we go in a funk where we don't put the ball in the hole," he said.

While Haske works on improving these weaknesses and working on the strengths, he is also going to be keeping an eye on several teams in the conference.

He said the teams to beat this year are Harbor Springs, Traverse City St. Francis and East Jordan. In nonconference play, he said St. Ignace is a tough team.

Because of the strength of these teams, Haske said while the Rayder will probably do good in the conference, whoever wins conference will have "earned it."

As for the future, Haske said, "My prediction is we are just going to keep getting better. We will hopefully play our best right at the end of the year."

City Council tours plant

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Before the Sept. 7 City Council meeting, council members were given a tour of the Wastewater Treatment Plant.

There were there to view the updates that have been made in order to fix the problems that led to the possibility of fines from the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ).

Problems at the Wastewater Treatment Plant reach back over a three year period. With a new superintendent in charge, the hope is that the problems won't happen again.

"We've changed a lot of the ways we keep records and handle records," Superintendent Jim Caldwell said.

Originally, bench sheets where initial readings of the treated water are recorded didn't match up with the reports. In some instances, the bench sheets had been doctored or erased.

Caldwell said the Quality Assur-

Handicapped parking survey almost done

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

At the Sept. 20 city council meeting, city officials may present information regarding the survey they conducted to determine the amount of usage handicapped spaces receive in Charlevoix.

But, currently, the survey does not appear to address whether or not the city is compliant with the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990.

Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he is still looking into how ADA regulations affect Charlevoix.

"We believe we are compliant," he said.

According to the information provided regarding the survey, one parking lot appears to not comply with federal ADA regulations.

The parking lot between Antrim and Mason streets has 35 total parking spaces, but only one handicapped parking space. ADA regulations state that a parking lot with 26 to 50 spaces is required to have two handicapped parking spaces.

"We've noted a deficiency in one lot," Halverson said.

Halverson said the number one reason for conducting the survey was to determine what the current usage is of the 17 handicapped parking spaces throughout Charlevoix.

He said the survey was prompted hy concern expressed by the public for more parking and that he was asked to do a comprehensive report, which he won't comment on until completed.

He said if the survey shows the spaces are constantly full, then the city will look into creating more handicapped spaces regardless of what the standards are.

Eric Holland from the Department of Justice said in a previous article that a city has to meet the minimum requirements for handicapped parking hy law.

If those requirements are met and the city wished to look into more handicapped parking, then the survey could be helpful in determining if there is indeed a need for more spaces.

Halverson said he has been a police officer since the ADA laws were implemented, but wasn't sure whether or not a parking lot compliant under then-current ADA laws had to be brought up to date with current requirements.

Girl injured

A 17-year-old Charlevoix girl, Caitlin Ernst, was injured around 8 p.m., Friday on Bridge Street, near the Dairy Queen when she was struck by a motorcycle driven by a 20-year-old Charlevoix man. According to police, Ernst ran out into the road and was struck by the motorcyclist, not before a friend tried to pull her to safety. Ernst was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital were she was treated for injuries. According to her mother, she is at home and will be fine.

The selection committee recently met to determine the award recipients, which will be announced at the ceremony. The selection committee members for 2004 include Bev Holden and Joan Tebo, Walloon Lake; Nancy Porter, Charlevoix; Terri Warnos, East Jordan; Marilyn Davies, Melissa Keiswetter, and Maureen Nicholson, Petoskey; and Jim Gillespie and Kathy Lott, Harbor Springs.

"In response to suggestions from the community, we are offering a new type of ticket for the awards ceremony and dessert for $10, in addition to the $40 ticket for the entire evening," said Dalto.

Awards will be presented for Visual Artist, Performing Artist, Arts and Cultural Organization, Arts in Education, Arts and Cultural Leadership, Individual Patron Award, Benefactor Award and Lifetime Achievement Award.

Ticket prices are $40 per person and include champagne, beer, wine, non-alcoholic beverages, appetizer style dinner, dessert and awards ceremony; and $10 for the awards ceremony and dessert only.

For more information or to reserve a ticket, please call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

Corrections

Also, in last week's edition of the Courier, a picture on page 17 should have been identified as the forty-fifth reunion of the class of 1959.

'Just a thought'

You may have noticed the series of stories in the Charlevoix Courier lately about handicapped parking and handicapped accessibility in Charlevoix.

The reason is we believe this is an important issue, especially as our population ages and finds themselves having more trouble navigating without some assistance.

It seems that Charlevoix may be behind in abiding by the Americans with Disabilities Act when it comes to parking and accessibility of our community. I say our community "may" because our city officials do not know if we are in compliance or not and are studying it.

It bothers me that the city does not know if it is in compliance with an act that has been in existence since 1990. Our city officials, at least those responsible for city parking, should be able to say, confidently and clearly, "Yes, we are compliant" as soon as they are asked by a citizen. They should not need to study the issue 14 years after the act was passed.

Our city should have made itself compliant with the law as soon as it was enacted. And, every time that the law was updated, we should have made the necessary changes. If our city officials can't take time to learn the law, then what kind of example does that give to regular citizens?

It further bothers me when I hear they are studying the issue. There is nothing to really study here. We are either in compliance or we are not. If we are not in compliance, then we must — according to federal law — make the necessary changes.

Furthermore it bothers me that this study seems to be focused on how much the current handicapped parking spaces are being used. If this type of study is being used to determine if we need more handicapped parking spaces and we are already in compliance with the law, then I say, "Go for it."

The problem is we don't even know for sure if we are compliant with the law. That should be answered first.

According to federal regulation, all you need to do is count the number of parking spaces in each parking lot and count the number of handicapped parking spaces in each of those lots. How many total parking spaces you have determines the number of handicapped parking spaces you must have in each parking lot. For example, a parking lot with 25 parking spaces must have at least one handicapped parking space. A parking lot with 26 parking spaces must have at least two handicapped parking spaces.

These figures can be obtained by any citizen or government official from the United States Department of Justice.

So far, I am baffled by our city administration's actions on this issue. Being in violation or not being in violation with the Americans with Disabilities Act does not need studies to answer. It is a very simple thing. You must have a certain number of handicapped parking spaces in each parking lot based on the total number of parking spaces in that parking lot.

Just count the spaces.

Challenge

Along the same lines of handicapped accessibility in Charlevoix, I am going to make a challenge.

I am going to make this challenge to all members of our local government, such as the mayor, city council, City Manager Mike Wiesner, Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson and Charlevoix Street Superintendent John Martin. Any other government official, including county officials, are welcome to take this challenge.

I challenge you to spend a few hours one day in a wheelchair in Charlevoix.

As part of this challenge, you must do what I made my reporter Courtney E. Pace do for a story she wrote in this newspaper about a month back; you must navigate your way from the Charlevoix Courier office, to the East Park bandshell, back to the Courier office and through the Charlevoix County Building — all without any help.

I will keep an eye on you to make sure you don't careen down any hills into Round Lake or get nailed by a car as you cross a street. And I will document your progress in a story to be published in a future edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

We will secure a wheelchair for you. All you need are your hands and the bravery to take on this challenge. Feel free to contact me at the Courier to set this up.

P.S. — City Council Member Sherm Chamberlain is excused from this challenge as he has spent some time in a wheelchair already due to an accident a few years back. He already has an idea of the challenges that face the handicapped in Charlevoix.

Letters to the editor

Response to Winn

Editor:

In regards to John Winn's letter, I noticed a few inaccuracies. While the site plan for 125 Belvedere was approved for trees and hedges, it didn't state the height. In marine commercial the bushes must be 4 feet, on city land there is no limit, so the city has an obligation to keep them at a safe level — 4 feet.

When Mr. Winn built 123 Belvedere he agreed that if he built on 125 that he would leave a 60 foot viewing corridor. He then changed his mind. The vote was five to one for approval. Barnes, Bellows, Witthoeft, Chamberlain and Carlson voted aye. I voted nay and said, "I think this is wrong." Mr. Chamberlain worked for Mr. Winn, so it is questionable if he should have voted.

His remarks on the assisted living issue were also in error. I wanted to fire the five planners because they voted down a motion to go to the ZBA and then voted to hold a public meeting for a special use permit, without a lot split or an approved site plan. Just last month they asked for a lot split. This time it was reduced from 3.38 acres to 3 acres. Same huge building.

There was land available and still is land available without building in RI or RII. When asked by a planner how we could put this to rest, I said if they rescind the motion I'll drop the charges. The answer: "No Way."

Next they hired a high dollar attorney and ran up $5,000 in fees. His idea, they rescind the motion and I drop the charges. I advised the council to not pay, but they did.

I don't work for developers or special interest groups. I work for the city and all of the people. If I'm re-elected I'll continue to work for all the city, all the time.

My goal is and has been, to make the city accountable to the taxpayers.

Proud of lifeguards

Editor:

Both the Charlevoix Courier and the Petoskey News-Review have credited two Charlevoix lifeguards, Michelle Rowe and Kiel Tilley, with saving the lives of two young swimmers recently at Lake Michigan beach.

We at the Charlevoix Area Community Pool are especially proud of their achievement and our role in it. Kiel and Michelle took their lifeguard training at our pool under the direction of Al Gooch and his assistant, Betsy Granstra. They also trained many of the lifeguards at area beaches, Belvedere Club and Chicago Club.

Another Winn response

Editor:

Charlevoix is the only town in America where when we argue about "The Bushes" we're not talking about George W. and Laura, we're talking about real bushes. John Winn's recent letter to the editor suggested that he did not require any variances to plant his wall of bushes in front of his home. The mayor has a different opinion. Who cares? The bushes are not safe. They are so tall and close to his driveway that they obstruct the view as you exit. Mr. Winn is a good community guy. I hope he just does the right thing and trims his bushes so we can all enjoy a safe stroll down Belvedere Avenue.

Mr. Winn also blames the mayor for the unnecessary legal fees associated with this year's skirmish between planners and the mayor over an assisted living center's placement in a residential neighborhood. He lays all the blame at the feet of the mayor and that's just wrong. City attorney Jim Young in a Jan. 19, opinion stated, "Neither the Planning Commission nor the council acted wisely." Had planners and the city council worked together they could have alleviated all the legal drama.

The mayor took an aggressive stand on the assisted living center, not because he does not like old people, but because he was trying to protect the homeowners who he represents. As for the legal fees, the mayor never approved them. Those legal fees were approved on March 15, 2004 by a majority vote of the Charlevoix City Council with our Third Ward incumbent Sherm Chamberlain leading the charge.

I also have been upset with many of the actions of the city and the council but I did not call a lawyer when I ran into trouble. I decided to change the system the old fashioned way, by running for office. If you're tired of all the lawsuits and no bid contracts, I would urge you to join me in this effort by voting for Dave Scott this fall. We'll work together to solve our problems. Good for us, bad for lawyers!

Dave Scott
Candidate for Third Ward
Charlevoix City Council

Support community

Editor:

At the Charlevoix Board of Education meeting on Oct. 14, 2002, the Library Building Committee proposed an exchange of the current library for the old middle school property. At that meeting my sister and I gave a signed pledge to every school board member that we would remove the deed restriction related to educational use of the current library property if the properties were exchanged. After meeting with the school board building and site committee, the library building committee was told that the school had no interest in the current library property. We were told they had land by the bus garage and other options. Also, the new high school plans included new administrative offices.

Dr. Sturock's statement that the school could not give away this asset because it belongs to the community ignores the fact that the community would be served by using that asset as part of the new library project — a project that serves everyone of all ages in the community.

The taxpayers for both the school and the library are exactly the same people. They already owned both properties yet the school forced the city to pay them $635,000 for the old middle school. Now the school is trying to take another $600,000 from the library.

I urge the school board members to support our community and this library project just as they ask the taxpayers to support their projects and programs.

Thank you all

Editor:

I don't even know where to begin to express my deepest gratitude to this community and some of its most wonderful citizens. Friday night, Sept. 10, my daughter, Caitlin Ernst, was involved in an accident in front of Dairy Queen. When her friend, Caitlin Cole, called me to ask me to come to town because of the accident, I am certain I lost a few years from my life. My most vivid memory of arriving at the scene was the sea of familiar faces surrounding my daughter. I can tell you my heart lightened some when I saw several other mothers caring for my daughter until I arrived. We owe her seventh grade basketball coach, Amy Putman, a debt of gratitude for initially managing the situation and seeing that emergency help was called. While I am sure Amy feels she didn't do anything special, it means the world to Caitlin and our family that she was there.

The ride in the ambulance was tempered because the man driving, Brent Price, was not a stranger, but a member of a close-knit community that could reassure me simply by his calm presence and his familiarity. When we arrived at the hospital I could tell my daughter her nurse was Alicia's mom, Mrs. McDonough, and she was reassured — there is security in that kind of friendship. Sue Lamb arrived in the emergency room not in her usual hospital uniform, but in street clothes. She told me she had heard that a member of her daughter Brittany's track team had been hurt and wanted to know what she could do to help. She was there for at least two hours assisting with X-rays and CT scans and generally helping the staff. Does anyone stop to think that people still do things like that in this day and age?

The first chance I had to step into the waiting room to reassure my husband and family, I was overwhelmed by the number of friends waiting with concern and love for my daughter. I am humbled by this experience. My family and I have been lucky to become friends with people I have always felt were good, kind, decent people, but Friday night they overwhelmed our hearts. Equally as humbling is the knowledge that there is a long list of people who, although not in the waiting room, would have done anything to help at a moments notice.

I would like to extend a special thank you and my deepest gratitude to Chris and Shane "Dad" Cole, Chris Michaud, Jeff and Shelly Stevens, Debbie Murray and Mark and Vicky Greyerbiehl. They are some of the nicest people I know, who also cherish the importance of family and community. Also, thank you Roger and Kali Crain for helping my daughter Riley through her fears that night and her sister's trauma. A special thank you to Carla Blacker for helping Caitlin's stepbrother and sister, Austin and Audrie Themm, be at the hospital and helping our blended families be together in this very scary time.

Most of all, I would like to thank Caitlin's friends: Caitlin Cole, thank you for trying to reach out and pull her back in time. We love you very much and know what really happened that evening; Stevie Murray for staying by Caitlin's side and being strong for her. Liz Jadwin and Shannon Dibble for helping pick out the goodies and your unfailing friendship. Also, thank you to Kenny Anderson and Logan Niswander for helping notify the right people and being good friends. How do you express your gratitude to an entire community for something like this? It isn't just that my daughter has amazing friends who stayed by her in a very frightening situation, or that each parent was there for me and my husband; it is knowing that you belong to a community that truly cares and is so interconnected that every child is a member of every family. We have received phone calls of concern and open-ended offers of assistance from, what would seem to be, the farthest reaches of our circle of acquaintance — our favorite clerk at the video sore, the secretary from the middle school, Caitlin's previous employer, my co-workers, our neighbors and a myriad of other kind people. We even received the most beautiful bouquet of hand picked flowers from our young neighbor, Alicia Valler.

This is a wonderful community and we are deeply grateful for everything everyone did, and we are blessed to be a part of something so special.

Maureen and Geoff Themm, Caitlin, Riley and Mac Ernst

Sign problems

Editor:

As a long-time visitor to the Charlevoix area and now as a semi-permanent resident, we have grown to appreciate our unique community and its people.

No town of our size in the midwest can compare with us in golf, ski hill, beaches, boating and other recreational facilities. Our merchants are helpful and our eating establishments are excellent, but best of all we have outstanding citizens.

However, one thing has been bothering us the last few years and this summer it reached new heights. The signs, billboards and others were on every street corner and road announcing some upcoming event. We know these events are important but it seems we have a craft show, blood drive or art show sign posted all summer long. Coming in from the north the golf course looked most of the summer like the old Times Square in New York City. Why not some sort of "event board" on each side of town? Our friends in Petoskey and Harbor Springs seldom have these tacky signs. It may be time for our city officials and chamber to get together to solve this problem.

Thank you.

Residents to take part in annual shoreline cleanup

From 9 a.m. until noon, on Sept. 19, volunteers will gather along Michigan's lakes and waterways to participate in the September Adopt-a-Beach Cleanup.

Coordinated by the Lake Michigan Federation, volunteers remove trash from shorelines and waterways and record their findings. The information collected will be used in pollution prevention and education efforts to help make local waterways clean and healthy.

The federation has coordinated Michigan's volunteer effort in the cleanup since 1991. During the 2003 event last fall, 2,500 volunteers removed 12,000 pounds of trash from 194 miles of shoreline in Michigan.

The cleanup is part of the federation's Adopt-a-Beach Program and an international effort coordinated by the Ocean Conservancy in Washington D.C.

In Michigan, the cleanup is supported with funds provided by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality Coastal Management Program and the L.C. and Margaret Walker Foundation.

"The cleanup is successful every year because it's a way that people can play a "hands on" role in ensuring that our shorelines and waterways are safe and clean," said Jamie Morton, federation staff and state coordinator for the annual event.

Willing volunteers gather at designated cleanup sites along shorelines or waterways where they receive instruction and materials to conduct their cleanup. Participants can be individuals or groups, such as schools, Boy and Girl Scout troops, environmental clubs and community volunteer groups. Many businesses, such as Pharmicia Corporation in Kalamazoo, encourage their employees to participate.

There are many cleanups scheduled around the state. To locate sites, contact Jamie Morton at the Federation, toll-free at (866) 850-0745 or jmorton@lakemichigan.org.

The Annual Lake Michigan Beach Cleanup will be 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., Sept. 18 in connection with this. For more information, contact Daniel Mann at (231) 237-0360.

Obituaries

Warren Wayne Belding: Feb. 12, 1947 - Sept. 11, 2004

Warren Wayne "Jeep" Belding, 57, of Charlevoix passed after a lifelong struggle with asthma and respiratory complications.

Warren was born Feb. 12, 1947 and died in his home Sept. 11, 2004 of cancer. Topper was at The Gate.

Warren was a golfer, caddy, former greenskeeper, fisherman, waiter, bartender, Tiger fan, teacher, poet and promoter of various golf opens and the annual Belvie-Townie softball tournament.

Warren was happiest when people gathered to eat and drink. It was comedy lunch time when summer cousins came. Long evening meals were shared in every season. "There's eating and then there's dining," he would say. And always the Memorial Day "Changing of the Fish" and the Labor Day yard party that closed the season.

Survivors include his beloved wife Suzanne, "Z"; his daughter, Jennifer; his twin grandchildren, Kaylee and Cody; his sister, Sharon (Roger) Knutson, their children Karin, Anne, Ben, Steve and Sam; his brother, Paul, his children, Drew and Heather. Suzanne's mother, Gail (Zurawski) and her husband, Larry Schaefer survive. And her sisters, Sheila (Jim) Malone, their children, Patrick and Abby; Andrea (Jeremy) Lewis; Clare Zurawski; and brothers, Stephen (Dena), their children, Robert and William; Matthew and his wife Lynn; and her hrother, Paul.

Warren had uncountable, endless friends in Michigan and in Florida where Jeep and Z enjoyed many seasons.

Warren encouraged all of us to open our heart's mind. He lived his life way outside the hox. Whether family or friend, he loved us without reservation. Have fun or don't was the motto.

Respecting Jeep's wishes there will be no formal services. A celehration of his life took place Sept. 13, at the Argonne Supper Club.

Memorials may be directed to the Bergmann Center or the charity of your choice.

Hospice looking for volunteers

Hospice of Northwest Michigan, in partnership with Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which serves Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties is looking for caring and compassionate individuals who would like to join its family of hospice volunteers.

Hospice will be conducting a volunteer training program starting on Sept. 28. The sessions will run for four weeks, from 3-5 p.m., meeting Tuesdays and Thursdays. The classes will be conducted at the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency in Bellaire.

The first session will be a hospice orientation and discussion of the role of the volunteer. Each class will deal with a different aspect of training: grief and bereavement, death and dying, communication skills, understanding the family, spiritual care of the family, care and comfort measures, ethical issues and personal stress.

Hospice volunteers provide a variety of services, including respite care to the terminally ill and their family.

Anyone who has been a caregiver knows how important it is to have some time for themselves, and our hospice volunteers provide this very needed help by staying at the home so the caregiver can get away or just to rest.

Volunteers provide much help, whether it is with patients, in the office or helping with fund-raising - they are truly the cement of the hospice program and make it unique.

Please call the Hospice of Northwest Michigan office at (231) 536-2842 if you are interested in becoming a volunteer.

Developer to build new hangars at city's airport

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

During the Sept. 7 city council meeting, council voted to let a developer waive the .70 cent land lease fee for two years on three of the four hangars he wants to build.

Developer Paul E. Mashni will construct two buildings housing two hangars each out at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport. He will pay the land lease fee on one hangar he is going to use for himself, but the fee for the other three hangars will be waived for two years. After 25 years the city will own the hangars.

"I'm more than happy to move forward with that arrangement," he said.

Mashni said at the council meeting that due to the increase in the cost of steel, there is a discrepancy in the cost to build the hangar and their current market values. Mashni said this isn't a money deal and that he is just trying to get his money's worth.

"I don't want to lose money on a half a million dollar project," he said during the meeting.

Mashni said his interest in Charlevoix stems from his desire to house his own plane. He said there weren't any other hangars available at the time.

The first four hangars are under the two-year arrangement, but the last six will fall under the old one-year arrangement. Mashni said he hopes to sell all of the hangars except the one he is keeping for his own personal use. He said the 10 hangars he wants to build will provide more development at the airport.

"It's a nice opportunity for us to continue along the line of improvement," he said.

Mashni said construction will probably start in the next two weeks and is projected to be finished within two months from the date of beginning.

Council member Karen I. Campbell did not vote to approve the project. The current situation at the airport dealing with keeping track of where and how money is being spent is something Campbell sees as a priority before allowing more building.

"Well, I just voted against it because I thought we don't need any more hangars until we get everything straightened out," she said.

Campbell said for right now the agreement is for one builder and not others, but she does think the council's decision may possibly set a precedent for future builders.

"That's why I voted no," she said.

If one builder is allowed to construct then Campbell said others will want the same privileges and then hangars will be constructed "all the way down to Norwood Township."

"Whatever will be, will be," she said.

Mayor Gabe Campbell said he isn't sure about the two year deal.

"We probably, maybe shouldn't have extended it to two years," he said.

Mayor Campbell said council used to grant a one year land lease waive, but thinks the deal was fair to both sides. Through the agreement, Mashni won't lose much money and the city will have hangars out at the airport.

"It's good for the airport," he said.

Allowing the two year free for one developer may set a precedent for others in the future.

"Once we set a rule we can't go back and forth," he said.

However, Campbell said there may not be that much interest to build due to the economy.

"Unless there's a change of direction in the country, I don't see people putting a lot of money into anything," he said.

City Council candidate Dave Scott attended the meeting and questioned the deal being made. He said even though Mashni was given a break it's still a bad deal.

"I think the entire situation needs to be reviewed and taken a look at," he said.

Scott said it wasn't fair to give Mashni a special break and that there is a problem with the current cost for hangar development at the Charlevoix airport

"Historically, it's very different for private developers to build hangars because the city charges high costs," he said.

The airports in Harbor Springs and Boyne City have more attractive programs, resulting in more development, he said.

"The city doesn't do enough to encourage hangars," Scott said.

Scott said the airport receives over $1 million in federal grant money each year, which is more than other airports the same size receive in the area.

Scott is concerned where all that money is being used and why the city doesn't build hangars itself with that money. If the city doesn't want to build hangars itself, Scott said the city should lower the cost for all developers in order to make it more affordable for them to build at the airport.

Since the cost to build is high and the city doesn't build its own hangars, Scott said something needs to change.

"We need to look at building a new plan," he said.

Council member Bill Haggard said he thinks the agreement with Mashni is special and not necessarily something that will be a precedent.

Haggard said the agreement is fair to the city and Mashni. He said it may bring more business to Charlevoix since there will be more hangars for people to utilize.

He said the airport is a way of transportation and being able to provide housing for visiting airplanes could draw more interest.

The Charlevoix airport is more expensive for people to build hangars on than other airports, but Haggard said not by much.

"We may be just a little higher, but it's a real popular airport," he said.

When Jim & I became "northerners" in April of 2000, so did my Mom & Dad, Betty & Bob. They had been married 58 years and It was time for us to take care of them and their lives to be easier. Mom had Alzheimer's and other health issues; Dad had a laundry list of Illnesses including heart failure.

We had a wonderful first year together on the lake. Dad could fish and take Mom for rides in their golf cart. In fall of 2001, Mom began to fail & we were encouraged to call Hospice of Little Traverse Bay. They helped us care for Mom until she died on April 27, 2002.

Our journey with Hospice didn't end there. Shortly after Mom died, Dad became more ill. Hospice was with us again until he died on August 5, 2003.

The people of Hospice of Little Traverse Bay are the angels who hold you up during the journey you make with your loved ones. We were blessed to have Hospice with us for almost a year and a half. It takes truly gifted people to make the journey to death another of God's miracles. We love you, Hospice, and always will.

Peace & hugs, Kathy & Jim Weidman

Is a city sewer line to Ironton in the future?

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

While back in July the city asked City Council to pay for an update of the master plan which would include a sewer line running to Castle Farms, which would make it appear a line is in the works, it seems this stems from what was just a simple question by Castle Farms.

Castle Farm co-owner Richard Mueller Jr. said they were just trying to understand the situation as far as sewers go and what the cost would be.

"Castle Farms has all the water it needs to run its facility and all the sewer septic it needs to run its facility so there's no need at this time or in the foreseeable future that we would need any kind of hook up to the city," he said.

Mueller said one concern for Castle Farms if a city sewer line was to be built is the sprawl that could occur. He said with the type of facility Castle Farms is, there is a lot of traffic that comes and goes and a person who built a house on the property line may get annoyed.

Mueller said a sewer line would be nice should Castle Farms build a hotel next door. He said at this time there isn't a need for a hotel and the concept is merely an idea.

"We don't really have a desire to build a hotel," he said.

Regardless, City Manager Michael Wiesner asked that a study for the master plan be conducted using the Sewer Fund to pay for the engineering services. The study was never conducted, but Wiesner said it's a possibility that the study may still come to pass.

And while it may have been just Castle Farms making an inquiry, the sewer line would run down M-66 all the way into Ironton.

"City Council will extend sewer service into the townships at no cost to city users," Wiesner said.

But, this has caused some to question this plan, especially considering a developer in that area is fighting in court to build a mobile home park.

City Council member Shirley Gibson said she doesn't see what advantage running a sewer line into Ironton has for the city of Charlevoix.

"I think that they're using Castle Farms as the red herring for unbridled development into Eveline Township," she said.

Gibson said she would never be in favor of the sewer line.

"We've wasted enough city tax dollars on oversized, illegal sewers for developers," she said.

Wiesner said Dawson Way, a local developer, and himself discussed general use of the sewer. But, Wiesner also said Way mentioned the possibility of putting in his own sewer for his mobile home park.

However, Way said he doesn't know anything about a possible sewer line and wouldn't comment on whether or not he is looking into the possibility of putting in his own sewer.

Wiesner said the townships were asked in 1994 whether they'd like the ability to have city sewer services. However, he said the city may not ask the current residents again and just use the original master plan as a guide.

Ferry Road improvements questioned

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Road improvements on Ferry Road in Eveline Township are creating some questions among residents who wonder if it is for a large development, but township officials say that is not true.

According to some residents of the township, there have been tales that the Ferry Road improvements are for a controversial housing development by Dawson Way, that is currently in court. However, the road improvements in question were planned well before the Way issue and part of an overall road improvement plan by the township, said supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski.

"It is mainly because that road was in really bad shape," he said.

Skrzeczkoski said the township has a list of roads that it wants to improve over the years and they try to improve one of those roads each year. Because the township is broken up by the south arm of Lake Charlevoix, he said the township tries to spend two years working on roads to the east of the split and one year on roads to the west of the split.

However, he said the township does not follow this plan to 100 percent. Sometimes a road will become so bad that it needs to jump up on the list.

Skrzeczkoski said he has heard the rumors that these road improvements on Ferry Road are for Way. He said, in the Ferry Road case, discussions for road improvements to this area began about three years ago — before the Way property issue.

"I know where some of those rumors are coming from. Some of those same people were at that meeting when we talked about this road," he said.

While the road is being repaved to make it smoother, the county is also widening it slightly to allow for walkers and bikers. Skrzeczkoski said the township began adding paved sides to the roads for walkers and bikers about six years ago.

Construction of the road is being done by the Charlevoix County Road Commission, but is paid for by the township. The cost of the road is $217,143 and will be completed around Sept. 17.

Mayoral candidates discuss city spending

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

ELECTION 2004

City spending is something people care about when it's their tax dollars that are financing the city.

Mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson look into what the city has done and what it can do.

Incumbent Campbell said he has had some concern in the past about how the city was spending money, especially on studies.

Gabe Campbell

He said the city conducts too many studies without getting anything out of them. There were six or eight traffic studies conducted, but Campbell said no one did anything that was suggested on the studies.

Norman Carlson

The timing of the traffic light at the intersection of Bridge and Clinton streets was changed during the most recent study, but not much else.

"If they want a traffic study, dig up the old ones," Campbell said.

He is also concerned because local people have just as much knowledge as the outsiders that conduct the studies. Campbell said the city wanted to bring an outside source in to conduct a survey on Mt. McSauba instead of talking to people who work with the facility on a day-to-day basis.

"I think that there's people in the community that could help us without spending an arm and a leg," he said.

The recent finding of City Treasurer Rick Brandi writing a check for over $222,000 in April 2004 for construction work done on Belvedere and Michigan avenues in 2001 outrages Campbell.

Campbell said with a city manager form of government, the city manager should take responsibility.

"We need some kind of accountability," he said.

Campbell said he has been told it takes too long to compile a monthly report, but that isn't true.

"We don't need four secretaries typing for five weeks," he said. "We need only a one page thing."

Campbell said City Manager Michael Wiesner told him he talks to department heads on a daily basis. Campbell wants to know why his secretary doesn't write down what is being said.

"It's only long and drawn out if you want it to be," he said.

With regards to handicapped parking, Campbell thinks the city has wasted time on conducting a usage study of city handicapped parking spaces.

"A lot of people use studies for things because it takes the heat off of them," he said.

Campbell said Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he was going to conduct a similar survey two years ago.

The Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 states the number of handicapped parking spaces required per number of total spaces in one parking lot.

"Irregardless of what the ADA says, we should be seen as a community that cares about people and put in more spaces," Campbell said.

Backing off from studies is important to Campbell since Wiesner has said the city will be entering a crisis due to state budget cuts.

"We're running out of money, but at the same time we have no problem getting a $20,000 study on Mt. McSauba," Campbell said.

Campbell said he will watch where the money goes and make sure services are protected.

"I don't even want to think about cutting services," he said.

Mayoral candidate Carlson said everyone has had concerns about what the city has spent money on in the past, but Charlevoix isn't that different from other cities.

City mayoral candidates' thoughts on spending

MAYOR

"We honestly don't spend any more than any other municipalities," he said.

Carlson said he sometimes questions what the city spends money on including studies.

"We're spending money on a study that tells us something we already know," he said. "These are poor uses of the taxpayer's money."

Although he thinks studies are a waste of money, Carlson does realize that sometimes studies are necessary such as fulfilling a requirement in order to receive a government grant.

"The government never runs like an individual or a business," he said. "It just doesn't happen that way unfortunately. If I ran my business how some governments are run I'd be out of business."

Carlson said he it's hard to think of unwise use of money without the specifics in front of him, but legal actions do come to mind.

Carlson said City Attorney Jim Young gives good advice, but that advice isn't always followed. The whole assisted living situation could have stayed out of court, Carlson said, if people had listened to what Young had to say.

"I think the more recent lawsuits we've had are a big waste of taxpayers' money when they could easily have been avoided by listening to the advice of the city attorney and staff," he said.

Carlson doesn't hold a negative view on city spending for he thinks money has been used wisely at Mt. McSauba, the municipal golf course and BASES teen center.

"That money is spent wisely because a lot of the children in our community benefit from it," he said.

The city also spends money on infrastructure, which Carlson thinks is a good idea. He said Charlevoix takes care of things such as roads and other projects before they become a big problem.

Area parks are another way the city has spent money positively, Carlson said.

With the state enduring a tight budget, the city may receive less funds and have to look at the general budget carefully and cut some services. Carlson said he can't say what should be cut without sitting down with the budget and city staff.

"For something that serious you have to give it an educated look," he said.

Charlevoix gets first win of the season

By B. JON GOHS
Football writer

Charlevoix defeated East Jordan Friday night in a 17-14 overtime handwringer.

All the emphasis on limiting mental mistakes and sticking to the game plan paid off for the Rayders as they not only tied the game with less than three minutes to go in the fourth quarter, but managed to stop East Jordan from scoring in overtime.

And aside from outstanding play by the defense, Coach Jess said, "The kids were pretty focused."

He added, "We didn't make the mistakes we'd been making."

Focus was the name of the game as the Rayders had no fumbles and only one turnover in the form of an interception.

"The only reason East Jordan scored that first quarter TD was because our special teams messed up," said Coach Jess.

Despite numerous drives toward the goal, by the first half Charlevoix was scoreless. But it seems the Rayders play best when under pressure.

Their first TD wasn't scored until the middle of the third quarter by Russell Williams and it was Eddie Waldron's two point conversion in the last three minutes of the fourth quarter which kept the Rayders alive — and East Jordan fans sweating.

Williams carried 17 times for 70 yards and one TD, while Eddie Waldron had four catches for 39 yards in addition to his game tying two point conversion.

And the pressure didn't seem overwhelming for Quarterback Cody Crain either, who kept steady at 58 percent of completed passes this week.

Crain was 14 of 24 for 119 yards with one TD, one interception and he carried eight times for 59 yards.

Receivers of mention were Ben Bergman with six catches carried for 42 yards and Mitchell Klooster with three catches for 40 yards and one TD.

Once in overtime East Jordan took the offensive position and in addition to their botched field goal attempt, Jess said, "We stuffed them up on defense."

High school football overtime rules are such that each team has a chance to score starting on the 10 yard line. If neither team scores the process begins again. Statistically the first team to play defense will come out the winner. And this seems to have proven true as Rayders' Jeff Golovich went on to kick the game winning 20 yard field goal. .

"Give East Jordan credit," he said. "They played a tough game and they were hitting hard."

According to Jess, getting out of the previous two-game slump was the key to getting on the right track.

"We took a huge step getting that first win. With it being as close as it was," Jess said.

And, he added, "We've got some momentum going into the Boyne City game."

Much needed momentum, it seems, that won't be hurt by the fact that Boyne City Ramblers star running back is out with an injury and won't be playing in next weeks game.

"They've beat us pretty good the last couple years," he said. "They're a really well coached football team."

But, Coach Jess said, next weeks game against the Ramblers will be business as usual for the Rayders.

"We've got to stop their (Ramblers) running game," he said. "And we need to get some things going on offense."

The Rayders tackle game two of the conference while facing off against the Boyne City Ramblers 7 p.m., Friday Sept. 17 at Kipke field.

Basketball team remains undefeated

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Basketball writer

Conference play, non-conference play, it makes no difference for the Charlevoix Rayders girls' basketball team.

They have blown away everyone in their path this season.

The Rayders, ranked second in the state in Class C by the Detroit Free Press, won their first Lake Michigan Conference games of the season in impressive fashion, defeating Elk Rapids, 68-21 and previously unbeaten East Jordan, 65-25.

"The kids are really coming together as a team," coach Keith Haske said. "Different nights different people are stepping up. It's been fun to watch."

Both games were similar in that Charlevoix's defensive pressure took its toll on the opponents early and often.

"The two games were like carbon copies of each other," Haske observed. "The defense has been tough for us all year. Our opponents have had plenty of problems handling the ball against our press."

Haske called the effort against the Elks "the best we've played all year long."

Charlevoix used a 19-1 second quarter advantage to blow the game wide open. The Rayders led 45-9 at the half and coasted to the victory.

Grace Farrell led the Rayders with 19 points, 11 rebounds, four assists and three steals. Laura Nitchman had nine points while Shannon Dibble scored eight.

Against the Red Devils, the game was close early with Charlevoix clinging to a 15-10 lead after the first quarter.

For the second time in the week, a huge second quarter put the game away as the Rayders outscored East Jordan, 30-4.

Farrell again led the team in points with 16—scoring 14 during the decisive second period. She grabbed nine rebounds, four steals and handed out three assists.

Pettis scored 12 points and had six steals. Nitchman scored 10 and had six steals as well. Sarah Cross contributed seven points, 10 rebounds and seven assists.

"Grace played her two best games of the season," said Haske. "Jaime was very tough as well."

The JV team also won both games last week and is also 6-0 on the season.

This week Charlevoix faces perhaps its toughest two tests of the season playing perennial conference power Harbor Springs and St. Ignace, ranked number six in Class C, both on the road.

The game against Harbor was on Tuesday, Sept. 14, but results were unavailable before presstime. The Rayders travel to St. Ignace on Thursday, Sept. 16.

Soccer team gets two wins last week

On Sept. 9, the boys beat Boyne City, 6-3. And on Sept. 7, they beat Harbor Light, 4-1.

For the Boyne City game, Sparky Nitchman had two goals and two assist. Andrew Mailloux had two goals, Michael DiMartino had two goals and one assists and Curtis Petzak had one assist.

For the Harbor Light game, Mailloux had two goals, Nitchman had one goal and two assists, DiMartino had one goal and one assist and Petzak had one assist.

Coach Josh Block said, "A key part to the win was our defense in the second half."

He added, "I am proud of Shannon Gillespie with a win in goal and 11 saves."

Council candidates weigh in on spending

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

ELECTION 2004

Does the city of Charlevoix spend its money wisely or are there a few changes that could be made?

City council candidates look into the issue of city spending.

First ward incumbent Bill Haggard said he has had some concern in the past as to how the city is spending its money, which causes him to watch city spending very closely.

"There's some question of priority," he said.

"But I know we're not wasting money."

Haggard, who is conservative with his own personal money, said the city has spent money in a poor manner on all the lawsuits it has faced.

There were times when Haggard thought the city spent money wisely. One time was when the city purchased the Wharfside so it could be torn down, he said.

Since the state is facing a tight budget, the city may receive less money than it has in the past. If so, Haggard said the general budget is something that should be looked at very closely.

One suggestion he gave to help alleviate some of the budget burden is to reinstate programs that bring prisoners into the city to do various maintenance jobs.

Haggard said it saves money and allows the inmates to enjoy different scenery.

"It's worth an investigation," he said.

He said the budget needs to be absolutely balanced in order to avoid any pitfalls.

"I don't want to go in the hole," he said. "Revenue sharing is very tight. It's hurting a lot of communities."

Candidate Rebecca Doan said she would have a better idea of what the city spends if the department heads would issue a monthly accountability report.

Doan said she thinks spending money on the Charlevoix Community Skatepark and Mt. McSauba are good ways the city has spent money.

"Anything for the youth," she said. "Even if we lose, we're gaining."

Keeping up with road maintenance and other needs is also a good way the city has used the money they received, Doan said.

However, Doan said the city spends money in not so wise ways as well.

Doan doesn't think the new marina should be built. She wants to see the dock updated and redone, but doesn't want it to expand and change from the way it is right now.

With state budgets being tight right now, the city may have to cut back on some of their spending if they start receiving less money. If so, Doan said the figures would need to be looked at before anything is decided upon.

"They (city officials) keep telling us we'll have a short coming," she said. "We need to take care of what we have and not keep expanding."

Second ward incumbent Karen I. Campbell said she has had some concerns about the way the city spends its money in the past, but most recently her concern is about city hall.

"The city spent way too much on furnishings for city hall," she said.

The furnishings may not have been a wise investment, but Campbell said the money spent on redoing the building was because of the bad condition it was in.

She said the city also spent money wisely on redoing sidewalks and roads and cleaning up the old post office so the city could use it as their temporary space.

The city may be facing a budget cut due to the tight state budget of Michigan, which may cause Charlevoix to lose state money. Campbell said it's hard for her to say what services should be cut without looking at the budget.

She said the essential services to the city should be the focus because they are vital to the workings of the city.

"We need street cleaners and cemetery workers and could use a few more," she said.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell

How fiscally responsible is the city of Charlevoix?

COUNCIL

was unavailable for comment by press time.

Third ward incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said he hasn't had any concern over city spending in the past and thinks the city has done a fine job spending the people's money.

He said the budget meeting is the most important because that is where council members decided how much money to appropriate to each service.

"The budget meeting is the backbone of the city," he said.

Chamberlain said good audit reports show the city is spending the public's money well and there isn't one major example of poor spending he can think of.

However, he thinks the city has spent money in a wise fashion when it purchased the Wharfside and tore the building down to open up a panoramic view of Round Lake and the harbor.

"What that did for the community is just unbelievable," he said.

Chamberlain said he doesn't rubber stamp financial requests.

"I think I do a good job making sure the public has benefits from any purchase we make," he said.

Chamberlain said past council members and city staff have treated the city's money as though it was their own. He said the cost/benefit ratio is important when looking at how to spend the city's money.

"Are the benefits the public is going to receive greater than the cost?" he said.

He said a lot of projects come his way from City Manager Michael Wiesner, but are turned down before they reach council.

"All I want to do is be the best at this job," he said. "I base decisions on hard core facts, not coffee shop talk."

Chamberlain said this election will determine the kind of council the city will have.

"That's what this election is about," he said. "Whether the city wants to run it out of a coffee shop or run it professionally."

Candidate Dave Scott said there is a problem with city spending in Charlevoix.

"Nothing concerns me more," he said. "It's one of the main reasons I'm running for city council."

Scott, who attends council meetings regularly, said two major projects would not have been put out for bids if he hadn't been there.

"We need to be careful about how we're spending city money," he said.

One project slipped by despite Scott's efforts. He said the airport contract was approved even though he voiced a need to open it up for bidding.

"These are classic examples of bad decisions made by city council on spending," he said.

At the Sept. 7 city council meeting, Scott spoke up and told council the fire department has to put their grant up for bids. His effort helped the council look at the issue closer.

He also questioned the need for a $30,000 audio/visual system installed in the new city council chambers. Scott said he asked the council about their vote and didn't know why they approved something they didn't fully understand.

"I asked them and they didn't know what it did," he said.

Scott said he is curious why the city spent around $250,000 on office furniture for the renovated city hall.

"It's not because I'm cheap," he said.

"I just want to make sure the essential city services are there."

Scott said he is also concerned why council voted to approve a severance package for City Manager Michael Wiesner.

"I would never, ever, have approved a six-figure severance package for the city manager," he said. "The council should take a closer look at these things."

Scott also said Chamberlain has voted for every expenditure request that has come his way since 2003 even though he says he is against spending money.

"Someone isn't asking questions," Scott said.

Despite the negative side of city spending, Scott thinks the city has used money wisely.

"What a great decision it was to work with the band boosters to weed the petunias," he said.

"It helps support a fund-raising effort for the band."

Since it is a time of tight state budgets, the city may have to cut back on some expenditures if it doesn't receive enough money from the state.

Scott said he would have to look at a comprehensive budget before he could make a decision concerning what to cut and where.

The first thing Scott said he would cut are things in the area that are conveniences and the last thing he would cut are the essential city services that impact the citizens of Charlevoix.

Elementary PTO in need of more members

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Due to the financial state of Michigan, several cuts have been made to the budget and one is education and it is having an impact in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix Elementary School is not receiving as much as they did in the past, but with the help of the Parent Teacher Organization and community volunteers, they hope to keep functioning as they always have.

"Schools all over the state are starting to hurt due to the financial state of Michigan," Richard Swenor, principal of Charlevoix Elementary School said. "It's even more important for parents and the community to help out with schools and help kids."

Swenor said one of the fears this year is that without added participation from the community, many of the things that have always occurred at the school may not be able to continue.

Valeri Ramage, president of the PTO said there is a need for more participants in the year's events.

"We really need the support from the community," said.

Every year the PTO compiles wish lists for the teachers and tries to meet their needs. With the budget cuts and less funding, Ramage said the lists this year will include necessities and not items like a digital camera.

Swenor said the money for field trips was cut back. In the past, the PTO has sponsored many field trips, which Swenor said give the children a first hand experience.

"They've been valuable for years, but now with the cut backs to the state they're even more valuable to us and the kids," he said.

Swenor said the community has been good about supporting the school and that support will help keep programs like the author visits going.

Some of the authors that have come to the elementary school include Jonathan Rand, author of the "American Chillers" and "Michigan Chillers" series.

On Sept. 16 the school will be hosting its open house and PTO family barbecue. Ramage said school board members will cook the food and families can eat and socialize. Then the parents will go in to talk to their child's teachers while the children play under PTO supervision on the playground.

The barbecue is from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. and the open house is from 5 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. Tickets cost $3 for adults, $2 for children and $10 for a family.

They can be purchased at the elementary school office or the day of the event.

For more information about the PTO or the barbecue call Ramage at 348-1849 or e-mail her at Val5Ram@netpenny.net.

Charlevoix got a little Scottish touch Sunday as these two men were seen in town sporting their kilts. Mayor: Wastewater plant looks cleaned up ance, Quality Control (QA/QC) manual is currently being updated.

Some of the problems that had been recorded in a March report by the DEQ and given to City Manager Michael Wiesner include 31 chlorine limit exceedences and false reports for 15 phosphorus results and 32 fecal coliform results.

The report also stated that there were 27 days when monitoring didn't take place and other areas where proper protocol wasn't followed.

Caldwell led the tour and informed council on what changes had occurred. One issue concerned a critical spare parts list. Caldwell said this list will include only those parts that are vital to the operation of the plant.

The list won't need to be incredibly long because the plant is able to run in two halves. When something breaks down on one side, Caldwell said the other half can handle the flow until the problem is corrected.

Mayor Gabe Campbell toured the facility and liked what he saw.

"It looks like it's cleaned up," he said. "Hopefully, that's what the DEQ wants."

In order to prevent another break down in communication, Campbell said they need to keep a closer eye on what occurs at the plant and to issue monthly reports to the council.

Campbell said City Manager Michael Wiesner has told him it would take too much time to print up a monthly report from all the department heads. Campbell said he thinks that's a weak reply, but thinks Wiesner may have misunderstood what he had in mind.

Campbell said the city manager should physically go to the plant to check on how things are going and to make sure everything is all right.

"The city manager should take a more active role," he said.

Insurance coverage likely

CCMS not in the clear

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The contractor at the center of a check controversy in the city of Charlevoix is not in the clear, according to city attorney Jim Young.

Young said the city will be going after the contractor, CCMS, of Sault Ste. Marie, but is working on a way to do it without using more taxpayer money.

"We are making progress," Young said. "My job is to do this efficiently, and that is what we are doing."

According to the city, CCMS was paid over $220,000 in April 2004 for work on Belvedere Avenue and Michigan Avenue back in 2001. However, the city wrote the check to just the contractor, CCMS, when it appears it should have been written to the contractor's insurance company, United Fire and Casualty.

The contractor, in the meantime, cashed the check and did not pay any of the subcontractors for the work, thus forcing United Fire and Casualty to pick up the tab. United Fire wants its money back, so it then sued the city of Charlevoix for the money in federal court.

Upon learning of the lawsuit and the mistakenly written check, the

Thanks to Florida's hurricanes Charlevoix Area Hospital was able to welcome Caleb Montgomery Shiers into the world Sept. 8.

Caleb's parents, Jaimie and Jeff Shiers are normally residents of West Palm Beach, Fla., but due to an approaching hurricane and Jaimie's approaching due date, the couple made a decision to flee the area for safer havens north on Sept. 1 along with Jeff's brother's family. So, while Jeff and his brother finished up some last minute details, they sent Jaimie and the couple's son, Isaac, away with his brother's wife and children and their parents.

"The guys just wanted to get their families out," Jaimie said. "We figured Tallahassee would be far enough."

She said the family left early enough that they did not encounter any troubles due to heavy traffic or dwindling gas supplies.

"People were starting to panic and buying canned goods, lots of water and plywood," she said.

Jaimie said this was the first hurricane she experienced.

Wiesner, mayor spar on memos

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

A rivalry between City Manager Mike Wiesner and Charlevoix Mayor Gabe Campbell came to light recently when Wiesner attacked the mayor in a memo sent to all city employees.

In a memo dated Sept. 13 that City Manager Mike Wiesner handed out to all city employees, he attacked Mayor Gabe Campbell for supposedly breaking the City Charter by talking to the media about issues in the city.

Wiesner claims that Campbell was attacking the city employees by saying they weren't doing their job in newspaper articles in the Charlevoix Courier. But, in the articles, Campbell's comment regarded the city administration, not the employees.

"I believe we have good city employees," Campbell said when asked about this matter. "The last thing I would do is bad mouth an employee."

Campbell said he was referring to certain city administrators such as City Manager Michael Wiesner in regard to the check written for over $228,000 and the Wastewater Treatment Plant situation.

He was also directing his remark to Police Chief Dennis Halverson for allowing people to

Apple Festival to highlight autumn

What: Charlevoix Apple Festival
Why: A celebration of fall and area orchards and growers.
When: Oct. 8 - 10
Where: Charlevoix's East Park

Charlevoix invites everyone to experience autumn in northern Michigan at the 25th Annual Apple Festival and Craft Show, Oct. 8 - 10.

This three-day event, sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, is hosted yearly to honor local orchards and growers who, in the spirit of the season, line Bridge Street to bring the fall harvest directly to you.

The festival's focal point is the apple. More than 30 types of apples, including the hard to find "antique varieties," will be on hand as well as other fall harvest items such as pumpkins, squash, jam, honey and cider just to name a few.

Charlevoix's waterfront parks will have many activities including a fine arts and crafts show featuring 100 artisans and craftsmen and women ready to show their wares. There will also be pony rides, a petting zoo and pumpkin painting for the kids.

Take a nostalgic look back in time with the Northern Michigan Antique Flywheelers. The exhibit will include farming and agricultural equipment from days gone by.

The Apple Festival is from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Oct. 8 and 9 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Oct. 10.

Good work with wastewater plant

EDITORIAL

It seems that everything is under control at Charlevoix Wastewater Treatment Plant.

During a recent tour of the plant, Charlevoix City Council Members got an up close look at the changes it has undergone since an investigation by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality and the city discovered several deficiencies.

Investigations found that problems at the Wastewater Treatment Plant reached back over a three year period. Originally, bench sheets where initial readings of the treated water are recorded didn't match up with the reports. In some instances, the bench sheets had been doctored or erased.

Reports of chlorine limit exceedences were found as well as false reports for 15 phosphorus results and 32 fecal coliform results. The report also stated that there were 27 days when monitoring didn't take place and other areas where proper protocol wasn't followed.

Besides this, there were also problems with equipment and conditions found at the plant, such as broken equipment and unsafe stairways.

But, the city acted quickly on these problems once they were discovered. A new superintendent, Jim Caldwell, was named, new procedures were put in place and the equipment has been fixed or is in the process of being fixed.

All of this occurred within nine months since the problem was first recognized. The city did the right thing by investigating it quickly, bringing in the MDEQ for their own investigation and moving so fast to correct it. It is this kind of quick thinking and good work that the citizens of Charlevoix appreciate and expect from their government.

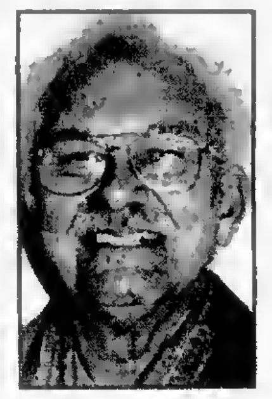
What happened to bravery in politics?



Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

In this election year (and aren't nearly all of them election years?) there are abundant examples of the ways in which members of the United States Congress from both parties seem more interested in tactics that will help them and their party get elected than they are in managing the people's business.

Among the more obvious and troublesome of these examples is the failure of Congress to renew the assault weapons ban. According to police agencies all over the country, the ban, which has been in place since 1994, has achieved reductions in the sale and use of some particularly troublesome semi-automatic weapons. Police seem to think that fewer assault weapons on the streets makes them and us safer, and they favor the ban.

The majority leader in the Senate has suggested that the will of the American people is served by letting the ban expire: This in the face of overwhelming evidence that a great majority of the American people favor the ban. Democrats have been generally reluctant to support the ban because it makes them vulnerable to attacks by the National Rifle Association. There appear to be no congressional heroes in this argument. Nearly all congressional members of both parties seem to be deciding their position on the basis of what will most likely help their candidacy or the candidacy of their peers.

I am certainly not opposed to people owning guns. I own and use several. I can even be convinced that under some circumstances the private ownership and carrying of handguns can help reduce crime. It is more difficult for me to understand how private ownership of assault weapons will reduce crime or make us safer. There have been some sort of bans on the weapons that private citizens can own for decades. It is illegal to own a sawed-off shotgun. It is illegal in most states for a private citizen to own a fully-automatic machine gun. Neither of those laws has harmed the Second Amendment to the Constitution of the United States. They are recognized as reasonable by nearly everyone. The assault weapons ban is a sensible extension of those long operative laws and not some new attempt to deprive citizens of their rights.

Some of the politicians who favor letting the ban expire say that it doesn't really work anyway. Guns that are now available are much like the banned ones, with only cosmetic differences. That might be seen as a reason to extend and expand the ban, not to let it expire.

Anyway, this isn't mostly about the assault weapons ban, but about the remarkable lack of congressional interest in the people's business. Could a courageous congressperson announce that while they favor the ban, they know that such a position will reduce their chances of being re-elected and might alter the balance of political power in the Congress? Not if they have any wish to be elected to their office again.

Such courage (and many people favor courage in their legislators) seems absent from Congress. Could such a hypothetical hero or heroine announce that they favor higher taxes to help tame the deficit, but to promote such an idea would mean losing their cherished seat in Congress? Could we voters see such courage as noble and worthwhile? Political history tells the officeholder that to support higher taxes for any reason, even the most noble or necessary, is the kiss of death politically.

Is it possible that the problem is not solely with the politicians, but with those of us who vote them into office repeatedly, even if they are not doing us any particular good? Can voters be convinced by clever advertising that it is important to keep in Congress those people who are already there, even if they are mostly beholden to all sorts of powerful special interest groups and mostly do the bidding of those groups? Do we get just one Paul Wellstone and one Russ Feingold out of a hundred senators? Could we elect people with the interests of the general public at the forefront of their thinking?

The only assault weapons we citizens really need are informed votes for people who have demonstrated their dedication to the public good. I believe there is something that could be called public good, but I don't see many people, politicians or voters, in pursuit of it.

Letters to the editor

Library option

Editor:

Improved option for the Clinton Street library.

Construct a second and third floor above the existing first floor. The first floor would be used as the Charlevoix School System's Administration Offices. The second floor would be used by the chamber of commerce and the third floor would be the new Convention Center.

The results of this option are listed below:

1) This will insult and agitate the Saltonstall family and other future donors.

2) It will deprive the taxpayers the savings of a $600,000 donation plus $300,000 of interest expense which would have been applied to the new library.

3) It will keep a valuable downtown piece of property off the tax roles.

4) The chamber of commerce would continue to get free rental space at the expense of the taxpayers.

5) The new city of Charlevoix Convention Facility could then compete with Castle Farms.

P.S. Parking would not be a problem because we could tear down the old post office and use that for a parking lot.

Independent voter

Editor:

The independent voter is faced, on one side, with George W. and his self-righteous backers. They believe the Bible (which Bible?) is more important than the Constitution.

On the other side, we have Kerry and his self-righteous supporters. They believe the problems in our country can be solved by throwing money at them — other people's money.

Neither offer a path down the middle where reasonable discussion could lead to logical problem solving and recognition that we are a country of diverse peoples.

Thank you

Editor:

Our families acknowledge with thanks the tremendous outpouring of love and support from our community, friends and family from around the state. The memorial for Warren "Jeep" Belding at the Argonne Supper Club was a tad unconventional. Warren had worked at the Argonne for many years; we all knew when Jeep was scheduled, any work would be more playful.

Steve Ager, owner of the Argonne, and friends had planned a gathering to celebrate Warren's traditional annual golf tournament. "The Sometimes-Always Open Jeep Classic." Jeep was looking forward to joining friends and family on Monday the thirteenth for this event. Alas, Warren left us too early, joining his Maker on the eleventh. Since he had insisted on no formal services, it did not take us long to decide to continue with the plans in the works.

At the Argonne last Monday, strangers meeting each other for the first time quickly became friends. Our common denominator in the room was Jeep. There were stories, music, tears, food and laughter. He touched so many people's lives; it's no wonder that he was sometimes known as "Mr. Charlevoix."

Special heartfelt thanks to childhood friend, Steve Ager, best friend Jill "Bean" Mottarelli, Chris Nyland and the MacGillivray family. We were entertained by the musicians Maggie and Jeff Dickson, Ray Collins, Roger Harcourt and Chris Martin. Ample and delicious food was provided by Teresa Moore and various local restaurants.

We are grateful to the volunteers who worked long hours to organize flowers, food, picture boards and tables. Some of Jeep's closest friends were occupied behind the scenes - bartending, bussing tables, washing dishes, cocktailing or warming foods - making sure things went smoothly.

What a community of good folks we have in Charlevoix! Consider that attendance by brothers, sisters, cousins and playmates created a strength that was a reflection of Warren's gifts to y'all. The power of your love lifted us and will carry us through the sorrowful days ahead.

We are grateful for the generosity and wishes of all. Jeep's spirit was with us that evening and will be forever.

Love heals.

No Child Left Behind

Editor:

Back-to-school time, but back to school and education problems supposedly solved by "No Child Left Behind." I have a few questions about that much touted "achievement."

- If the plan would have solved all educational problems, why, in 2003, did the Bush administration and the Republican Congress fail by almost $32 billion to fund it as promised?
- Why were successful federal programs — such as Head Start and Individuals With Disabilities — cut by almost 43 percent of the $48.8 Billion which had already been budgeted?
- Will we know before Nov. 2 how underfunded education has been in 2004?
- Despite these abysmal failures, will President Bush's campaign claim that "No Child Left Behind" is an operating successful reform?

Health department group to host summit

The Human Services Coordinating Body of Charlevoix and Emmet Counties is hosting the tenth Annual Human Services Information Summit 8:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. on Sept. 24 at the First Presbyterian Church of Harbor Springs.

All are welcome.

"We've learned that these summits are an efficient way for both community members and professionals to learn about the many services offered by local health and human services providers," said Patricia Fralick, who represents the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego Counties on the HSCB.

Joanne Rackow will present the Keynote Address at the Information Summit. Rackow, a consumer relations specialist from the Michigan Department of Community Health, advocates for persons with disabilities and supports recovery initiatives within the mental health community. Her talk will combine this work with her own personal mental health experiences.

Following the Keynote Address, 36 health and human service providers will share information about their services and programs in breakout sessions. Throughout the morning, a resource fair will take place with community groups and organizations hosting tables with information regarding their local services.

"Just about every agency from the two-county area is represented at the Summit, from the health department, hospitals, and social services agencies, to the Intermediate School District, Friendship Centers, and the Women's Resource Center," said Fralick.

Also, members of the Human Services Coordinating Body will present two awards at the Information Summit. The "Community Partner" award recognizes an individual who has excelled in providing outstanding service. The "Community Champion" award celebrates an organization that has enhanced quality of life by dedication and hard work.

A Day of Caring

During Harbor Industries' Community Day of Caring on Sept. 16, several volunteers gave their time and energy to different projects throughout the area. While some students painted doors or cleaned up the grounds outside and worked the garage sale, others assembled desks inside.

Church protests with crosses

In front of the Charlevoix Assembly of God church on M-66 there are 2,000 white crosses in the lawn. The crosses represent half the national average of abortions performed daily, according to the church.

Annual Bite of Beaver Island to feature many fun activities

Beaver Island will be hosting its third annual Bite of Beaver Island Food Festival on Oct. 8-9.

The weekend kicks off on Friday evening with a Casino Night aboard the docked Beaver Islander. This benefit for the island's Preservation Association begins at 7 p.m., where your $10 admission fee includes your starter chips for the assorted games of chance. At 10 p.m. chips will be turned into vouchers for a spirited auction with prizes ranging from get-away packages to art work. Surprise entertainment and a cash bar will be available at the event.

On Saturday, starting at 10 a.m., the Island Boodle, a 5K Run/Walk will take place along the harbor of Paradise Bay. Medals for first through third place for assorted age categories will be given out a the conclusion of the Boodle, along with T-shirts for all participants. Advance registration forms may be downloaded from the Beaver Island Chamber of Commerce website: www.beaverisland.org.

From 1 to 4 p.m., Holy Cross Church Hall will be the site of the Bite of Beaver Food Festival, where professional and amateur chefs sell small portions of their favorite fare. Last year's sellouts included rack of lamb, grilled shrimp, escargot and a wide variety of scrumptious deserts. Beer, wine and soft drinks are also available at the festival.

Later in the evening, head to the island's favorite watering hole, The Shamrock. The band "The Third Coast" is slated to be on the island.

Beaver Island is located 33 miles from the mainland, has a year-round population of 550. This island, with seven inland lakes and miles of pristine Lake Michigan shoreline, is known for the warmth and hospitality shown to visitors. The small community has two marinas, two airports, shops, hotels, restaurants, a spa, a school and three churches. Biking, hunting, fishing and hiking the many trails on the island are among visitors' favorite activities. The island also has a colorful history, which includes the saga of King Strang, who once declared himself "King" of America's Emerald Isle.

For more information about Beaver Island and the Bite of Beaver Island Food Festival, contact the Chamber of Commerce at (231) 448-2505 or see their web site at www.beaverisland.org.

Public Notice?

Without it in your newspaper, you're left guessing what the government's doing in your community.

Public notice is the people's right to know the issues that affect them directly, and people know the place to find public and legal notices is in the newspaper. What you're holding right now is a historical document, printed and published with a date on every page. Public notices have been posted here since the days of colonial America. In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. After all, it shouldn't be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, or when to look, let alone to know what you're looking for to be informed. Why guess? That is why you have, and read, your newspaper... where your right to know is already being served.

City mayoral candidates talk about wastewater

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

While the city of Charlevoix is currently addressing issues at the Wastewater Treatment Plant that the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality had concerns about, mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson take a closer look at the issue.

The problems reach back over a three year period due to employee problems. Some of the problems brought to light were bench sheets, where initial reading of the treated water are recorded, didn't match up with the reports. In some instances, the bench sheets had been doctored or erased.

Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

Some of the problems the DEQ recorded in a March report given to City Manager Michael Wiesner include 31 chlorine limit exceedences and false reports for 15 phosphorus results and 32 fecal coliform results.

The report also stated that there were 27 days when monitoring didn't take place and other areas where proper protocol wasn't followed.

Incumbent Campbell said the city went over the list provided by the DEQ and has made good strides in trying to remedy the situation.

Campbell said there are good people working at the plant who do a good job, but he hopes the DEQ will see that.

"Hopefully, the DEQ will see things have been attended to," he said.

Having the DEQ's approval and attending to the issues, may not be enough to keep the situation from reoccurring.

"We have to have an active role to make sure things are running properly," he said.

Campbell said since Charlevoix is run in a city manager form of government, the city manager is the one who is responsible for all that goes on in the city.

"The city manager has to be responsible and accountable," he said.

The city manager's job is to manage things and not just delegate the responsibility to someone else, which is why Campbell said City Manager Michael Wiesner needs to double check everything.

"If you're in charge you have to be in charge and follow up and make sure things are going as people tell you," Campbell said.

When in the Navy, Campbell said he worked in the elevator machine room on an escort carrier.

He and his fellow workers received routine checks where they had to physically show what they were doing.

"It wasn't because they didn't trust us, but because it was their job," he said.

Campbell said checking up on things is not disrespectful to employees because someone has to be in charge and follow up on things.

"Otherwise, you don't need anybody in charge," he said.

Campbell said Wiesner has done fairly well managing the city except for the $228,000 check and the problems that occurred at the Wastewater Treatment Plant for three years.

Candidate Carlson said to the best of his knowledge he thinks the city is heading in the right direction to handle the problems at the plant.

He said it was fortunate the city discovered the problem when it did because the problems could have been a tragedy from an environmental and cost standpoint.

Carlson said monthly reports by department heads are not needed for council.

"We are, whether anyone likes it or not, a city manager base of government," he said.

Carlson said the City Council sets policy and the city manager enforces it.

"I don't see the need to stand up and give reports," he said. "It's counterproductive."

Currently, department heads have weekly meetings with Wiesner, and Carlson said that is enough.

"City Council is not there to direct them on day-to-day operations," he said.

Carlson said the council and mayor, like any other concerned citizen, can call the department heads direct and discuss any questions or concerns they may have.

In order to prevent the problem from reoccurring, Carlson said having a checks and balances system is a good thing.

Anyone can say they're doing their job, but they may not always be telling the truth.

"You have to have trust they're going to get the job done," he said.

Should something happen, Carlson said department heads should be responsible for their actions.

Carlson said from what he's seen, he thinks the plant is headed in the right direction.

Downtown Charlevoix stores to stay open later on Saturdays

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Keep your slates clear for "Saturday Nights" because downtown Charlevoix will be open late.

Several downtown merchants are agreeing to stay open until 8 p.m., some until 9 p.m., in an attempt to generate business during the fall.

"Saturday Night" started after Labor Day and will end on Oct. 23.

"It's a test run and so far we feel pretty good about it," Kirby Dipert, chairman of the Charlevoix Retail Committee, said.

The goal of have "Saturday Night" in Charlevoix is to get as many businesses to participate as possible in order to visually show that merchants are open late.

"It's a short season in Charlevoix no matter how you shake it," he said. "By expanding hours, we're hoping to generate more traffic."

Dipert said this isn't the first time something like this has been tried, but it is a first for better participation.

So far, Dipert said the response has been pretty good on the part of merchants and customers.

"It's doing what we wanted it to do," he said.

Dipert said if the results turn out favorably, "Saturday Night" will happen again next year. If the merchant response is good then next year downtown may stay open late for two nights.

Northern Michigan Hospital:
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!
NMH Trustees have claimed "Business as Usual" since the nurses' strike began on November 14, 2002. However, recent reports filed by NMH with the state and federal government reveal the following:

	No Strike 2001	Strike 2 mos. 2002	Strike 2003	Strike 2004
Number of Discharges	_	10,033	9,702	?
Occupancy Rate	_	62.2%	59.5%	?
Total Inpatient Days	_	47,915	45,824	?
Total Outpatient Visits	_	174,788	165,597	?
Purchased Services (includes contract, replacement nurses)	_	$17,282,894	$32,643,969	?
Operating Income (loss/gain)	2.1 Million (gain)	$105,900 (gain)	($11,231,764) (loss)	?

In 2002 CEO Tom Mrczkowski earned $241,872. He earned $342,076 in 2003, including benefits. Does he deserve the increase in salary and deferred compensation? Did he also get an increase in 2004?
The above establishes that the NMH Trustees' claim of "Business as Usual" is not accurate. NMH Trustees are taking the Hospital on a downward path and have expended millions of precious health care dollars to fight the RNs' right to have a voice. "Business as Usual" will not return to NMH until the RNs and the Hospital reach an agreement fair to each side. We urge you to contact the Board of Trustees at (231)487-4000 if you believe that the course they have set for the Hospital is not the right course.
We want NMH to survive...but will it if they continue with this type of "Business as Usual"?

Gladys Wertman celebrates 100 years

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Boulder Park will be decked out in celebration Friday for the one-hundredth birthday of resident Gladys Wertman.

Wertman, who turned 100 on Sept. 20, will celebrate her birthday at 3 p.m., Friday at Boulder Park Terrace where she lives. Staff, residents and city officials are expected to join her.

Her daughter, Joyce, said, "She is a very caring person. She has a great passion for people and animals. And she is a huge Tiger baseball fan, win, loose or draw."

Wertman was born in Castleton Township, the youngest in her family — with the exception of her twin sister. In addition to her twin, she had two sisters and two brothers who have all passed on.

When Wertman was 23, she moved to California, where she kept horses, packed oranges and married Howard Holdren. Together they had one child, Joyce.

While in California, Wertman became a very good oil painter and horse-back rider. She rode in several parades while living there and sold several paintings.

She was also a member of a kitchen band, where she played the piano.

In 1980, Wertman moved to Charlevoix after marring her second husband, Myron Wertman.

Upon coming to the community, she took up gardening and became active in her church group at Barnard United Methodist Church. On Sept. 19, the church hosted Gladys Wertman Day, with a special church service and dinner in the Fellowship Hall.

At the church she is known for her piano playing, Tiger loving and her pet cat, Tucky — who was a treasured companion for many years.

Wertman has been a resident of Boulder Park Terrace for the past five years. According to her daughter, she has trouble seeing and hearing now, but still enjoys visits, especially by animals, and writes poetry.

Dairy Queen for a day

Charlevoix resident Sharon Blossom bought the opportunity to work at the Charlevoix Dairy Queen for a day during a Holly Daze in 2003, a benefit for the Charlevoix Area Hospital. She worked at the Dairy Queen on Sept. 15 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. All the tips she received were donated to the American Diabetes Association. Council candidates discuss wastewater

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With the Nov. 2 elections looming and different issues floating around the city, City Council candidates take a look at what is currently affecting the city.

On Sept. 7, the current City Council toured the updated Wastewater Treatment Plant to see the changes that have been made.

Incumbent Bill Haggard said he thinks the city is now taking the appropriate steps in order to alleviate the problems that had occurred at the Wastewater Treatment Plant.

"I think they're on the right track," he said.

Haggard said the city management acted in a prompt manner once the problem was known. He said people were brought in from the outside to get things in order, which was important concerning the plant.

Haggard said things are looking up because all the equipment that is kept on standby is being maintained so everything runs 100 percent even if not in use.

Some people have mentioned the need for more department head reports to be given to the City Council. Haggard said he is satisfied.

He said some council members were upset that it took awhile to get all the information to council, but Haggard said sometimes more details are needed before something should be brought to council.

In order to prevent the incident from happening again, Haggard said good people are needed.

"We need to make sure we get good personnel there," he said.

Haggard said it's up to City Manager Michael Wiesner to see to that and to receive all the needed paperwork concerning the plant.

"He's been right on top of it as far as I was concerned," he said.

Candidate Rebecca Doan said she thinks the city has taken the appropriate steps to alleviate the problems that occurred at the Wastewater Treatment Plant.

"It's an unfortunate situation that something like this had to happen," she said.

Despite the negative effects, Doan said she thinks the situation should be looked at in a positive light.

For one, Doan said the plant will now have better record control, which will in turn help protect the environment.

Doan said she is positive Jim Caldwell, Wastewater Treatment Plant Superintendent, and the current staff will keep good records.

"They have new people in office now that I'm confident will maintain it properly," she said.

Doan said there is a need for more department head reports to be given to council.

She said monthly reports would allow taxpayers to see exactly where their money is being spent. It would also allow for a better control of what is taking place in Charlevoix.

Doan said she is sure the problems won't occur again through maintaining correct records and keeping the plant running properly for the city.

"I have all the confidence in Jim Caldwell and his staff," she said.

Incumbent Karen I. Campbell said she thinks the efforts on the part of the city have been good.

"I think they've done a real good job up there," she said.

Campbell said the city was pretty prompt in correcting the situation once the information came to their attention.

In order to prevent something like the previous incident from happening again, Campbell said all city department heads should issue a weekly or bi-weekly report on what is going on in the City Council.

Campbell said with this information the council would be in on what the city is doing and hopefully catch anything before it became a problem.

If a weekly or bi-weekly report is too much, Campbell said it could be a monthly report or different department heads could issue a report on different weeks.

"It wouldn't be too much for certain people to check on," she said.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell said he doesn't know for a fact if the city has taken the proper steps to solve the problem at the Wastewater Treatment Plant because he doesn't know all the details.

"I hope the city staff would get on something like that and take care of the problem," he said.

Regarding monthly reports from department heads, Russell said he thinks it might work and it certainly wouldn't hurt.

"I don't see any reason why there couldn't be a three-month report or more if needed," he said.

He said he thinks everyone is pretty well informed as is, but if council thinks they need a monthly report he doesn't see why they shouldn't get one.

"I don't see a problem being kept up on things," he said.

Russell suggests taking tours of Wastewater treatment plant topic of discussion

the plant as a way to keep things from falling back. He said the City Council used to take a tour once a year, but maybe now they should look at the plant two or three times a year.

He said that way council members could talk to employees and see how things are running on a first hand basis.

Russell said he hopes the problem wouldn't occur again since the city has already been through it once.

"Sounds to me like all the improvements are taken care of and taken care of very well," he said. "I hope someone confident is down there taking care of the problem."

Incumbent Sherman Chamberlain said he thinks the city did a good job to solve the problem at the Wastewater Treatment Plant.

He said the city was the one who discovered the problem and was also the one that took the proper steps to correct the problem by notifying the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

"I think when city staff started noting some inequities, they outlined a course of action," he said.

Chamberlain said the checks and balance system already in place worked because the city was able to discover the problem.

Issuing council monthly reports from department heads seems too excessive to Chamberlain, who thinks quarterly reports may be more reasonable and yearly reports the better option.

"It's (reports) a way for council to be more familiar with the operations of the city," he said. "It's good for council to make an effort to go out and see what all our departments do."

Chamberlain said through his business of surveying, he is able to meet with department heads on a regular basis.

In order to prevent the problem from reoccurring, Chamberlain suggests issuing an informal monthly report, which would enable a review of the data. He said it could be written up in the form of a memo.

Chamberlain said compiling a manual of standard operational procedures is a really good improvement he's seen at the plant.

"We need an itemized list of proper ways of doing things," he said.

Continuity is important to Chamberlain in order to keep everyone on the same page and to prevent old procedures from overriding new procedures, which he said can happen when a city has long-standing department heads.

"Hopefully, they'll get the Wastewater Treatment Plant working at its maximum," he said.

Chamberlain said more tours may be helpful such as a yearly tour or a tour every two years.

"Let the city manager and department heads know we're truly interested in maintaining sewer and water services to the highest," he said.

Candidate Dave Scott said he doesn't know if the city has taken the proper steps to alleviate the problem.

"I would hope so," he said.

He said he is a little concerned he doesn't know more about the situation when he has attended almost every city council meeting.

"We just need to keep a close eye on it until the DEQ says all clear and the whole matter is resolved all the way to Lansing," he said.

Scott said he thinks the city is on the right track so far with a change of leadership. He also thinks monthly reports are a good idea.

"It's a good way for Mike (Wiesner) and council to know what's going on," he said.

Scott said he is behind the mayor's drive to have monthly reports from department heads issued to council members.

"I would offer a motion at the first City Council meeting he is a member at to require department heads to issue a brief monthly report," he said.

Scott said the City Charter states that the city manager will comply with council if a report is needed.

The Charter states in Article III: Administration, Section 3.7, letter g, "The City Manager shall make such other reports as the Council may require concerning the operations of City departments, offices, and agencies."

Scott said that although council has discussed with Wiesner to produce monthly reports, he has still said no. Scott said Wiesner has said he doesn't want to issue reports because he has daily meetings with department heads where they talk about what is going on and that is enough.

"There are too many problems right now to have an informal, laissez faire approach to running the city," Scott said.

Scott said there are some problems right now, but overall Wiesner has done a pretty good job.

In regard to the improvements done to the plant, Scott said he doesn't know what he thinks of them because he hasn't been there to see them.

Kids sell lemonade to raise money for charity

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

During the summer children tend to run around and enjoy the freedom from school and other responsibilities as they soak up the sun and sometimes try to make a profit by selling lemonade.

Two Norwood Township residents did just that, but gave the money toward a good cause.

Ashley, 10, and Thomas, 8, Louiselle raised $35 in order to purchase supplies for their cousin's autistic classroom.

The two siblings raised the money on July 22 and July 23 with the help of their friends Natalie Nellett, 10, of Waterford and Tanner Drost, 6, and Patrick Scheelk, 10, both of Norwood Township.

Together the friends carried their lemonade stand from their house to the small white church in the center of the village. They then rode their bikes up and down announcing they were selling money to raise for charity.

Caroline Krycia, 9, of Mt. Clemens in Macomb Township, is autistic and the Louiselles' cousin. Their interest in helping raise money for Krycia's classroom has carried over from last year.

Diane Krycia, Caroline's mother, said the children raised between $25 and $35 dollars last year when they lived in Waterford. They were helped by Caroline's brother, Joe Krycia, 11, and cousins Stephanie, 13, and Christopher Pecar, 6.

The money was given to the Macomb County Chapter of the Autism Society of America.

This year, the money was given directly to Caroline's teacher, Allison Dolehanty, which Dolehanty used to purchase a Leap Pad.

Krycia said this pad allows the children to learn to read by hearing the sound and seeing the word.

She said autistic children learn more through visual interaction than from direct contact with the language.

Krycia said such equipment is very important for an autistic classroom to have.

"You never know what might strike a chord with these kids," she said.

The Louiselles said they will probably raise money again next year.

Krycia said she is impressed with the children because they set out to raise the money without any intention of notoriety.

"I think it makes them feel good," he said. "A really neat thing they felt so proud to do that for their cousin."

Hospice of Northwest Michigan in need of volunteers

Hospice of Northwest Michigan, in partnership with Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, which serves Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties is looking for caring and compassionate individuals who would like to join its family of hospice volunteers.

Hospice will be conducting a volunteer training program starting on Sept. 28. The sessions will run for four weeks, from 3-5 p.m., meeting Tuesdays and Thursdays. The classes will be conducted at the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency in Bellaire.

The first session will be a hospice orientation and discussion of the role of the volunteer. Each class will deal with a different aspect of training: grief and bereavement, death and dying, communication skills, understanding the family, spiritual care of the family, care and comfort measures, ethical issues and personal stress.

Hospice volunteers provide a variety of services, including respite care to the terminally ill and their family.

Anyone who has been a caregiver knows how important it is to have some time for themselves, and our hospice volunteers provide this very needed help by staying at the home so the caregiver can get away or just to rest.

Volunteers provide much help, whether it is with patients, in the office or helping with fund-raising - they are truly the cement of the hospice program and make it unique.

Please call the Hospice of Northwest Michigan office at (231) 536-2842 if you are interested in becoming a volunteer.

Beaver Island soccer team undefeated

By FRANK SOLLE
Beaver Island sports writer

Like a well-oiled machine the Beaver Island Islander soccer team worked its precision on the Hannahville Soaring Eagles this past weekend, winning 7-0 on Friday evening and 6-0 Saturday morning.

The Islanders opened the 2004 season with a road trip Sept. 10 and 11, where they frosted the Grand Marais Polar Bears 7-1 and 7-2.

The Islanders controlled the action in both games against the Eagles, rarely allowing the ball to cross out of their offensive zone.

On Friday the Islanders scored three goals in the first half of play as Tony Bousquet, John Albin, and Brett Maudrie each put shots past the Hannahville goalkeeper. The half-time score could have been worse for the Eagles, but their goalkeeper made a number of great saves off hard-hit balls.

Maudrie started the second half right where he left off, blasting the ball into the net in the first minute of play and went on to score the final three goals of the game.

Cody Gillespie made a number a big saves in goal during the second half for the Islanders, including a strong effort in stopping a Hannahville player on a breakaway rush.

Saturday's game proved to be a near repeat as the Islanders again put the ball in the net three times in the first half.

Jared Wojan scored from the right wing in the first 5 minutes to help set the tone. Bousquet added the second with an assist from Maudrie.

Once again Maudrie scored the final goal of the first half and accounted for all the scoring in the second as he finished the first four games of the season with a team-best 13 goals.

"Everyone got to play this weekend, which was good," said Islander coach Mike Myers. "Our second unit played very well."

Myers added, "We really have the skill, but it's still early in the season."

He suggested the best is yet to come for a talented and deep Island team.

This weekend the Islanders host the Paradise Rockets with games set for 5 p.m., Friday, and 9 a.m., Saturday.

Rayders' lose in close matches

Charlevoix High School's varsity soccer team dropped two games last week.

On Wednesday, Sept. 15 the team lost to Leland, 3-2.

"With just under five minutes to play in the second half we started connecting and stepping up," Coach Block said.

Goals from Seniors Sparky Nitchman and Andrew Milloux in the last five minutes pulled within 3-2.

"It was a super exciting game," Block said.

On Monday, Sept. 13 Charlevoix lost to Harbor Springs, 2 to 1 in overtime. Charlevoix played on Harbor Springs' new field.

"It was a really great game and I'm proud of my team." Block said.

"We played a great game and never quit," he said.

Rayders' basketball team undefeated

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

In the battle of two of northern Michigan's pre-eminent basketball programs, undefeated Charlevoix bested St. Ignace, 81-53 in a surprisingly easy victory.

"I told the girls before the game that we were playing one of the best programs in the state and it would be a measuring stick for us," coach Keith Haske said. "They were pretty excited about it going in."

Charlevoix went into the game rated number six in Class C by the Associated Press and St. Ignace was number four.

"The seniors had never beaten St. Ignace and were beaten pretty soundly the last three years," Haske said. "It was a lot of fun to see them celebrating after the game."

The Rayders led 20-13 after the first quarter, 44-30 at the half and 68-42 after three quarters.

Grace Farrell and Laura Nitchman each scored 16 points to pace Charlevoix's scoring. Farrell also had nine rebounds. Nitchman handed out four assists and had two steals.

"I thought the bench play really stood out for us, especially Laura Nitchman," Haske said. "She played a tremendous game offensively for us."

Madison Ramsey contributed eight points, six steals and four assists. Shannon Dibble, Sarah Cross and Betsy Dennis also each scored eight points in a balanced effort.

Earlier in the week, Charlevoix blew past league rival Harbor Springs, 67-31.

The Rayders jumped out early, leading 18-6 after one period and 39-14 at the half.

Cross scored 12 points to lead the Charlevoix attack. Farrell had a double-double with 11 points and 11 rebounds.

Dennis scored 10 points. Jaime Pettis scored five points, had six steals and four assists.

"I thought we showed great patience against Harbor Springs and their zone defense," Haske said. "We got the ball inside and got a lot of good looks."

As always, the Rayders' pressure defense took its toll.

"Our defense has been outstanding all year long," Haske said. "Teams have really been struggling to score against us. Also, the girls have been making adjustments during the game as to how to defend."

Charlevoix (3-0 conference, 8-0 overall) played at home against Grayling on Tuesday, Sept. 21 but, results were unavailable at presstime.

Both the girls' and boys' varsity cross country teams had strong finishes Sept. 18 in the Ludington Invitational.

The girls' team finished second out of 25 teams and second in Division III. The boys' team finished third in Division III and seventh out of 20 schools.

Girls' coach Mary Plude said, "We had an outstanding team race. Our focus was on places and not overall times. I was not expecting for us to finish this well."

Plude said she was hoping for a top five placing and is very happy with the second place finish.

She said her team ran well from start to finish. She commended Lindi Edger, Theresa Martin, Emily Morgridge, Brittney Lamb, Emily Westenbroek, Mia Matchett and Sonya Plude for their hard work.

Individual results for the girls' varsity team were: Edger in fourth overall and second in the division with a time of 21 minutes, 23 seconds; Morgridge in eighteenth overall and ninth in the division with a time of 22 minutes, 21 seconds; Martin in twenty-fourth overall and eleventh in division with a time of 22 minutes, 50 seconds; Lamb in thirty-third overall and seventeenth in the division, with a time of 23 minutes, 1 second; Westenbroek in thirty-fifth overall and eighteenth in the division with a time of 23 minutes, 20 seconds; Matchett in forty-third overall and twentieth in the division with a time of 23 minutes, 20 seconds and Plude in fifty-eighth overall and twenty-eighth in the division with a time of 23 minutes, 59 seconds.

Edger, Morgridge, Martin, Lamb, Westenbroek and Matchett were medalists.

Individual results for the boys' varsity team were: Scott Plude in fifteenth in the division with a time of 18 minutes, 16 seconds; Jacob Wimmer in sixteenth with a time of 18 minutes, 23 seconds; Jared Hunt in seventeenth with a time of 18 minutes, 36 seconds; Isaac Matchett in eighteenth, with a time of 18 minutes, 38 seconds; Tom Aepelbacher in twenty-second with a time of 19 minutes; Zach Scharenbroch in twenty-sixth with a time of 19 minutes, 16 seconds and Jacob Hunt in twenty-seventh, with a time of 19 minutes, 17 seconds.

Plude, Wimmer, Hunt and Matchett were medalists.

The team scored 162. Rudyard took first with 155.

Coach Jim Glynn said, "This is the best consistent scoring we've had all year. Kris Bartling had his best round of the year with a 38. He is playing very well and just keeps on improving."

Football team beats Boyne City 19-12 Friday

By B. JON GOHS
Football writer

Tropical depressions may have cooled things off Friday, but even hurricane Ivan couldn't put the freeze on the Rayders 18-12 victory.

Perhaps anticipation of playing one of the highest ranked teams of the preseason caused the Rayders to turn it on early. Whatever the reason Charlevoix brought the battle to Boyne City from first down to the final sixty seconds.

"It's been awhile since we've beat Boyne," said Coach Jess. "They're always tough and well coached."

But, he added, "They'll (Boyne City) probably still make the playoffs."

And despite Charlevoix's second win in a row, Coach Jess said, "We're just gonna keep working."

He added, "We're not satisfied by any means."

According to Jess, since there is always room for improvement, the Rayders are taking this win in stride.

"We didn't play a perfect game," he said. "We still have a lot to work on."

But, winning Friday's game against a tough team like the Ramblers was at least as important as last week's win against East Jordan. This week the Rayders showed they are not only adept at dealing with challenges such as last week's fight in overtime, but they also have the ability to take control of a game early forcing opponents to come to them.

And Charlevoix did just this by scoring first and forcing the Ramblers to play catch-up the rest of the evening.

"The first TD was a four yard pass from Cody Crain to Eddie Waldron in the first quarter," Jess said.

Boyne City managed to tie things up later on allowing the Rayders to do what they do best — produce when the stakes are high. With a 12-12 deadlock into the final moments of the game the Rayders broke loose.

"With about a minute to go," Jess Said. "Cody Crain threw a 52 yard TD pass to Ben Bergman."

Crain's passing percentage was down about 8 percent from his average. But, with an increase from last weeks game of 100 yards thrown, his efficiency seems to be improving. Crain led the offense with 18 of 36 for 219 yards and three TDs.

The Rayders' backbone came through again as Jeff Golovich led defense with 12 tackles and one interception. Ezra Baker was close behind with nine tackles and Ben Bergman had one interception.

Receivers of mention include Ben Bergman who caught 7 passes for 126 yards with two TDs, Mitchell Klooster who had 4 passes for 68 yards and Eddie Waldron with three catches for 20 yards and one TD.

In rushing Russell Williams once again led with 13 carries for 53 yards.

Although he is happy with his team's performance, there are still a few things which concern coach Jess.

"We fumbled the ball too much for one thing," he said. "We need to make sure we hold on to the ball."

And, he added, "We need to get the offensive line blocking better."

The Rayders' offense seems to be doing better at keeping mistakes to a minimum, but according to Coach Jess, the three penalties acquired in Friday's game is still too many.

"Obviously we'd like to have zero," he said. But, he added, "mistakes happen."

If the Rayders offensive line can give Crain and his receivers even a little extra time it could be the difference between the result of the first two games and the result of the last two.

This week while Coach Jess and the Rayders keep their noses to the grindstone they will have elk on their mind.

Charlevoix has a history of besting Elk Rapids, but according to Coach Jess, he and the Rayders won't be looking past them.

"They certainly have a much better team than they had in the past," he said.

He added, "We haven't lost to them in about 10 years, but it's still going to be a tough game."

With four games down and five to go the season nears the halfway point. Charlevoix stands at 2-2 and must win six games total to get into the playoffs.

The Rayders hope to bag a 30 pointer as they face off against the Elk Rapids Elks at 7 p.m., Friday Sept. 24 in Elk Rapids.

Memo claims mayor violated charter violate the City Code by telling them they can move their RV forward or back a foot to avoid any fine for parking in one place too long.

MEMOS

Campbell said he was also referring to City Planner Gerry Harsch for being a key witness against the city in the Sunnybank assisted living situation.

"When developers come in and want to go to court they should use their own people and not the city administration," Campbell said.

Campbell is also upset over the fact that Wiesner gets to determine his own raises.

"We have a very strange situation, I think, in that the city manager decides the raise of the city administration and he gets what they get," he said.

Campbell said he views the memo as a political tactic on Wiesner's part.

"I think his mailing that letter out to the city employees was his attempt to turn the city employees against me," he said. "I'm upset about the fact that he's trying to turn something into supposedly bad mouthing the employees."

Campbell is still upset about the $228,000 check situation. He said a city manager is in charge and should take the responsibility for something that goes wrong on his watch.

"I think it's a sick try to try and turn the focus off the check," he said.

Campbell said the whole situation is out of line.

"It's so far out it's ridiculous," he said. "It's something that has to be answered."

Wiesner said he was only stating the sentiment of his employees. He said several employees came up to him and complained about Campbell implying they weren't doing their jobs.

"The letter speaks for itself," he said.

Wiesner said he simply wrote the letter to show his concern and isn't asking for any action.

Campbell gave the memo was given to Charlevoix City Attorney Jim Young at the Monday night Charlevoix City Council meeting for his thoughts on it. Young said he will give a written opinion on it after looking into the matter.

Scott: Wiesner violates First Amendment

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

During the Sept. 20 city council meeting, some people expressed concern that City Manager Michael Wiesner may be infringing on the First Amendment rights of the City Council.

In two memos dated Sept. 13 and Sept. 16, some at the meeting said Wiesner appears to attack the constitutional rights of freedom of speech and freedom of the press, by claiming council may not speak to the press about city administration, officials and employees.

Council member Shirley Gibson asked Wiesner during the meeting if he thought the mayor and council is limited in what they can say to the media. In response, Wiesner said he wrote the memo because several city employees had expressed concern, specifically about negative comments Mayor Gabe Campbell told the Charlevoix Courier regarding city administration for a recent story.

Gibson followed up by telling Wiesner that if the City Charter restricts what the City Council and the mayor can say to the media, then the Charter is in violation of the First Amendment protected by the U.S. Constitution.

"It is my right and responsibility to talk to the press," Gibson said.

Wiesner deferred comment to City Attorney Jim Young.

Young said he would have to see the entire article and not the paragraph Wiesner pulled from the whole story and placed in his memo.

During the meeting City Council candidate Dave Scott handed Young a copy of the Charlevoix Courier containing the article.

However, later during the meeting when Scott asked for Young's interpretation of Wiesner's comments, Young said the issue was too important for him to comment on without seeing the entire article.

Scott asked Young if there was any situation that could prohibit council from stating their opinion to the media.

Young said from a preliminary standpoint that as long as council wasn't making a comment that gave direction to a city employee, they weren't in violation of the Charter.

"I can't think of anything that would prohibit council from making generalized comments to the media," Young said.

Scott said the most important aspect to our country is the freedom of speech.

"These people over here (pointing to the media table) have a right to report what these people (pointing to council) have to say," he said.

Scott expressed his outrage that Wiesner may have committed an infringement on the First Amendment twice with the memos he issued.

"I'd ask the city manager if he understands his job and the Charter," Scott said addressing the council. "This is the most appalling thing I've seen and I don't know why you people aren't more upset about it."

city asked its insurance company to pay. Initially, the insurance company refused, but according to Young, there are some signs that it will pay for at least some of the bill.

While Young said there has not been any final confirmation that the insurance company will pay the bill, or even how much of it it will pay, there does seem to be coverage for this type of incident in the city's policy. While this will be good news for United Fire and Casualty and Charlevoix taxpayers, it will be bad news for CCMS.

Young said by getting the insurance company to pay the bill, the city's insurance company will then go after CCMS to get its money paid back, all without costing the Charlevoix taxpayers a cent.

Young said it is a strategic move he is making to help save the taxpayers money.

Representatives for CCMS did not return a telephone call seeking comment by press time.

Baby born in northern safety

about Tallahassee, Fla. as it was in the hurricane's sights as well. So the family abandoned that plan after arriving in Tallahassee and looked for a new destination.

However, Jeff and his brother discovered it would not be easy for them to meet up with the family after all. Jaimie said there was no gas for their truck and traffic was horrible, forcing the two men to wait out the approaching storm in West Palm Beach, Fla.

So, the family headed to Pensacola, Fla., without Jeff and his brother and then on to Montgomery, Ala.

Caleb was not going to wait out any storm though. While Jaimie was planning on a c-section, she knew she had to have the baby out soon. So, Jeff and Jaimie decided the next option would be to send Jaimie to Michigan to have the baby in the place she grew up.

Jaimie is a graduate of East Jordan High School and her parents still live in the area. After calling her parents, Jaimie's father bought a one-way airplane ticket to Alabama, met up with Jaimie and drove her to Charlevoix County.

But, they were not out of the woods yet. Jaimie did not have a doctor in Charlevoix.

"I didn't know quite what to do," she said.

After calling around to local hospitals, Jaimie came in contact with Dr. William Mosher of Charlevoix on Sept. 3. Mosher told Jaimie to come into his office on Tuesday, Sept. 7 — the day after Labor Day.

Jaimie said Mosher examined her and got her ready to have Caleb by c-section the next day, Sept. 8.

After fleeing across the United States from a hurricane, Jaimie gave birth to Caleb at 8:06 a.m., Sept. 8. He weighed 7 pounds, 12 ounces. Jeff and Jaimie gave Caleb the middle name Montgomery, in honor of the Alabama town where Jaimie started her trip north.

And luckily, Jeff was able to arrive in Charlevoix the day before the birth, just in time to meet his new son.

Jaimie said Jeff bought a plane ticket out of Florida, flew to Detroit, where family members met him — he is also from Michigan — and drove him to Flint. Once in Flint, he rented a car and drove to Charlevoix to be with Jaimie for the delivery.

Jaimie said she is very thankful for how everything turned out.

"I was hoping I wasn't going to have my baby on the road. I was hoping to make it to a safe place," she said. "All the while I was hoping my house would not get destroyed (it is OK) and my husband would make it out alive."

In the end, she said she ended up having the baby in a hospital in the area where she grew up and around her family.

Halverson: city mainly complies with ADA

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

At the Sept. 20 City Council meeting, Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson presented his report on handicapped parking.

In his report Halverson said Charlevoix may not have the exact minimum number of spaces required per parking lot, but isn't in violation of the Americans with Disabilities Act because the city is meeting the "Program Access" standards.

"You can't just count the spaces," he said.

Regardless of the city meeting the Program Access standards of the act, Halverson said the city will be adding two more handicapped parking spaces and will continue to keep an eye on the situation and add more spaces if necessary in the future.

"I don't see us ever going backwards," he said.

Halverson said in his report that on- and off-street parking, specific lot issues, pre-1992 and post-1992 construction and geographic definitions of "a" parking lot are all factors that come into play when deciding what the needs are for handicapped parking spaces.

His report also stated that a two-prong test exists, which determines handicapped parking regulations for a city. He said there is a chart that shows the number of handicapped spaces required per number of spaces and also the "Program Access" standard. Halverson said in his report that this may or may not reflect what the chart indicates.

Halverson said a parking lot can have the proper number of spaces but not be in compli-

Dog ban in park rule to be debated

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Should dogs be banned from East Park? Charlevoix City Council members are currently considering a year-round ban on dogs in East Park.

During the Sept. 20 meeting, council mentioned setting up a dog run of sorts, which would serve as an area for the dogs belonging to boaters to relieve themselves.

Mayor Gabe Campbell said the owners would still be required to pick up after their dog, which is another city ordinance.

Campbell said Police Chief Dennis Halverson told him the police couldn't enforce an ordinance if it was only for certain times of the year.

So, instead of banning dogs from festivities in East Park, Campbell was told it would be easier to not have them there at all.

In a past interview, Halverson said from an enforcement standpoint a total ban is easier to enforce and educate people about versus a partial or periodical ban given the tourist nature of Charlevoix.

Charlevoix High School seniors Joshua Stevenson, 17, and Alex Heffling, 18, disagree with the idea of banning dogs from East Park.

"It's hard to enforce," Heffling said. "They can't even enforce them to keep them on leashes."

Heffling said dogs shouldn't be banned from festival events either and that people should use com-

Sheriff investigating damage to church's crosses

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating the malicious destruction of a display at the Assembly of God Church, M-66 N in Marion Township at approximately 4:30 a.m. Saturday.

According to the sheriff's office, neighbors reported to 9-1-1 that a vehicle was driving through a field of 2000 white crosses, which had been placed as an anti-abortion protest on the church lawn.

Upon arrival the deputy located the suspect's vehicle abandoned in a nearby subdivision. The occupants fled on foot into the woods as the deputy approached.

Investigation has revealed the names of the teenage occupants and the owner of the vehicle involved.

Several hundred crosses were broken and more displaced.

The incident remains under investigation by the sheriff's office.

Insect class

On Sept. 23 members of the education staff from the Little Traverse Conservancy brought their Creepy Crawlers program to the North Point Natural Area near Mount McSauba. The group worked with Sara Jonker's second grade class from Charlevoix Elementary School. Jonker's class was learning about insects as a part of their science curriculum. The children huddled around Education Coordinator Marci Birkes as she showed them an insect she found while Jonker looks on.

Corrections

In last week's edition of the Charlevoix Courier, a story on page 8 about the Bite of Beaver Island, should have said the Casino Night will be at the Holy Cross Hall.

Also, in the Sept. 15 edition of the Charlevoix Courier, a photo on page 10 should have noted the donated light came from Spectrus, Inc.

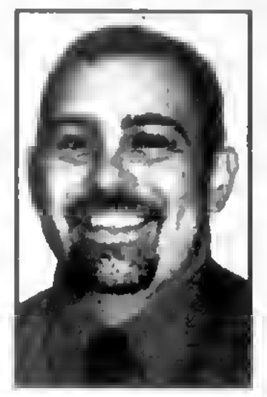
Editor makes an error and fun local politics



Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

Here are a few things that need to be said.

I was wrong

One of the most important things I have learned in my life is you have to admit when you are wrong. And when you write as many editorials and columns as I do, you are going to be wrong, so you might as well fess up when you are — it is the only right thing to do.

Therefore, I was wrong in my last column about handicapped parking in Charlevoix. In looking back on that column, I was too harsh and was not correct.

Due to bad information I had received, I believed that the number of handicapped parking could easily be figured out by just counting the spaces. But, new, correct information, shows that this is only partly the case.

As was pointed out to me, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) uses counting parking spaces as its basic foundation for determining the number of handicapped spaces a parking lot needs. But, it also takes into account the use of those spaces, the services that parking lot is used for and whether or not a community attempted to meet the spirit of the law.

For example, according to Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, if a parking lot has the minimum number of spaces of handicapped parking out of its total number of parking spaces, it may still be in violation depending on the businesses or organizations it serves. Such as, if a parking lot is located next to a health care facility, then that parking lot may need more handicapped parking spaces than a parking lot located randomly in the center of a town.

Plus, because of these types of gray areas in the ADA, if a community attempts to meet the needs of handicapped individuals with its parking, then it is meeting the spirit of the law.

So, what this means is there is leeway in the ADA when it comes to handicapped parking. Just counting the spaces is only the first step in determining if your community is in compliance.

What I was trying to get at in that column, but failed miserably at doing so, was to say the city should have looked at this problem in the past, especially since the law was enacted 14 years ago. I still have that opinion, but the city has looked at it now and is making changes, which is a very good thing.

In a report submitted to city council last week, Halverson said the city will add at least two more parking spaces and continue to survey handicapped parking in the community.

If, in the future, the community needs more based on further surveys, then Halverson will add more.

So, I stand corrected and apologize for my error.

But, I will not be taking back my challenge for government officials to spend some time in a wheelchair. I believe this will give them new insight into what a handicapped person faces every day, even if it is only for a couple of hours. With this new insight, perhaps they can use it as they design and improve the community in the future.

Politics

The city of Charlevoix has been abuzz lately with politics. This year we have a hotly contested mayoral race and several city council races, in addition to the national races.

Election years make this job a lot of fun. But in every hotly contested election there seems to be murmurs on the street that the local media, namely myself, is biased one way or the other. It seems to be even more intense this year.

I would like to respond by saying I have not taken a stand on any candidate and have not even decided if I will do editorial endorsements this year — I will still be meeting with each of the local candidates though. Rumors stating that I am supporting one candidate over the other are completely false and, if you really knew me, you would know how laughable it is to think I would violate my journalistic principles.

To be honest, since I live in Marion Township, I am just an observer in the city elections. For me to take part in these elections would be like trying to rewrite the end of a story that you are in the middle of reading. I want the election to play itself out without any help from me. That makes it more interesting for me, the observer.

The only issue that I am keenly interested in is which candidates are going to provide an open and accessible government to the citizens.

This is not just because an open government is the best form of democratic government, but also because it makes my job easier. With an open government, I don't have to fight city officials for information and can make sure I am giving my readers as much information as I can in our stories.

Honestly, I wish each of the whoever wins, deserves it and will do a wonderful job representing the people of Charlevoix.

And please, leave me out of this.

Thank you

Editor:

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf program enjoyed another splendid summer of golf. We need to take time to publicly thank the many people who have, through the years, contributed to see that young people receive the best opportunity to develop both personal attributes and golf skills. Because of this community involvement, we are able to maintain the level necessary to continue to be among the top 15 programs in the nation as recognized by the National Junior Golf Association. We have very unique features.

First, we are welcomed with open arms at five local courses. For this we have to recognize the interest and commitment of Belvedere Club manager Tom Conlan, Kip Thomas owner/manager of the Charlevoix Country Club, Tom Heid and Tom Bennet of the Charlevoix Municipal Course, Mike Pung and Jeff Smith co-owners of Dunmaglas, and the Antrim Dells head man, Patrick Frinn. Playing at five outstanding courses provides the program with a rare format, not duplicated anyplace in the United States

Second, is the local teaching professionals that donate their time to give outstanding teaching to our juniors. They include: Steve Braun, Scott Blechel, Marty Joy, Steve Good, and Joan Waha. We thank them for their dedication and teaching skills.

Third, is the 35 adult mentors who aid in all aspects of programming our golf product to local youth whether it's walking with playing groups, helping with skill and knowledge testing, or helping with our club loaner program.

Fourth, is our very unique scholarship program that really sets the Charlevoix junior golf apart from all the rest. Deserving juniors receive scholarships to attend Ferris State University's week long golf camp which has proven to be a tremendous maturing and educational experience for the 72 recipients sent thus far. Local support for this program has come in two special events that has produced the necessary finances to fund the huge endeavor. Steve Braun's 100 holes in a day attracts pledges per hole that goes into the scholarship fund as does the Supe' Invitational Scramble, directed this year by Marty Joy. We thank these two special golf professionals and all the people that provide the funds as well as the many that work behind the scenes at these events.

Fifth, is the many community-minded people that provide used clubs and balls for our program. Ken and Birdie Whitley need to be singled out as they provided five storage boxes of quality balls that enabled our Juniors to have decent balls to play with during the six week program.

As you can see it takes many people to provide a successful program like we have here in Charlevoix. We are fortunate to have the combination of caring people and world-class facilities and a "team work" approach that has made for another spectacular summer of golf for the area's young people. We thank one and all and will see you again next summer when we celebrate our 10th year of Charlevoix Junior Golf.

Protect the flag

Editor:

Medal of Honor Recipient Major General Patrick Brady said, "If the Flag is good enough to cover a coffin, it is good enough to protect."

While American soldiers are establishing democracy in Iraq, and American lawmakers praise their sacrifice and dedication to duty, isn't it ironic that some of these same lawmakers are turning their backs on Old Glory, the very symbol of the values we fight to preserve?

The Flag Amendment, SJR-4, which restores the right of Congress to protect our flag, is at risk of becoming the victim of shameful political gamesmanship. The Flag Amendment has the support of 80 percent of the American people and every state legislature has petitioned for its passage.

The House of Representatives has passed it five times. Yet, SJR-4, was stuck in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Several U.S. Senators recently boycotted Judiciary meetings in an effort to stall the flag amendment in committee. But a grassroots campaign changed that when tens of thousands of e-mails, calls and letters were received by the Senators. Within days the Flag Amendment moved out of committee and awaits Senate floor action. Now, we must ensure the vote will take place in September and get the Senators on record. Many of them want to stall the vote until after the November elections so they won't be accountable to their constituents. We must lift our voices in the fight to return to Congress our right to protect "Old Glory" and give her the honor and respect she deserves. The Flag Amendment is within three votes of succeeding! We need to send a clear message to the opponents, such as Carl Levin, to stop stalling and take a stand and vote!

We need to tell our Senator, who discounts the will of the people and belittles his colleagues who champion flag protection to either step forward in support, or step back out of the way. Let the people decide through the ratification process. It's urgent that Senator Carl Levin hear from you in the next few days and tell him, "We already know the count. You need to make it official. Take a stand and vote. "

We cannot continue to allow the courts to be the final judge in our right to protect the flag! Your support means traditional values — the values our country was founded on — will be upheld. I hope you will join me in wanting to protect the flag of our country.

Our country is at war and our flag leads the way. The flag is worth protecting. It covers the coffins of those we honor who offered their lives in service to our country. We should give our time and full attention to this honorable cause of protecting our Flag.

Crosses not a protest

Editor:

I am writing in response to the caption under the picture of the 2000 white crosses in last weeks Courier.

The caption read "Church protests with crosses."

This caption does not reflect the motive and the heart behind the project. Not knowing who is responsible for the caption, I would ask if anyone from the Courier inquired of Pastor Ryp Hankins why the church put out the crosses.

I do not believe that any of us that worked on the project of making the crosses felt that we were making a statement to simply protest abortion.

The message was to help us remember that thousands of innocent babies precious to our Heavenly Father never had a chance to be born and live a productive life. The following is a quote from the Bible that speaks of the formation of each new life conceived in the womb.

Psalm 139:13-19 (NKJV): For You formed my inward parts;

You covered me in my mother's womb.

I will praise You, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made;

Marvelous are Your works,

And that my soul knows very well.

My frame was not hidden from You,

When I was made in secret,

And skillfully wrought in the lowest parts of the earth.

Your eyes saw my substance, being yet unformed.

And in Your book they all were written,

The days fashioned for me,

When as yet there were none of them.

How precious also are Your thoughts to me, O God!

How great is the sum of them!

If I should count them, they would be more in number than the sand;

When I awake, I am still with You.

Every human life was in God's thoughts before the miracle of conception and birth. We only wanted to honor those who never had a chance to be born and fulfill their destiny.

If you pass by the crosses, please remember.

We were hoodwinked

Editor:

No one really remembers clearly that the number one goal after "9-11" was to end terrorism (weed out al-Qaeda in Afghanistan and the rest of the world). Somehow we began to think about Iraq.

Where al-Qaeda and weapons of mass destruction were not at.

I think we were hoodwinked! Hoodwinked by that elitist crowd that pretends it's not — just because its visible members learned how to speak down-home style.

Perversely, the result has been to increase the threat of terrorism in the U.S. while lining pockets at Haliburton and Bechtel.

War is a diversion

Editor:

Wake up, Mr. President, Iraq is not getting any better — over 1,029 soldiers dead, countless soldiers maimed for life and tens of thousands Iraqis killed in this illegal war!

This war is purely a diversion because the president could not capture bin Laden and had no idea how to fight terrorists. So, we are 200 billion dollars into Iraq and still no solution to 900,000 jobs lost, 40 million Americans without health care, a failed drug program, a failed "No Child Left Behind" program and high tax give away to the rich and the industrial complex.

It's time to send this cowboy back to his ranch.

Our country will suffer for the next 50 years if he's given another four years.

Annual Lorentz family reunion was a success

A reunion of the descendants of Anthony and Mary Braun Lorentz was given in Boyne City on the weekend of Sept. 10-12.

Those in attendance were all descendants of this German and Canadian-born couple and represented, in many cases, the sixth generation of several early Charlevoix, Antrim, Emmet, Cheboygan, Otsego, Grand Traverse and Mackinaw County pioneer families.

The weekend began on Friday morning when the group met at the Boyne District Library for a day of family research and exchange, followed by a dinner gathering at Pippins Restaurant in Boyne City.

Saturday's day long gathering was in the Whiting County Park log building. Money was raised to fund future reunions and an impressive sum was also collected for a tombstone project, which has been proposed by the group. Ticket sales were also used for a 50/50 drawing and door prize giveaways. A wide variety of items were awarded throughout the day. The winner of the 50/50 drawing was Nancy Niver Peck. A family crossword puzzle contest was also held and won by Kim Tripp and Edie Guise Tripp. Group and individual photographs were taken to commemorate the event, after a luncheon had been served Saturday afternoon. A number of family heirlooms and informational items were also on display on both days of the reunion.

On Saturday the group enjoyed an afternoon of mingling and meeting family members with an old-fashioned cookout later in the day. Awards were presented to the oldest attending relative (Lawrence Richey) and youngest attending relatives (Taylor and Madison Lorentz.) The award for greatest distance traveled was divided among three families (Larry and Marie Knapp, Bob and Janet Knapp Emerson, Sharla Gregg and Betty Kelley), and for least distance traveled (Caroline McCleary). The newest great-grandmother award went to Agnes Tornblom, and a "picture perfect" award was presented to reunion photographer, Bob Emerson. Many additional awards and notes of recognition were also given- including a handmade quilt, which had been signed by reunion attendees and presented to organizer, Patrick McCleary.

On Sunday morning the/group gathered for breakfast at the Boyne River Brewery in Boyne City before departing for home.

Those attending this year's event were: Margaret Kelley Brabant, Sault Ste. Marie; Leola Scott Carter, Charlevoix; Steven Detzler, Utica; Bob and Janet Knapp Emerson, Renton, Wash.; Sharla Knapp Gregg, Quemado, N.M.; Mary Basler Hoffer, Kentwood; Betty Kelley, Gallup, N.M.; Nancy Kelley, St. Louis, Mo.; Lawrence and Marie Schambron Knapp, Gleneden Beach, Or.; Dan and Erin Lorentz and children, Taylor and Madison, Six Lakes; Irene Smolarz Lorentz, Gaylord; Caroline Lemons McCleary, Boyne City; Patrick McCleary, Alanson; Donald and Saipin Moses, Louise Lemons Moses, Carol Moses Rowell, Ron and Terri Moses Sluis, all of Spring Lake; Ray Niver, Gladwin; Nancy Niver Peck, Gladwin; Kay Doane Richey and Lawrence Richey, Traverse City; Jim and Eva Goldner Sneathen, Grand Rapids; Rex and Maxine Stark-Behling and Margaret Howard Behling, Boyne City; Sue Hedden Seymour and Dave Hedden, Petoskey; Agnes Nelson Tornblom, Big Rapids; Kim Carter Tripp, Matt Tripp and Thomas and Edie Guise Tripp, all of Rockford.

The next Lorentz Family Reunion is scheduled to be on the weekend of Sept. 9-11, 2005. Any descendants of the following early northern Michigan families are encouraged to contact the reunion coordinator and are invited to attend: William and Mary Burns Fitzpatrick; Charles and Anna Burns Lucas; Edgar and Zoa Knapp Taylor; Ray and Sadie Knapp Niver; Ralph and Flossie Welch Nelson; John and Maude Knapp Noble; Albert and Eva Knapp Schluttenhoffer; Horace and Ruth Knapp Broyles; Vaulleney and Barbara Knapp Mitchell; Allison and Georgie Meyer Knapp; Roy and Hazel Smith Knapp; Stephen and Mary Lorentz Lemons; Roscoe and Hattie Cook Lorentz; Earl and Flossie Lorentz Willoughby; Guy and Reda Lorentz Scott; Margaret Kennedy and Guy Lorentz Sneathen; Wilbur and Maxine Lynch Lorentz; Carl and Lorraine Lorentz Gerard; Clarence and Beatrice Lorentz Williams; Stanley and Clarice Lorentz Helmka; Cecil and Iris Lawson Murray; Lawrence and Helen Millhouse Richey; Lloyd and Florence Whitman Lorentz; Stanley and Hazel Lorentz Wolfgang; Clifford and IdaMae Lorentz Roberts; Wilbur and Patricia Cline Lorentz; and William and Leda Lorentz Rentschler.

Anyone wishing to inquire on their connections to these families, contribute information for the family trees, histories or photograph albums, get on the reunion mailing list or into the private family web site, please contact Patrick McCleary at (2312) 348-8255 or Patrick@northlink.net.

Airport landscaping tabled at council meeting

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Municipal Airport is working toward beautifying its entrance and parking lot with different varieties of trees and stone.

At the Sept. 20 Charlevoix City Council meeting, the project was tabled until the Oct. 4 meeting, due to some questions concerning using $130,000 from the infrastructure fund to help finance the landscaping project.

The project will feature 4 inch to 8 inch granite cobble and different colored trees, which will designate the various parking lots.

Airport Manager Karyn Brooks said the project is asking for money from the city instead of using the federal grant money the airport receives due to Federal Aviation Administration guidelines.

"It is simply a ruling of the FAA that funding is only available for certain items on airport property and landscaping is not one of them," she said.

Brooks said the FAA and the Bureau of Aeronautics don't look to aesthetics, but primarily fund items that serve the use of the aircraft.

"Charlevoix is the one that cares about aesthetics," she said.

During the meeting, Third Ward council member Shirley Gibson questioned why the million-dollar grant money can't be used to fund the project.

Gibson said she supported making the airport beautiful, but thought it was a good idea to hold off on a decision due to the cut in state revenue the city may receive (due to state budget cuts), the CCMS check ordeal and various other items currently facing the city.

First Ward councilmember Bob Timms said he is against using money from the infrastructure fund to finance other ventures.

During the meeting, First Ward council member Bill Haggard said he just wants to see the project completed. Haggard said he doesn't like to see money used for something other than infrastructure, but said that money was already budgeted for this use.

Timms said council wasn't given a lot of time to study the budget this year. He said just because the project is in the budget doesn't mean the city has to spend money on it.

Brooks said the airport secured a low-cost loan and was approved for the budget by council. However, she said we still have to wait and see if council still goes through with their initial approval.

Brooks said she is disappointed in regards to the delay in a decision because of the planting time necessary to allow the trees to take root.

Once the trees are planted they will need to be watered until they are established. Brooks said an estimated cost for maintenance is $1,000 to $2,000.

Brooks said this cost is already allocated for the project. The only other foreseen cost is to use herbicide to kill any weeds that may grow up through the stone.

At the meeting Dave Scott, Third Ward City Council candidate and pilot, suggested having grass islands with petunias on them. He said the petunias are already taken care of during the year and this would be one more stop along the way.

Brooks said the weeding and mowing involved would cost more than the current design.

Pink Ribbon Ride a success once again in Boyne

Bike4BreastCancer has come to Michigan, and the women of this Northern Michigan community will benefit greatly from its efforts.

Founded in 1996 by President Kathy Betz of Bel Air, Maryland, the organization strives to raise awareness of the devastation of breast cancer, and to provide the latest information relating to all aspects of breast cancer detection and treatment. Rather than raising funds for all important research and treatment programs, Bike4BreastCancer prefers to involve itself at the grass roots level, by sponsoring individual Pink Ribbon Rides in small towns and cities throughout the country, and utilizing the proceeds within the community.

The organization currently sponsors pink ribbon rides in Havre De Grace, MD; Greenbelt, MD, and Boyne City and has to date raised over $50,000 for local programs.

In 2002, when word of this effort reached Boyne City resident Kathy McDonald, herself a breast cancer patient and avid cyclist, she knew it would be perfect for her community, and set about organizing the annual event. McDonald herself did not survive to participate in the inaugural ride in 2003, but the support of friends, family, and countless volunteers see that her dream of helping others stays alive.

At its second annual Pink Ribbon Ride in memory of Kathy McDonald, the Charlevoix/Emmet County Chapter (Boyne City) of Bike4BreastCancer raised over $16,000 bringing its total contribution over two years to $26,383. Proceeds from the events are donated to Northern Michigan Hospital Foundation and Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation, to assist them in their efforts to provide education, support programs, and mammogram screenings for those in need throughout the Northern Michigan service area.

This year's ride, at Veterans Park in Boyne City, included 98 participants from across the state. Riders chose one of three routes based on their skill levels. Local businesses and residents donated supplies, food, drink, prizes and even the Ironton Ferry was kept busy as it transported pink-ribbon-clad riders during the final leg of their 42-mile journey around Lake Charlevoix.

Other routes took riders through town on a 17-mile ride to the Ferry, or on a simple spin around the park. As a result, Bike4BreastCancer is once again helping the women of Northern Michigan understand that a diagnosis of breast cancer need not be a death sentence.

Plans for the Third Annual Pink Ribbon Ride are already underway, as the organization prepares for another event on June 18, 2005.

NORTHERN MICHIGAN HOSPITAL
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

The NMH Trustees claim "Business as Usual." NMH has attempted through advertising and in its propaganda to argue that the Hospital is providing the same level of care as it did before the strike. NMH Trustees make these claims despite the following:

- The RNs currently on strike have over 2,400 years of nursing experience.
- NMH claims they have hired 189 nurses since the beginning of the strike but they do not tell you that 115 have been voluntarily terminated.
- NMH claims to have 90 permanent replacement RNs but they do not tell you that 44 of the replacement RNs have less than three (3) years of experience and are recent graduates of nursing schools. There is no substitute for experience.

There is no substitute for experience and there can not be "Business as Usual" until the seasoned, experienced nurses on strike are returned to the job. NMH attempts to gloss over the loss of experience by propaganda and advertising. Consider the following:

- In 2002 while the RNs were on strike for less than two (2) months, NMH spent approximately $8,000 on advertising. In 2003, NMH spent nearly $800,000 on advertising to bring more patients back to the Hospital. The NMH Trustees do not underestand that advertising quality care is not a replacement for having experienced, seasoned nurses back on the job.
- Doctors have left NMH since the strike began and are seeing patients in other local hospitals.
- NMH has laid off an infusionist, an integral part of the cardiac surgery team.
- NMH has been cited by the State for violations which resulted in findings against them.

"Business as Usual" will be returned to NMH when the trustees finally decide to bargain in good faith so a fair and equitable agreement can be reached with their RNs. If you believe that a return of the experienced RNs is in the best interest of the community and NMH, please let NMH know by calling (231) 487-4000.

Paid for by striking RNs who have over 2,400 years of nursing experience.

Council resolves Georgi issue

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

At the Sept. 20 meeting, Charlevoix City Council voted to resolve the issue between the city and Charlevoix resident Richard E. Georgi.

The council voted to allow Georgi to continue operating his sprinkler system and also voted to create a drainage swale through the berm area of Georgi's property to allow for drainage from the street to and flow into Michigan Beach Park area.

At the meeting Georgi said the water was gathering in pools in the front of his yard and he was simply trying to rectify the problem by putting in a drain and apologized for doing so.

At the meeting, Georgi said he would like to see the city maintain the park.

Mayor Gabe Camphell said Georgi can leave his sprinkler system in as long as he comes to the city first next time.

"I don't have a problem with someone trying to make it better," Campbell said. "I have a problem with doing something on city property."

Although Georgi pays for the water himself, the issue actually dates back to when Georgi put his driveway in, which extends onto city property. It became an issue when pavement was being put in.

Georgi said in a past interview that the driveway has been there for more than 50 years and could he his property due to adverse possession.

That is not the case, however, because the laws changed and Georgi found it easier to sign an agreement waiving his right to claim the small part of Michigan Beach Park as his in order to keep the driveway where it is.

A few months hack, the city was upset that Georgi had installed a sprinkler system in his yard because it is technically on city property and waters city grass.

Georgi said he has lived in his home for 32 years and has been watering the city property for 20 years. The sprinkler system is relatively new, but since he signed an estopple agreement waiving his right to ownership, Georgi said he doesn't see the harm in watering the land.

Georgi said he waters the grass because if he didn't the city wouldn't and then the grass would turn brown.

Crooked Tree Arts Center to offer strings program

It's back to school time for the Crooked Tree Arts Center's Beginning and Intermediate String Program.

Robert Dudd, Dorothy Gerber, chair for Children and Music will be visiting area schools starting this week.

Crooked Tree Arts Center's objective is to go into the schools and give every public and private school child the opportunity to learn string instruments in their own classroom, with instruction provided by Dudd.

Musical instruments are rented to families at a very low cost. In cases where families are not able to provide for the instrument rental fee,. Crooked Tree Arts Center ensures that the child has an instrument provided at reduced cost through scholarship funds.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's Beginning Strings Program is a community effort, as it requires the cooperation of the Arts Center, school districts, educators and parents.

Support of the Beginning Strings Program is provided generously through the Dorothy Gerber Chair for Children and Music and the Gerber Music Education Program. This anonymous gift enhances the Arts Center's efforts to bring music education to the young people of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

The Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra and the Beginning Strings Program directly benefit from the gift, named in memory of the work of Mrs. Gerber.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center is located downtown Petoskey at 461 E. Mitchell Street. For more information regarding the strings program, please call the Arts Center at (231) 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org.

Mayor candidates discuss issues at city airport

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With all the new developments currently underway at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport such as two new taxiways and hangar development, mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson take a closer look.

Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

Incumbent Campbell thinks the airport is coming along nicely.

"Well, I think the airport has improved wonderfully," he said. "I'm real happy with the airport."

Campbell said he is happy that CEMEX is donating 5,000 tons of limestone, which MDC Contracting commonly known as Manthei will give back as a $5,000 donation to the airport.

One thing Campbell is not happy about is the airport asking for $130,000 from the infrastructure fund to finance their landscaping project.

Campbell said with money being tight this year due to budget cuts in the state, he doesn't want to see money going toward something that can be held off a few years in order to keep essential services for the citizens of Charlevoix.

"If money is getting tight, then we're going to have to look at it really close in the next budget," he said.

Instead of using that $130,000 from infrastructure on the airport, Campbell thinks it should be used to put a sidewalk in along Park Avenue so people can be safe while strolling along Michigan Beach Park.

"We don't have to spend it on the airport all in one year," he said. "The sidewalk is more important."

Even though he thinks the airport landscaping project can wait, Campbell thinks it's a wonderful idea and said the current design should be kept.

"It's not really the end of the world if it doesn't get done this year or the next," he said.

Campbell also said the city needs to wait and see if it will be fined for the CCMS check ordeal before it allocates anymore money.

Originally the contract with Island Airways was granted without being put out for bidding and Campbell thinks that was wrong.

He said he wonders why the city would have been reluctant to put the contract out for bidding when it's required.

"We should go by the Charter," he said.

Candidate Carlson said he thinks the upgrades the airport is currently undergoing are good, especially since the parking lot has been needed for awhile.

Carlson said he doesn't think the Charter was broken when the contract was initially signed between the City of Charlevoix and Island Airways.

"As I understand, everything was followed according to the Charter," he said.

Carlson said City Attorney Jim Young gave his opinion that everything was followed and done according to the Charter.

"Putting something up for bid is good," he said. "But cheaper is not always better."

Carlson said he thinks if the city was comfortable with their dealings with Island Airways then they made the right choice.

However, he said if the Charter said that particular contract should have gone out for bidding then it should have.

But, if everything was followed according to the Charter and it wasn't required to be put out then he doesn't have a problem with it going to Island Airways.

Carlson said lowering the land lease fees from 79 cents to 70 cents may bring in more interest to the airport. But, if it doesn't there won't be a loss of income for the city since nothing had been developed in the past few years.

"I have limited dealings with the airport because I'm not a pilot," he said. "I fly out once or twice a year."

With that knowledge, Carlson said he thinks the airport is run well and has never had a problem.

City council candidates discuss airport

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The city airport is currently undergoing some projects that will enhance features already in place such as new taxiways and paving an earthen path used by some pilots.

With the Nov. 2 elections drawing near, Charlevoix City Council candidates take a closer look.

Incumbent Bill Haggard said he thinks the airport is progressing nicely with the new developments currently underway.

"It's another access into town," he said. "It's a beautiful terminal."

With progress underway, Haggard said City Council and the general public could be informed more about what is occurring out at the airport.

"It's one of those things that if you don't have enough meetings people think there's something funny going on," he said.

The original contract between Island Airways and the city wasn't put out for bid, which the City Charter states it must be for goods and services over $20,000.

Haggard said he has to rely on the advice of City Attorney Jim Young, who said the contract didn't need to be bid out.

He also said that even if the contract had been bid out there wasn't much interest.

"I'm 100 percent for Island Airways," he said. "I think they do a tremendous job out there on Beaver Island and on the Charlevoix side."

The airport receives over $1 million in federal grant money each year, but is asking the city for $130,000 to fund its landscaping project. The money is to come from infrastructure funds.

Haggard, who is opposed to using money from infrastructure to finance non-infrastructure projects, said he just wants to see the airport project completed. He said he'd like to see more grant money being used, but would need to investigate the situation more.

Haggard said he has heard that there are certain aspects the Bureau of Aeronautics won't let the airport use money on, such as landscaping.

Candidate Rebecca Doan said she money in the infrastructure fund should be going toward the upkeep of Charlevoix's roads, curbs and sewer.

"I am totally against spending $130,000 on landscaping at the airport," she said. "It's a ridiculous way to spend taxpayer's money."

Doan said city money shouldn't be used in such a manner since the city doesn't know if insurance will cover the CCMS check or how much money they are going to receive from the state this year due to budget cuts.

Since the airport already receives over $1 million in federal grant money, Doan would like to see more grants being used to fund things such as landscaping.

"I always agree with looking at grants first," she said.

In order to keep track of how that money is being spent, Doan said she'd like to see a more detailed budget issued in a monthly report. The report would state what the grant money has accomplished and what the city hopes it will.

The land lease fee was lowered from 79 cents per square foot to 70 cents per square foot by the City Council during the Aug. 16 meeting. This was done in order for the airport to keep a potential renter interested because they had been quoted the price as being 70 cents.

"I disagree," Doan said. "It should have been kept at 79 cents."

Doan said only time will tell whether or not all the current developments at the airports will bring more people to Charlevoix.

"I believe that's their hope," she said.

Incumbent Karen I. Campbell said she thinks the development is great, especially since CEMEX is providing the limestone being used to prepare for paving of access ways to the main taxilane area.

"It's wonderful we don't have to pay that many thousands of dollars for stone," she said.

Campbell said the airport is now letting council and Charlevoix residents know what is going on due to Third Ward candidate and Charlevoix resident Dave Scott.

She said Scott's experience as a pilot enabled him to have a better understanding of what was occurring at the airport, which most of the council members don't.

Campbell has issues with the layout of the parking lot since winter is right around the corner. She said all the islands will make it more difficult to plow once snow falls.

Campbell added, the contract with Island Airways should have been put out for bidding,

And even though the airport receives federal grant money, Campbell doesn't mind city dollars being used to fund projects for now.

Campbell said the airport doesn't need to continue building fancy things out there, but just make the airport efficient and get it done.

"I just think we need to fix that up for the people who use it," she said.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell was unable to be reached for comment by press time.

Incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said he thinks the airport is good for the Charlevoix economy.

But, Chamberlain said the airport is used by a select few and usually isn't brought up in conversation unless the person is using or dealing with it.

"The typical citizen doesn't really show a lot of concern over the airport," he said.

Chamberlain said the two most common comments he hears from people who deal with the airport is the price of fuel and the length of the runway.

Chamberlain, who flies periodically to Beaver Island for business, said he is impressed with how the airport has grown over the years since he first flew to Beaver Island in 1970.

Chamberlain added, the contract with Island Airways was not in violation of the City Charter,

"First of all, the City Attorney (Jim Young) made the comment about when dealing with goods and services and dealing with safety you don't need to take the lowest bid," Chamberlain said.

Chamberlain said Island Airways was up against a "mom-and-pop" operation and was granted the contract because of safety reasons and the fact that Island Airways could survive the winter months in regards to business.

"I am convinced having someone other than the city operate the airport is more economical for the taxpayers," he said.

He said the grants awarded to the airport are usually allocated for specific items. He said having a master plan allows the city see where money is needed.

"Channel your money in an organized manner to meet the goals of the community," he said.

Chamberlain said he hopes the lowered land lease fee from 79 cents to 70 cents will bring more people into airport and Charlevoix.

"I think the airport's been making more and more improvements over the years," he said. "It's a hidden gem in the community."

Candidate Dave Scott, who is a pilot himself, said the airport could run more efficiently than it does and in turn, make money to support itself.

"I don't want the city to spend a penny on that airport," Scott said. "It should be self-funding."

The $1 million in federal grant money that the airport receives should be utilized in a manner that would lessen the amount of direct city dollars being used to fund different projects, Scott said.

"I strongly support setting up a permanent committee to oversee the airport because we are spending precious city money when it should be generating revenue," he said. "That's just evidence that the city manager has done an ineffectual job of managing the airport."

The one mistake the city made in regards to the airport, Scott said, is that it handed over the contract to Island Airways without putting it out for bids.

"That's a direct, absolute violation of the city ordinance," he said.

Scott said the city council has been given poor advice by City Attorney Jim Young, who tells them that it was okay to give the contract to Island Airways.

The City Charter limits the contract lease for municipal property to five years, but Scott said the contract was handed over for three years.

"That's a real good indication that they knew something was wrong," he said.

Another aspect of the airport that the city hasn't utilized is the selling of fuel to pilots.

"We sell 30,000 fewer gallons a year in 100 low lead gas for Piston airplanes than Harbor Springs," he said.

The airport is also selling less Jet A fuel than other airports in the area.

"Other airports are doing a lot more with a lot less," Scott said.

Scott is also opposed to spending $130,000 of city money from the infrastructure fund to finance a landscaping project at the airport.

The money should be used to fix roads and other infrastructure projects. In order to cut back on the money for landscaping, Scott suggesting planting petunias on the islands in the parking lot.

He said it would reflect Charlevoix's theme and could cost a lot less than the projected idea of different colored trees and stone.

Student speaks out against exotic animal ban

Josh Stevenson, 17, a senior at Charlevoix High School stood up during the Sept. 20 City Council meeting and voiced his opposition to a proposed animal ordinance that would ban snakes and other exotic pets from the downtown area.

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

City Council is proposing an ordinance that would prohibit exotic and dangerous animals from the downtown area and ban species of snakes that are either poisonous or constrictors.

At the Sept. 20 meeting, council read the proposed amendment and set an informal, informational hearing for 7 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 4 in council's chambers in City Hall.

Written comments can be sent to the City Clerk's Office at 210 State Street.

During the Sept. 20 meeting, one concerned citizen stood up and told council he thought the proposed ordinance is unfair and slanted toward a bias of snake owners.

Joshua Stevenson, 17, a senior at Charlevoix High School, was attended the meeting as a requirement for his government class, but decided to stay when he saw the ordinance listed on the agenda.

He said the proposed ordinance is asinine because it is unfair how it will restrict some people from bringing their pets out while others can.

He said that if council finds it necessary to ban snakes from being allowed in public places, everyone with a pet should be held to the same restriction.

Stevenson told council that he is deathly afraid of dogs, due to a few bad experiences he's had in the past. However, his fear is not being address because dogs are allowed to roam the city.

He said there are times when people don't have their dogs on a leash and the best solution for him would be to only allow Chihuahuas in the downtown area.

"People should carry their dogs because the people don't put their snakes on the ground," he said.

Stevenson said he has about six friends who own constrictors in the Charlevoix area. He said this ordinance seems to focus on snakes and is being proposed to quiet the fears of a select few.

"The people of Charlevoix have always existed fine up to this year and it started this summer, but people have had snakes before this summer and always walked them downtown," he said.

Stevenson said he doesn't understand why the issue is coming up now.

"I don't think the issue is deserving the attention it's getting," he said.

Mayor Gabe Campbell said there is no place for snakes in crowds. He said either last summer, or the summer before, two young women dashed across Bridge Street with their babies to get away from a snake.

Campbell said it could have resulted in a serious accident. He also said a person wearing his snakes downtown seemed to enjoy the fear he was creating by continuing toward some women who started to run.

"Poisonous snakes and constrictors have no place in a crowd," he said.

Campbell said people should feel free to enjoy what Charlevoix has to offer without the fear of running into a snake.

When Stevenson stood up and compared his fear of dogs to that of people with snakes, Campbell thought he was making a good point. However, Campbell said dogs and snakes are like comparing apples and oranges.

"I was glad he did get up and say something," he said. "It's good to hear people's opinions."

Campbell said he likes seeing young faces in attendance at meetings even if they're there as a requirement for government class.

"It's nice to have young people getting involved," he said. "I don't have to agree with them, but I think it's great that they come."

To his knowledge, Campbell doesn't know of anyone getting hurt by an exotic animal in Charlevoix.

The proposed ordinance describes a dangerous animal as:

"(1) any animal which because of its size, vicious propensity or other characteristic, would constitute a danger to human life, property or domestic animals if not restrained or kept in a cage; or

(2) an age, a monkey of any species which exceeds 20 pounds, alligators, crocodiles, a snake which has a poisonous bite, or a snake which is a constrictor."

Campbell said he believes this ordinance will not prohibit a horse or Laura the elephant — a common attraction during the Charlevoix Venetian Festival — from the downtown area.

If anything should come of question, Campbell said these animals would probably be allowed with a permit.

Also, large dogs such as Saint Bernard's, Newfoundland's and Great Dane's would not be illegal downtown just because of their large size.

Campbell said the ordinance if passed, could always be fine tuned if a problem occurred. Otherwise, he thinks it addresses the problem at hand.

"I think it's pretty well written," he said.

The ordinance was written up by City Attorney Jim Young, Campbell said, and based off of several ordinances in effect in other cities.

Area fire departments to give demonstration Friday

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

In conjunction with the opening of "Ladder 49" on Friday, Oct. 1 at Cinema III in Charlevoix, the Charlevoix City Fire Department and the Charlevoix Township Fire Department are teaming up to display the skills and bravery firefighters face when they are called to a scene.

City Fire Chief Paul Ivan and Township Fire Chief Curt Thompson will be taking part in the aerial ladder and jaws of life demonstration at 3 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 2 in front of Cinema III on Antrim Street in Charlevoix.

The demonstration occurs between the 1 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. showings of "Ladder 49" so those seeing the film will not miss the show.

Throughout the day, firefighters from both departments will be running the concession stands and soliciting funds, which will go toward the benefit of Steve Paterka, a township fireman who fell ill last year. Paterka will be on hand to see the demonstration and his fellow firemen.

Strange package turns out to be woman's stolen purse

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A stolen purse in a mailbox caused the temporary closing of Don's IGA on Petoskey Avenue Wednesday.

According to Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson, his department was called to Don's IGA around 12:30 p.m., Wednesday after a postal delivery person found a strange looking package in a mailbox outside of the grocery store.

During a pickup at the mailbox, the employee found a package wrapped in paper, taped up and with no addresses written on it or stamps.

Once the police department arrived, they shut down Don's IGA, evacuated the immediate area and called in a Michigan State Police Bomb Squad unit from Lansing.

Halverson said the bomb squad arrived around 7 p.m., Wednesday, examined the package and found a woman's purse.

Not taking any chances, the bomb squad blew the purse up and discovered it did not contain any explosive or harmful devises.

Halverson said further investigation revealed the purse was stolen from a vehicle in Traverse City on Monday, Sept. 20.

The owner of the purse was given back what was left of it.

"I have no idea why someone would steal a purse and put it in a mailbox, except maybe they had an attack of conscience," Halverson said.

Is this a good one?

Delaney Smith, 8, of Petoskey, checks out one of the apples she picked Saturday at Friske Orchards on US-31 in Atwood. The farmer's market was having a fall harvest festival.

Charlevoix Apple Festival to have fun for the family

Charlevoix invites everyone to experience autumn in northern Michigan at the 25th Annual Apple Festival and Craft Show, Oct. 8 - 10.

This three-day event, sponsored by the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, is hosted yearly to honor local orchards and growers who, in the spirit of the season, line Bridge Street to bring the fall harvest directly to you.

The festival's focal point is the apple. More than 30 types of apples, including the hard-to-find "antique varieties," will be on hand as well as other fall harvest items such as pumpkins, squash, jam, honey and cider just to name a few.

Charlevoix's waterfront parks will have many activities including a fine arts and crafts show featuring 100 artisans and craftsmen and women ready to show their wares. There will also be pony rides, a petting zoo and pumpkin painting for the kids.

Take a nostalgic look back in time with the Northern Michigan Antique Flywheelers. The exhibit will include farming and agricultural equipment from days gone by.

The Apple Festival is from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Oct. 8 and 9 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Oct. 10.

St. Mary School to host Northern Lights

St. Mary School will be hosting the 9th Annual Northern Lights Celebration Dinner Dance Auction.

This year's event will be from 5:30 p.m. to midnight, Saturday, Oct. 16. The celebration will be at St. Mary School Family Center, 1005 Bridge Street, in Charlevoix.

The Northern Lights Celebration is the largest fund-raising event for the school. Auction expenses are kept to a minimum with all proceeds going directly to the school operational budget.

Tickets are $60 per person for the evening. Tickets for the auction and dancing are $30 per person. This is a community wide event, with everyone welcome to attend.

Please call (231) 547-9441 to make a reservation.

Charlevoix football team makes it three in a row

By B. JON GOHS
Football writer

Look up the word domination in the dictionary and you may well see highlights from Friday nights Rayders/Elks game.

The Rayders may have given up their chance at a 24-0 shutout in order to give some of their subs a chance to play, but a win is a win and Friday's 24-12 victory over Elk Rapids gives the Rayders a three game winning streak and half the wins necessary to enter the playoffs.

"We were able to get a lot of our subs into play," Coach Jess said "It was a mix of juniors and seniors who don't often get to play."

Elk Rapids managed to score two touchdowns in the fourth quarter, but only after Coach Jess began giving some lesser used players a chance to compete.

And although there was still a full quarter in which Elk Rapids could have tied things up, Coach Jess said, "You're always worried till the games over with, but I felt comfortable with where we were at."

Know thy opponent seemed to be the theme of Friday's game as there were no surprises from the Elks offense.

"We knew they were going to run the ball and occasionally throw a pass," he said. "They ran successfully in the first quarter but our defense picked it up and shut them down."

And shut them down they did. Evan Keller lead defense with 10 tackles, while Jeff Golovich had 7 tackles, a fumble recovery and he kicked three extra points. Michael Wojan also had 7 tackles and Ray Jones had a fumble recovery.

While quarterback Cody Crain and company did not disappoint, his passing percentage dropped significantly from an average in the high 50s to a season low of 36 percent. Crain was nine for 25 for a 155 yards with two touchdowns and one interception. Perennial rushing leader Russell Williams had 16 carries for 71 yards with one TD and the lead rusher also got the chance to sack the Elks' quarterback.

The top receivers against Elk Rapids were Mitchell Klooster with four receptions for 85 yards and two touchdowns and Ben Bergman with four catches for 63 yards and a 20 yard field goal.

According to Coach Jess, the significance of three consecutive wins can't be understated.

"We've won three conference games and one of our goals is to win the conference," he said. "And it helps our confidence tremendously."

But, he added, "We're just taking it one game at a time and Kalkaska is what we're focusing on."

With a history of close match ups between Charlevoix and Kalkaska next Friday's game will be a real test of the Rayders resolve.

"It's been fairly even but they beat us last year by one point," he said.

And, he added, Kalkaska is known for an imposing offensive line.

"They run the ball a lot using the 'Wing T' type of offense whereas we run the spread offense," he said.

The Wing T offense, Jess said, is more common when a team has larger linemen, in contrast to the spread offense which utilizes linemen who are more mobile.

"Wing T is probably one of the more popular offense for high school because most teams can't really throw the ball," he said.

Three wins or no the Rayders will work as hard as ever this week in anticipation of the game against Kalkaska.

"We need to continue to work on our defensive line blocking and work on our passing game," he said.

And, he added, just like last Friday, "Defense needs to pick up the intensity right from the start."

The learning never stops under the tutelage of Coach Jess as the Rayders continue to make improvements from game to game.

"Our special teams were excellent in our last game and our linebackers have just gotten better each game," Jess said.

And, he added, "They're doing a great job of doing the reads and filling the holes."

The Rayders try for their fourth conference win against Kalkaska at 7 p.m., Friday Oct. 1 at Kipke field.

Golf team looking good

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School varsity golf team has been very busy on the courses lately.

The team faced several others on Sept. 21 at Grayling, was at home on Sept. 20 for a match and on Sept. 17 they took part in another match in Gaylord.

On Sept. 21, the Rayders took fifth place on a tie for 171 with Elk Rapids. To determine the placing, the match rested on the fifth man score, which put Elk Rapids in fourth, because their golfer had a better score.

Individual results for this match were: Chris Wyniawskyj with 41, Kris Bartling with 41, Chris Golski with 49, Kyle DeYoung with 43, Kenny Anderson with 46 and Kevin Kusina with 47.

On Sept. 20, the team hosted eighth conference schools in a home match at the Belvedere Golf Club. The Rayders took third place in this meet.

Individual results were: Wyniawskyj with 39, Bartling with 43, Golski with 48, DeYoung with 41, Anderson with 48 and Kusina with 48.

On Sept. 17, they took part in the Gaylord Invitational. The Rayders finished in third place out of 12, with a score of 342.

Individual results were: Wyniawskyj with 79, Bartling with 85, DeYoung with 85, Stephen Parker with 93 and Matt Novotny with 97.

Soccer team splits week

In Thursday's Lake Michigan Conference match, Charlevoix came up short by losing to East Jordan 3 to 1.

Matt Teuscher scored the only goal for Charlevoix.

"I'm glad to see Northern Michigan soccer getting better," Coach Block said.

On Sept. 20, Charlevoix beat Grayling 3 to 1 to add another win to their Lake Michigan Conference.

"Sophomore Trevor Mays was a defensive stand out," said Block.

Charlevoix cross country teams running strong in area meets

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School boys' and girls' cross country teams are still making great progress in meets.

On Sept. 25, the girls' ninth and tenth grade team finished second in the Petoskey Invitational, while the eleventh and twelfth grade team finished fifth. During the same meet, the boys ninth and tenth grade team finished fourth, while the eleventh and twelfth grade team finished third.

Girls' coach Mary Plude said, "We had a great team effort from top to bottom. These girls are a very competitive group and they continue to drop their times as a result of their motivation."

She added, "Even though these were two separate races, there was still only a minute gap from first through six places."

Individual medalists of the eleventh and twelfth grade girls' team were: Theresa Martin in eighteenth, with a time of 21 minutes, 38 seconds and Sonya Plude in twenty-second, with a time of 21 minutes, 49 seconds.

Individual medalists of the ninth and tenth grade girls' team were: Emily Morgridge in sixth, with a time of 21 minutes, 16 seconds; Brittney Lamb in thirteenth, with a time of 21 minutes, 42 seconds; Mia Matchett in seventeenth place, with a time of 22 minutes, 8 seconds; Emily Westenbroek in eighteenth place, with a time of 22 minutes, 17 seconds and Alina Dhaseleer in twenty-fourth place, with a time of 23 minutes, 13 seconds.

Individual medalists of the eleventh and twelfth grade boys' team were: Brandon Stevens in seventh, with a time of 16 minutes, 58 seconds; Jared Hunt in twenty-eighth, with a time of 18 minutes, 6 seconds; and Nate Sotuyo in twenty-ninth, with a time of 18 minutes, 6 seconds.

Individual medalists of the ninth and tenth grade boys' team were: Scott Plude in fifth, with a time of 17 minutes, 23 seconds; Jacob Wimmer in thirteenth, with a time of 17 minutes, 50 seconds and Zach Scharenbrach in twenty-fourth, with a time of 18 minutes, 30 seconds.

On Sept. 22, both teams also did well in the Boyne Valley Tri-Meet.

The girls' varsity team finished first, while the boys' varsity team finished second — behind Kalkaska.

"This is really a tough course, with poor footing. The girls' did an excellent job in defeating two of our conference teams," Plude said.

The top runners and their times on the girls' team were: Anna Taylor with 23 minutes, 37 seconds; Liz Madison with 25 minutes, 53 seconds; Lisa Kuebler with 26 minutes, 19 seconds; Jacky Heckendorn with 26 minutes, 55 seconds; Gabe Dhaseleer with 28 minutes, 36 seconds; Ellie Strong with 29 minutes, 17 seconds; Michelle Lemond with 30 minutes, 2 seconds; Nicole Twining with 30 minutes, 53 seconds; Amy Drew with 32 minutes, 42 seconds and Anne Strawbridge with 34 minutes, 3 seconds.

Charlevoix basketball stays on winning streak

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

The Charlevoix Rayders showed once again why they are the second-ranked team in Class C according to the Detroit Free Press and third-ranked by to the Associated Press with a 66-23 blowout win over Grayling.

Charlevoix is now 9-0 overall and 4-0 in the Lake Michigan conference.

Coach Keith Haske is no stranger to having teams ranked highly in the state, having coached the Rayders boys varsity team to a 137-42 record in his seven seasons at the helm, including a current streak of five straight 20-plus win seasons.

The Rayders' formula against the Vikings was similar to their other eight wins—strangling defensive pressure leading to easy baskets.

"It was a great team effort," Haske said. "Our pressure defense has been taking people out of their games all year long."

Charlevoix led 20-7 after one period and used a 28-1 second quarter bulge to put the game out of reach by the half.

Grace Farrell led the Rayders with 12 points and nine rebounds. Shannon Dibble had 11 points, three assists and three steals.

Madison Ramsey scored 10 points while Kari Way contributed seven points, six rebounds and three assists.

Charlevoix hosted Traverse City St. Francis on Tuesday, Sept. 28 in a battle for first place in the Lake Michigan Conference. Results will appear in next week's Courier.

"It'll be a good game for us," Haske said. "We need to be challenged a bit."

MDEQ advises against burning leaves this fall

"Don't Burn Those Leaves" is the message this autumn from the Department of Environmental Quality and the Department of Natural Resources.

Leaf burning creates air pollution, contributes to breathing problems, is a serious fire hazard, and illegal in many Michigan cities and communities.

Burning leaves generate ash (particulate), and also release carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons that contain toxic irritants and carcinogenic compounds that may be harmful to children and people with allergies, asthma, or heart disease.

In locations where burning is allowed, homeowners are reminded: First, obtain a permit before your burn, and second you are responsible for damage which results from a fire you start.

Michigan law prohibits the disposal of leaves and yard waste in landfills, but there is an alternative; citizens are encouraged to compost or mulch leaves into a valuable resource instead. Mulching and composting are easy, safe, and environmentally sound ways to manage most yard waste. The easiest is to simply mow over leaves with a lawnmower to chop them into fine mulch. Leaving the mulch on your lawn provides nutrients your lawn will need to look great next spring.

Composting programs are available in many communities. Contact your local city, township, or county Department of Public Works to find out how your community disposes of leaves and other yard waste.

If your community does not have a leaf or yard waste program, the following information is available from the DEQ Web site:

- A one-page brochure entitled Open Burning Regulations in Michigan is available via www.michigan.gov/deqair. Select "Open Burning Information" listed under Spotlight. (Printed copies won't be available until after October 2004.)
- DEQ's brochure Home Composting and other alternatives to open burning are also found in the "Open Burning Information" Web page or for more information, contact the DEQ Environmental Assistance Center at (800) 662-9278.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency also has helpful composting information at www.epa.gov/grtlakes/seahome/housewaste/src/compost.htm or, you may contact your local university extension or public library.

For more information on where to obtain a burn permit, the latest fire statistics and wildfire safety, visit the DNR Web site at www.michigan.gov/dnr.

You can also link to burning permit information from the DEQ "Open Burning Information" Web page.

Several named winners of Punt, Pass and Kick

Several Charlevoix youths captured honors at the Charlevoix Punt, Pass and Kick competition Sunday, Sept. 26, at Kipke Field.

The Punt, Pass and Kick football competition allows youngsters to showcase their talents in punting, passing and kicking with scores based on distance accuracy.

Girls

- 12-13, Meridith Rich.
- 14-15, Kysha Keehn.

Boys

- 8-9, Gunnar Lundteigen.
- 10-11, Tyler Keehn.
- 12-13, Logan Kline.
- 14-15, Danny Waldron.

These winners will now move on to a Sectional Competition to be on Saturday, Oct. 9, in Alpena.

They could qualify for the eighteenth annual Detroit Lions Team championship to be at Ford Field during the Detroit Lions vs. Arizona Cardinals game on Dec. 5.

Last year several Michigan youngsters moved on from there and took national honors during an AFC championship game. A number of former and current NFL players have competed in the Punt, Pass and Kick competitions, including record setting quarterbacks Dan Marino and Drew Bledsoe.

City to add new handicapped spaces

ance with the "Program Access" standard or the spirit of the law.

One example he gave is a senior citizens center that has a high usage rate of the spaces but only the minimum that are required.

He said this lot would be in violation of the ADA because it doesn't pass the "Program Access" standard since it doesn't have more spaces available due to the high percentage of use.

Halverson added in his report that the same standard of usage applies to lots constructed prior to 1992, which includes some of the lots in Charlevoix.

His report states, "If the standards from that era were followed and counts show that there is little use of the spaces, the situation would not pass the chart ratio, but may pass the 'Program Access' test. So usage counts can have an impact as to whether we are in compliance or not."

During the meeting, Halverson said it's more important to focus on the people and not the spaces.

"The spirit of the law is not to support the parking lot, but to support the people," he said during the meeting.

Halverson said the city is planning on adding one van-accessible space at the south end of the Erber west of Birdie's Beauty Shop on Mason Street.

The city is also going to add one handicapped space directly north of the current one in the Kusina Lot between Antrim and Mason streets.

Overall, Halverson found that the handicapped spaces currently available have an overall usage rate of 38 percent. He said this would show Charlevoix is upholding the "Program Access" standard or the spirit of the law.

Halverson said capacity of a parking lot is rated at 80 percent. So, if a parking lot was full 80 percent of the time, then that parking lot would be at capacity.

With regard to on-street parking, Halverson said Bridge Street is too dangerous and could result in civil issues should an accident occur. Currently, he said there are three on-street handicapped parking spaces available on Clinton Street, Pine River Lane and in front of the Beaver Island Boat Company.

During the meeting, Halverson was questioned by First Ward Council member Bill Haggard, who asked why State Street wasn't looked at for on-street parking.

Haggard said there should also be parking right in front of City Hall so people can easily access the building to take care of what they need to.

Haggard said the city should also look into using the part of Mason Street that goes down into the marina for an area where people can be dropped off and picked up.

Third Ward Council member Shirley Gibson said she'd like to see a van-accessible space on Clinton Street near East Park.

First Ward Council member Bob Timms said a woman had complained that there wasn't enough parking during festivities downtown.

Halverson said any handicapped person can park at a metered space for free.

What do you think about banning dogs in park?

mon sense in regard to their animals.

"Maybe I'm too idealistic," he said.

Stevenson said dogs shouldn't be allowed during arts and crafts shows due to the fragile nature of many objects for sale.

"That's an accident waiting to happen," he said.

Heffling disagrees. He said those shows have fragile objects, but children can't be banned and they can break something as easily as a dog can.

"I think they should worry about enforcing the current law and not making new ones," he said.

An informal, informational public hearing is set for 7 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 4 in council's chambers at Charlevoix City Hall in order for people to state their opinions concerning dogs in East Park.

Written comments can be sent to the City Clerk's Office at 210 State Street.

A celebration of Apples

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Leaves are changing color and the temperature is slowly cooling, which means fall is here.

To kick off the season, the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring the Twenty-fifth Annual Apple Festival and Craft Show from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 8 and Saturday, Oct. 9 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 10.

The event is held every year in order to honor local growers and local orchards, who will be selling their wares during the festival. There will be 20 booths featuring farm goods and various items from non-profit organizations.

At Apple Festival there will be over 30 varieties of apples for sale including antique varieties that aren't easily available otherwise.

Other items include pumpkins, squash, jam, honey, cider and various fall harvest fruits and vegetables.

Food isn't the only thing available during the Apple Festival, however, there will be 125 arts and crafts booths where artists will display their masterpieces.

Crazy Richard will be downtown all weekend showing off his skills at juggling and other stunts. Children can also be entertained by balloons twisted into animals and various other shapes.

Children can enjoy pony rides and a petting zoo. They can also paint pumpkins or get their face painted by students from Charlevoix Middle School. The middle school students are volunteering as a part of their fundraiser. The pumpkins and haystacks for sitting are donated by Marvin's Gardens Center, Trees and Shrubs of Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Children's House will be set up to allow children to bob for apples, get temporary tattoos and receive balloons. They will also have homemade cookies available.

Friske Orchards and Farm Market will be having a blown-up apple for children to play in.

For adults, the Charlevoix Area Hospital will be offering free blood pressure testing during the festival.

Adults can also have their children fingerprinted. Derek Chowen, the Charlevoix Edward Jones investment representative, and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department will offer free fingerprinting from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Oct. 9 in East Park.

The Charlevoix County Humane Society will be having a Fall Color Cruise on Lake Charlevoix during the Apple Festival. The cruise will be on the Beaver Islander and will take place from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Oct. 9. Boarding is set to begin at 2:30 p.m. at the Beaver Island Boat Company dock.

Tickets are $25 each and can be purchased at the Charlevoix County Humane Society, the Stack coming down

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

According to Consumer's Energy spokesperson Tim Petrosky, Big Rock Point in Charlevoix is quickly becoming less of a nuclear power plant and more of an industrial work site with radioactive elements.

Petrosky said this is due to the flurry of activity taking place at the plant, specifically now that the disassembling of the plant is becoming more noticeable to the outside public. For example, last week, drivers on US-31 and boaters on Lake Michigan noticed a large crane has appeared next to the stack at the plant that will be used to dismantle the tall structure.

"This is a significant event (taking down the stack) because of its visibility," Petrosky said. "Boaters are going to miss it and it was identified on the NOAA (boating) maps."

The stack, or tower near Big Rock's ball structure, will be taken down gradually in several pieces.

Petrosky said workers will be jackhammering around the stack at various sections. Once one section is cut, the crane will pick it up and

The stack, a familar sight to area boaters, will be coming down soon at Big Rock.

Wiesner gives apology for memo

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner apologized to Mayor Gabe Campbell Monday night over a memo he wrote accusing the mayor of violating city charter.

This apology came after City Attorney Jim Young gave Wiesner, city council and the mayor a written opinion of a memo Wiesner wrote to council and city staff accusing the mayor of violating city charter when he told the Charlevoix Courier city administration could "work a little harder" in a story. Young said this did not violate the charter and was Campbell's right to say as a political expression — which is protected under the First Amendment of the United States.

"Obviously, I apologize for that," Wiesner said. "I am certainly willing to inform city employees in writing that I misinterpreted the charter."

Campbell said, according to

News department receives awards

The Charlevoix Courier has once again received several awards from the Michigan Press Association's Better Newspaper contest for its division.

"The Courier staff is very happy with the awards we have received. This shows we are providing the a top notch community like Charlevoix with a top notch product," Editor Jeremy McBain said. "We will continue in our quest to improve our product for our readers."

The awards received by the Courier for its weekly newspaper division were:

- Third place — Enterprise reporting. A series investigating the impact of a proposed Wal-Mart in Charlevoix written by McBain. The judges said it had several sources for the stories which gave both the good and bad of having a Wal-Mart in the community. "Very objective piece on an emotional issue," the judge wrote.
- Second place — Editorial pages. The judges said the Courier had a good mix of editorial, letters and columnists on its editorial pages that were all tied to local issues.
- Honorable mention — News picture. This was for a picture of several area firefighters battling a large grass fire on the south side of the county in April 2003. The judge said they liked it because it was not "your standard fire photo." In the photo, the firefighters were using shovels to smack down flames in the grass.
- Honorable mention — Sports writing. This was for a story on the Charlevoix High School's varsity basketball team's journey to the state finals written by Allen Telgenhof. The judge said it was "straight forward and easy to follow."

Questions loom over exotic pet ban

EDITORIAL

While it seemed like it was a good idea to ban dangerous and exotic animals from public streets in Charlevoix, some people against the plan have made some good points at a recent city council public hearing on the matter.

The city would like to ban any animal because of its size, vicious propensity or other characteristic; would constitute a danger to human life, property or domestic animals if not restrained or kept in a cage; or an ape, a monkey of any species, alligators, crocodiles and all snakes.

But, some people say this ban is unfair, particularly when it comes to constrictor snakes, and a person can easily agree with them.

At the public hearing, people against the plan pointed out dogs and cats are responsible for more attacks on humans than any of the animals this ordinance would ban.

According to one man, the CDC says every 40 seconds someone in the United States is hospitalized due to a dog bite. Yet, people can currently take their dogs out in public, to the park and in the midst of other people.

Even the Charlevoix County Animal Control Officer, Judy Whitley, is against this ordinance.

As she rightly points out, where do we draw the line? Next month, if someone doesn't like pitbulls, are we going to consider banning them from public? Or, what if someone is scared of the fish in the fish pond in East Park? Will we ban them?

Why are we letting the fears of a few people dictate our ordinances? Yes, many people are afraid of snakes. But, many people are also afraid of dogs.

This ordinance also does not take into account what its impact will be on some animals that are beloved by Charlevoix residents and brought to East Park, such as Laura the Elephant. Laura is brought to East Park during the Charlevoix Venetian Festival's Kids Day for the past few years — with the exception of last year, when she was at Castle Farms.

While many area children get a lot of joy from seeing and riding on this large creature, this ordinance could keep her out of Charlevoix for good.

Perhaps we are barking up the wrong tree with this ban.

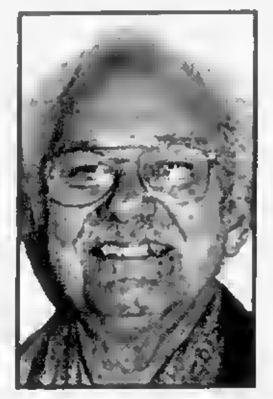
Writer salutes bacteria that surrounds us daily



Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Until a Dutch merchant named Van Leeuwenhoek produced the first useful microscope, the idea that there might be creatures way too small for us to see was unimaginable.

About 1675 Van Leeuwenhoek was the first human to see what he called "animals a thousand times smaller than the smallest grain of sand." We now call what he saw bacteria, and they continue to surprise us.

The first bacteria to become well known among scientists and microscopists were those that caused human or animal diseases and we are still likely to think of germs or bacteria as being associated with ill health or disease. Twentieth century study has shown us that bacteria are far more important than we thought, and probably dominate the living world.

The study of fossils suggest that bacteria of many kinds were almost certainly the first sorts of living creatures on earth and that there were no other living things for more than a billion years of earth's early history. Bacteria of many kinds are still the most abundant forms of life on earth. Our interest in things we can see and things that are like us generally blinds us to this genuine fact.

When biologists attempt to quantify importance and dominance among living things they make use of measure called biomass. Biomass is the calculated weight of any group of organisms. There are certainly a lot of humans on earth and we weigh a great deal compared to most other organisms, but our total biomass is dwarfed by that of the forest trees that cover much of the land surface of the earth. And while individual bacterial cells are almost unimaginably small, their numbers are so enormous that they dominate the world's biomass. That means that the total weight of bacteria on earth is greater than all other living things combined.

The numbers of bacteria living in the mouth of one human are greater than the total number of humans who have ever lived on earth. The biomass of bacteria contained in and on one human body constitutes about ten percent of the total weight of the human. They live on our skin and in our digestive tract in numbers that are beyond describing. Nearly all of these bacteria do us no harm at all and many of them are essential for the normal functioning of our digestion. A totally bacteria free human would be a very sick human indeed.

Bacteria live everywhere there is any liquid water, and they can survive for centuries without any water at all. They live in nearly boiling water and in the crevices of icy glaciers. They live in places with no oxygen and in places dominated by what to us would be poisonous gases and chemicals. They cover the surface of every leaf and twig. There are about a half million bacteria per square inch of skin on a healthy human. They are abundant in the water of Lake Michigan and every other body of water on earth. They live without oxygen in the gut of ruminant animals like cows and deer and elephants, where they emit most of the methane gas that is to be found on earth. Bacteria that use light and make oxygen have produced most of the oxygen that supports all animal life on earth.

Water is present in most of the earth's bedrock down to many miles in depth, and where there is water there will be bacteria. Live bacteria in large numbers have been recovered from deep oil wells and from boreholes more than four miles into the earth's interior.

How important is bacteria? They are more important than all the rest of the life on earth. The earth would continue to work well without us and even without most of its animals. It would not work at all without bacteria.

Three cheers for the bacteria, the most important form of life on earth.

Keep dogs out of park

Editor:

I come from a dog raising family — Retrievers, Cockers, Weimaraners and others. Since I grew up at Neff Bros. Grocery, then located in downtown Charlevoix for over 30 years next to East Park, I will share what I remember.

In the 50s the majority of all pedigreed dogs in Charlevoix were hunting dogs.

These were not dogs one would take to Venetian or band concerts in East Park.

The shuffleboard man opened up in East Park every day in the summer at 10 a.m. and stayed open for his many customers until 10 or 11 at night until Labor Day.

During July and August, we used to eat our lunch in the back room of Neff Bros. and head for East Park Shuffleboard Courts.

I don't recall dogs ever being around the shuffleboard courts during our lunch hour or in the evenings.

The boaters were the only people who had dogs on the harbor, small dogs.

First, the boaters had to walk their dogs away from the park, keep them on their boat. Boaters were not allowed to tie dog leashes to the docks.

Later a small dog run was added at the bottom of the hill next to Neff Bros. to accommodate boater's dogs.

In the old days of resort Charlevoix, out of courtesy and respect, Charlevoix people did not bring any dog downtown to East Park unless they planned to sit in their car along Bridge Street to listen to the band concert.

No dogs during Venetian. I think the dogs in East Park started with the advent of the Charlevoix Art Fair.

When my deceased friend, Mary Haggard Richardson was raising Newfoundland dogs in the 70s or so, the only place the Newfoundlands were welcome was Mt. McSauba.

It appears from all the flack in the newspaper about East Park that a hunting and/or house dog nowadays is treated in public at many other peoples' expense.

Due to liability and increasing crowds, other than for boaters under City Rules, in 2004, East Park should be animal free as the 1950s. Thank you.

Leave gates open

Editor:

I have been a city resident for 27 or 28 years. Each week I would cut my grass, and lay it in the street by the curb.

Every fall, I would rake my leaves and lay them by the curb, just like the city wanted me to do. The grass would sit for three or four weeks fermenting, and my leaves would all blow back on my grass.

I wanted to bag both grass and leaves, but the city would not pick up bagged grass or leaves.

I then suggested to a city employee that I could bag my grass and leaves and take it myself to the city refuse area and empty the bags; they said go right ahead.

I have been doing just that for the last 15 or so years, but not any more! I have lost my privilege of doing the city's job for them.

The gates are now kept locked. I bet if they all put their heads together, they might come up with an idea, like keeping the gates open two or three hours one day a week.

Dogs should not be in park

Editor:

From reading about the dogs downtown and in East Park, I believe the poor dogs cannot stand up for themselves, so I'll speak up for them.

Did one ever think about the dog paws being stepped on with all the people in attendance?

How about the crowd causing stress on the poor canine. Have you ever seen an owner offering their pet water when he is panting when it is so very hot? I guess not.

Dear masters — you would really be doing your dear pet a favor leaving him home in his tranquil surroundings.

Support STAR program

Editor:

I just received a letter from the Charlevoix Elementary School concerning the popular STAR reading mentor program which is being put "on hiatus" this year. There are over 20 people who have volunteered in this program and many of us are discouraged to hear we won't be able to participate.

We've worked on a one to one basis with second and third graders. Last year a few worked with first graders.

I wonder if we might still become involved in an informal program.

Such important skills as reading and spelling should not be neglected, and I think the community should be informed that there is no longer a STAR program at the school.

City manager actions shocking

Editor:

Courtney Pace's article in the Sept. 15 issue concerning the prospects of a city sewer line to Ironton caught my eye and gave me concern.

Apparently the owners of Castle Farms asked an innocent question concerning whether one day such a sewer might be built.

This simple question prompted the city manager to cause a study to be made using sewer funds and further to observe to your reporter that the sewer line might be built based upon the Master Plan without asking the people to be served whether they wanted it.

What is there in that question which would prompt such a bizarre response? The answer seems to be several-fold.

In 1994 the townships were asked whether they wanted a sewer line and Eveline Township said no. However, the Master Plan calls for increased residential density in the future, as every plan anywhere does.

Further, Weisner admits having talked to a developer who is trying to impose an unwanted and unnecessary mobile home park upon Eveline Township.

A sewer line would be a gift to developers of enormous benefit.

Frankly, I find the comments of the city manager shocking. Why would the city of Charlevoix or the city manager seek to expand its sewer into Eveline Township? Surely it would only be in response to a request by the people of the township.

I can tell him that, based upon recent election returns in Eveline, if such a proposal were made it would be rejected overwhelmingly and, if Mr. Weisner were an elected official, he would be turned out of office.

The lessons we learned are that Charlevoix has a system under which the city manager can, or thinks he can, act contrary to the wishes of the elected officials of the city and the electorate being served. Any number of recent editions of your paper demonstrate this very point.

Further, we should be careful about those Master Plans. Because they have been prepared by "experts" doesn't make them right. To whom are these experts and city managers responsible? Surely not just developers.

Cemex donates rock

CEMEX of Charlevoix recently donated 5,000 tons of limestone to be used in the process of paving the access to the primary taxiway and ramp area as a part of the rehabilitation of the northeast hangar area at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport. The limestone has a $5,000 value, which is being donated by CEMEX to the airport through MDC Contracting LLC commonly known as Manthei. On Sept. 23 those involved in the project came out to watch as the trucks delivered the limestone. Northern Michigan Hospital:
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH!

NMH Trustees claim that they have conducted "BUSINESS AS USUAL" since the RN strike began on November 14, 2002. Consider these facts and decide for yourself if this is "BUSINESS AS USUAL:"

- Since the strike began, NMH has hired 189 RNs and 99 RNs have voluntarily terminated.
- Of the 90 RNs who have been retained, at least 55 have less than 3 years of nursing experience.
- In 2004, NMH was found to be NOT in compliance with the following Medicare Conditions of Participation For Hospitals by the Department of Health and Human Services:
  Patient Rights 42 CFR 482.13
  Physical Environment 42 CFR 482.41
  Infection Control 42 CFR 482.42
- NMH has suffered over $11 million in Operating Loss in 2003 compared to a gain in 2002. NMH predicts an operating loss for 2004.
- The number of patient discharges, the number of outpatient visits, total inpatient days and occupancy rates have all fallen in 2003 from 2002 levels.
- The CEO Tom Mroczkowski was given more than a $100,000 raise in 2003.

Would you trust your medical care to NMH? Can NMH Trustees really believe that it is conducting "BUSINESS AS USUAL?" Hundreds of RNs have been on strike with over 2,400 years of nursing experience and yet the Trustees refuse to bargain a fair contract. If you believe that "BUSINESS AS USUAL" will only return when the striking RNs are back at work, please contact NMH at (231) 487-4000 and let them know.

Charlevoix City Council debating exotic animal ban

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

> "I have no problem with people owning snakes and having them on their own property."
> Sherm Chamberlain, Charlevoix city council member

The Charlevoix City Council decided to table a proposed ordinance that would prohibit "dangerous animals" from any public place in the city Monday night.

Council decided to table the matter because they wanted to make additions to the proposed ordinance following a public hearing that night.

But, during the public hearing, several people from the community spoke out against the proposed ordinance, saying it is unfair.

According to the original wording of the ordinance, it would have prohibited "any animal because of its size, vicious propensity or other characteristic, would constitute a danger to human life, property or domestic animals if not restrained or kept in a cage or an ape, a monkey of any species which exceeds 20 pounds, alligators, crocodiles, a snake which has a poisonous bite or a snake which is a constrictor."

Charlevoix City Attorney Jim Young said this ordinance would not keep a petting zoo out of East Park, but it might effect visits by Laura the Elephant during the Charlevoix Venctian Festival.

"It's an issue we need to address," he said about the elephant.

Nita Martin, a Charlevoix resident whose son owns two constrictor snakes, said her son's snakes are much less dangerous than many of the animals that are allowed in public in the city. She asked to compare how many complaints have been filed on people bringing pet snakes out in public verses barking dogs and feral cats.

Pat Gretsch, of Charlevoix, said he has handled snakes for many years and has never had a problem with them. He pointed out, according to the CDC, there were 277 deaths last year as a results of dog bites and no deaths by constrictor snakes last year in the United States.

"Every 40 seconds someone is hospitalized by a dog bite," he said.

Even Charlevoix County Animal Control Officer Judy Whitley chimed in, saying the ordinance is wrong.

She said she can understand wanting to prohibit poisonous snakes, alligators, but said boa constrictors do not go after humans.

She added the ordinance also does not address pet birds. Whitley said she has seen people walking around in East Park with a parrot on their shoulder.

"Have you seen what a parrot can do when a child reached up to it," she said. "Where do we draw the line on fear? Next month, someone may want pitbulls banned."

Jill Picha, Charlevoix resident, spoke in favor of the ordinance.

"I don't understand what the problem is here. I wouldn't want to run into a snake downtown. They are not domesticated like a dog or cat," she said.

And council seemed to feel the same way as Picha.

Council member Shirley Gibson said, "I am an animal lover....I think there should be a law against even the possession of exotic animals. I think they belong in the wild."

Council member Sherm Chamberlain also said he has a concern about people carrying snakes, especially in East Park.

"I have no problem with people owning snakes and having them on their own property," he said.

Council member Bill Haggard agreed, but he questioned the enforcement of such an ordinance, particularly the banning of apes over 20 pounds.

"Would we have a police officer weighing monkeys?" he said.

In the end, council decided to change the ordinance to remove the weight on monkeys, ban all snakes, include exotic birds in the ban and prohibit these animals in only the Central Business District and city parks.

The newly revisited ordinance will be brought back up at a another city council meeting for a final vote.

Charlevoix students catch the political bug

Four Charlevoix High School seniors (left to right) Melissa Grosberg, 18, Josh Stevenson, 17, Alex Heffling, 18 and Anna Taylor, 17, have been donating their time to the Michigan Democratic Coordinated Campaign in an effort to become more involved.

Four Charlevoix High School seniors are taking part in the upcoming presidential election on Nov. 2 by volunteering their time to the Michigan Democratic Coordinated Campaign.

Melissa Grosberg, 18, Alex Heffling, 18, Josh Stevenson, 17 and Anna Taylor, 17, decided it was time to get involved and show their interest, even if some of them can't vote yet.

They became interested in the Michigan Democratic Coordinated Campaign when a representative came to the high school on Sept. 14 and spoke during their seminar class.

Stevenson said he wasn't present at the time because he was attending another meeting. However, he talked to his government teacher and called the representative himself to ask how he could get involved.

Since the four friends were the only ones from the high school that showed up and continued to volunteer, the representative put them in charge of the Charlevoix and East Jordan districts.

Staffing the phone bank every Tuesday and Friday evening is one aspect to their volunteer work. On Saturday, Oct. 2 the four engaged in some door-to-door work.

Grosberg said when they call, they let people know how important the issues are to them personally and not just to inform.

Heffling said right now the country is in a delicate state because, if Bush is re-elected, he will appoint members of the Republican Party to various positions opening up in Congress.

Grosberg agreed with Heffling and said if everything is dominantly Republican, then the checks and balance system is thrown off.

"If all are in the same political party, nothing is going to check and balance because they'll agree mutually," she said.

Taylor agreed.

"If the entire government is Republican, we're going to lose the conflict that keeps the government running," she said.

On any given day thereare no more than seven people who show up to staff the phones. While there are young people and older people, Stevenson said the middle age group doesn't seem to come at all. Grosberg said there is a lack of interest in politics from people her age. The problem to Grosberg is not that there aren't enough opportunities for young people to be involved in politics, but that they aren't promoted enough.

She said more students would be interested if they learned of opportunities before taking government class their senior year.

"I found out through the school, but I don't think anyone would roll with it unless we didn't feel strongly about the issues we're representing," she said, getting nods or approval from the others.

Grosberg said she has given a career in politics some thought, but thinks volunteer work is easier and will continue to be a part of that political realm.

Heffling said he doesn't necessarily have an interest in politics, but just thinks the issues at hand are important.

"We need someone that can repair our foreign policy," he said.

To Heffling, everyone should go out and experience what politics is all about. He said people need vote and not just let the opportunity pass them by.

Heffling said he won't be pursuing a future career in politics, but will continue to volunteer his time and effort to causes he believes in and finds important.

Stevenson, who contacted the representative himself, wanted to be involved and thinks other young people should do the same.

"I think everyone of every age should be involved," he said noting a lack of middle aged people volunteering their time.

As far as continuing his involvement in politics, Stevenson said he will volunteer as much as he can. He isn't closed to having a career in politics and may go that route should the opportunity present itself.

No matter what the future holds, Stevenson said he wants to stay focused on connecting to people because they need to vote.

"There's a problem with getting people to the polls at all," he said.

Taylor said she thinks more young people would be involved in politics if they knew about opportunities open to them. She said a lot of young people think you can't do anything about politics in Charlevoix.

After this, Taylor said she will probably continue her political volunteer work in the future.

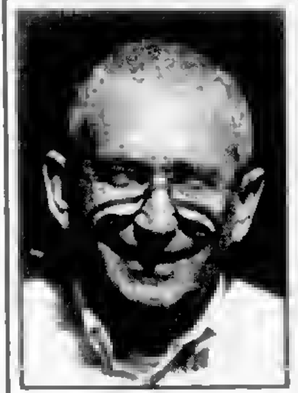
Mayoral candidates discuss park, marina plans

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

There are plans in the works to upgrade the Charlevoix marina and to expand East Park and mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson are discussing the issue and it's possible impact on Charlevoix.



Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

Incumbent Gabe Campbell said the marina and East Park upgrades are separate issues, with no funding available for the park.

However, he said he wants the grant for the marina project, but is concerned the people may find the docks project out farther into Round Lake than they originally thought.

He said the people of Charlevoix have been promised since last December that buoys would be placed in the harbor to designate exactly what the plan is.

"I'd like to see the marina fixed," he said. "I'm happy, but I want everyone to be happy."

Campbell said buoying the project is necessary.

Campbell said he wants to be fair to the people and hopes they will come forward now, before any construction begins, to voice their concerns over the project.

Some people have suggested fixing up the marina but leaving it as is instead of undergoing a major overhaul. They are saying it would be cheaper to redo the entire thing, while others think fixing what is there is the cheaper route.

"I think the first step is to buoy the lake then talk about it again," he said.

He said if all is fine then the plan can go forward, if not, things can be talked about and other considerations made.

"Round Lake is a resource and we want to protect it as much as we can," he said.

He said if people are upset, then changes are in order.

"I'm more interested in what the majority of town people want instead of something which they don't want," he said.

In regard to East Park, Campbell said the bandshell doesn't need to be moved. He said the bandshell is only used for six to eight weeks and it doesn't make sense to rebuild something that was built 12 years ago.

"Do we really need to get into a project of that scope," he said.

With the current location and style, Campbell thinks the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce and Dan Barron, president of the Venetian Board, and others do a good job at bringing in quality bands to the park.

One reason there is a pull to build a new bandshell is to increase acoustics, but Campbell said he hasn't heard anyone complain about not being able to hear and enjoy the music.

Campbell said there is still some discussion to be had, but he's heard that residents on Belvedere Avenue are upset about the noise pollution they will receive if the bandshell is moved.

"A majority of people I've talked to don't want it to be torn down," he said.

Candidate Carlson said he was on council when they voted on the plans for the marina and East Park and he still thinks the community will benefit from the upgraded facilities.

"We have the most beautiful, natural harbor on the Great Lakes, but have the poorest facilities," he said.

Carlson said the concept of a new marina is important to Charlevoix since the city's number one industry is tourism. He said a great number of tourists during the summer arrive on boats.

"Boaters bring in a lot of money to the community," he said.

Carlson said boaters utilize the downtown area for all their needs because they don't have cars to go to places further out.

However, Carlson doesn't want everything to be done only for boaters.

Carlson said the plan will accommodate those who don't have boats, but want to enjoy downtown.

He said with wider docks people will be able to walk down the docks in a safer manner and have a better view corridor of Round Lake.

Also, by extending the length of the docks, people will be able to enjoy the lake more.

"More people enjoy what goes on downtown," he said concerning various festivals given throughout the year that could benefit from the marina and park projects.

Many people want buoys to be placed in the water in order to see exactly how far out the docks go. Carlson said the doesn't see a problem with putting out buoys and thinks it should be done before the plan is finalized.

Carlson said people shouldn't worry too much about the length of the docks since that can be changed.

He said things can be tweaked as needed in order to have a new marina, but keep people happy.

In regard to East Park, Carlson said the park and marina will become more accessible to senior citizens and handicapped individuals.

He said the current bandshell is pretty, but its acoustics and functionality were apparently not given consideration when it was built.

"A new bandshell would be nice," he said.

Overall, Carlson said building a new marina and upgrading the park will cost the same or less than trying to put a Band-Aid on the current design.

However, Carlson said if anyone has information that proves otherwise he'd be open to consider it.

Carlson said the Charlevoix Waterways Commission usually funds 50 percent of projects, but is funding 75 percent of the marina project.

The other 25 percent or $3.8 million is to come from the Downtown Development Authority fund.

"I feel, right now, that it's a good project," he said.

Charlevoix skate park opens new half-pipe

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Those who dare to defy gravity with their rollerblades, BMX Bikes or skateboards can test their skills on the new half-pipe at the Charlevoix Community Skatepark temporary location on Grant Street near the old middle school.

The structure was installed on Sept. 29.

The half-pipe was built by Scott Stebe of DS Stebe Construction, who donated all the labor required to construct the object. The surface of the half-pipe is made out of a weather-resistant material called Skatelite Pro.

Laura Stebe, treasurer for Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc. said a half-pipe of this quality usually goes for $28,000, but it was able to built for under $7,000 through donations and volunteer efforts.

Funds for the half-pipe were generated through the Great Lakes Energy Grant received and through donations from Burt and Suzy Farbman and John and Patsy Ramsey.

Stebe said the half-pipe was also possible through the hard work of Vickie Daman, president of Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc. and others who volunteered their time.

Stebe said the skate park will be receiving a skater's picnic table, which is lined with a surface conducive to performing tricks. Stebe said the table is being donated by the Charlevoix Lions Club and has a value of $1,700.

In exchange for the table, the youth who utilize the skate park are to paint the Christmas tree shed for the Charlevoix Lions Club. Stebe said this will show their support for the community.

Cameron Attee, 16, will be in charge of organizing those involved in the painting project.

The skate park will not only be getting a new structure for their facility, they will also be showing the community what they're all about during the Twenty-fifth Annual Apple Festival and Craft Show.

From Oct. 8 to Oct. 10, the Charlevoix Community Skatepark will be occupying a booth from which they will sell various items, including Bridge Walk T-shirts for $10.

Cynthia Parker, a board member of the Charlevoix Community Skatepark and fundraiser coordinator, said the booth was donated personally by Jacqueline Merta, president of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, and is not a chamber donation.

The homemade baked goods for sale are made by those involved with the skate park and all proceeds will go toward the park.

Parker said food donations from the Argonne Supper Club, Big Apple Bagels in Petoskey and Oleson's Farm Fresh Markets will also be available.

Parker said Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc. will be putting on a 50/50 Raffle starting at Apple Fest and ending on Oct. 24. The winner of the raffle will receive 50 percent of the money raised by the raffle and other winners will be awarded with sweatshirts and various other items from Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc.

A silent auction will also start during the Apple Festival for an art piece done by Charlevoix artist and master sculptor William Doehring. The piece is a buffalo head that is painted uniquely, Parker said. All remaining proceeds will go toward the skate park.

The winners for the raffle and the silent auction will be announced on Oct. 24 during the skate park's end of year party.

On Sept. 29, the Charlevoix Community Skatepark installed its latest piece, a half-pipe. The structure allows for numerous stunts by in-line skaters, BMX bike riders and skateboarders.

Council candidates discuss park, marina

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With the Nov. 2 elections right around the corner, Charleviox City Council candidates are into issues facing the city such as the proposed marina plan and renovations to East Park.

First Ward Incumbent Bill Haggard said he thinks the most recent plan presented for the marina is looking good.

Major changes are a necessity in order to secure funding.

"A Band-Aid wouldn't get any funding," he said.

Michigan Waterways Commission is funding 75 percent or $6.8 million of the project, leaving the community to come up with 25 percent or $3.8 million.

He said a lot of people approved the plan the first time around, but are now discussing how far out the docks will go.

Haggard said this isn't something to worry about because the plan isn't set in stone and can be changed.

Haggard said buoys should be placed in Round Lake to allow the citizens of Charlevoix to see exactly how far out the docks are intended to go, which may be put in this fall.

"Charlevoix is one of the two busiest marinas there is," he said. "It's a win-win situation."

In regards to East Park, Haggard said the new plan aims to make the park more accessible for handicapped individuals and senior citizens.

Some people are concerned about the bandshell being moved and Haggard said he originally was in favor of leaving it where it is. Now, after looking over some plans, he said the proposed location is good because the area is not so steep and could be more usable to more people.

Candidate Rebecca Doan said she doesn't think any of the changes are necessary.

She questions the need to allocate $1 million just for something seasonal.

She said the city needs to upgrade what they already have and not expand on it.

"Rather, I'd like to see that money being allocated for new businesses with good-paying jobs to help the taxpayers," she said.

Doan said city council has asked the city to buoy the proposed layout and she agrees that it's necessary.

"Taxpayers can see how large of a project this will be in our tiny Round Lake," she said.

Doan said she hasn't seen the current plans for renovations to East Park, but doesn't think anything should be done, especially when taxpayer's money is involved.

"The taxpayers should always have a say to where their money is going," she said. "I believe anything that is a community owned property should be on the ballot if taxpayers money is to be used."

She said moving the bandshell is unnecessary because it isn't that old and would just be an example of careless spending by the city.

"Nothing should be done to the park," she said.

Doan said she likes the idea of a handicapped drop-off and said it wouldn't be out of the question to put in a sidewalk that would allow more access to the park.

Doan said if she is elected in November, she will strive to keep spending to a minimum.

Second Ward Incumbent Karen I. Campbell said the plan for the marina is nice, but costly.

"It's an elegant plan, but we can't afford it," she said.

She said buoys need to be placed in the water so people can see the proposed length of the docks. Campbell said people are going to have a fit when they see how far out it's going to go.

"Fix what needs to be fixed," she said.

Floating docks are something that could be done only if it's cheaper than rebuilding the current style of docks, Campbell said.

Campbell said the current bandshell was built by donations and many people in her ward are upset about the possibility of the bandshell being torn down and moved.

"Leave it where it is, leave the fish pond where it is," she said. "It'll cost more to tear down and rebuild."

Campbell said Charlevoix isn't Sydney, Australia, San Francisco or Los Angeles, so the bandshell is fine the way it is and meets the needs of the community.

"At the time they built it, it was the cat's meow," she said.

Campbell said if the economy

What do city council hopefuls think of East Park, marina plans?

COUNCIL

ELECTION 2004

was better and the city had more money then the plan could be done. However, with the current situation all should be left alone except for fixing needed items such as the bulkhead.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell said East Park needs upgrading and so does the marina. However, he said the current plan could be downsized.

Fixing the breakerwall, Russell said, would probably cost the taxpayers the same amount of money they will have to put up to finance the current plan.

He said he'd like to see things done with as little amount of local taxpayer's dollars as possible.

"I'd rather see them use grant money," he said.

Russell said he doesn't see a problem with buoying the lake in order to let people see where things are proposed to be.

The park should be more handicapped friendly, Russell said, because he has been down in the park during Venetian and has seen people fall.

If money is available, he said he'd like to see the project finished all at once.

"I think the position on council and the mayor should be to spend less taxpayers money, but get the job done and get it done right," he said.

Third Ward Incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said plans for East Park and the marina are meeting a long-standing community goal.

"I think the improvements in East Park and the marina will be great for the community," he said.

He said this is the last public works project listed on the 1982 Master Plan, which will allow the park to become more accessible for handicapped individuals and senior citizens.

He said relocating the bandshell will allow for more foot traffic downtown and a better sound system.

"It is the heart and soul of the community," he said in regards to East Park.

He said the proposed dock layout for the marina will open up more viewing of the lake and could become the center for community actives because it extends farther out into the lake.

He said fishermen could fish in deeper waters and utilize stores in the downtown area.

Aside from allowing more commerce in the downtown area, Chamberlain supports the plan because it provides safer docks.

People are concerned about the length of the docks and Chamberlain said it wouldn't hurt to use buoys to show the proposed length.

Chamberlain said it would cost more to put a Band-Aid on the problems than it would to fix things all at once.

"Do it right then you don't have to do it for the next 50 to 60 years," he said.

Chamberlain said this project is the reason he is running for re-election and if elected he will be serving his final term.

Candidate Dave Scott was unavailable for comment by press time.

Pool asking for millage in November election

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Without the usual funding it received and government support, the Charlevoix Area Community Pool is going to the voters on Nov. 2.

The pool is asking for a .33 mill for 10 years for operational and maintenance purposes. This milleage proposal would cost an estimated $2 per month for an average home of $125,000.

This would help raise $160,656 for the Recreational Authority, which is composed of members from the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix and Hayes townships.

The $160,656 will be divided up with $50,000 going to support dollar nights, which occurs from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday; $35,000 for the contingency fund; and $75,000 for maintenance and operational costs.

In the past, a milleage proposal was voted down and the pool said they wouldn't come to the voters for money. Things have changed, however, since the pool is no longer going to receive the funding it once had, said Bruce MacArthur, a pool board member.

MacArthur said the pool usually received a $25,000 challenge grant from the Frey Foundation, which left the pool to raise $25,000 from government entities such as schools, townships and cities.

The Frey Foundation grant was supposed to last two years, but MacArthur said it was already extended once and won't be this year.

He said those involved with the pool were told that since they're operational they should receive govenment support.

MacArthur said the pool went to the city first, but the city refused to match the Frey Foundation grant. He said the city told the pool members that the issue should be brought to the people.

During the Sept. 20 City Council meeting, Tim Boyko, president of the Charlevoix Area Community Pool and member of the Recreational Authority, presented a slide show for council.

His presentation stated that many of the lifeguards, including Michelle Rowe and Keil Tilley, who were involved in a lifesaving rescue this summer, were trained at the community pool.

The pool also offers aquatic therapy and other services such as swim lessons. Boyko said in his presentation that the Charlevoix, Saint Mary's, Char-Em ISD, Beaver Island, Petoskey and Ellsworth school districts have contracted with the pool to provide swimming lessons.

Charlevoix native honored for saving lives

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Former Charlevoix resident and Jerome, Ariz. Police Chief Allen Muma, 42, is a highly decorated, globe-trotting officer who recently received the Medal of Valor from the state of Arizona for his heroic efforts during an accident on Mingus Mountain.

Former Jerome Mayor Jay Kinsella awarded Muma with the Medal of Valor during a Jerome Town Council meeting in June. Muma also received a letter of commendation from Arizona State Senator Ken Bennett.

"I continue to do this job as a law enforcement officer because I help the people," he said.

On the day of the accident, a northbound vehicle was driven off the road by an oncoming car. The vehicle rolled down the side of a mountain where it came to rest in some brush. However, the car was not stable.

In the Verde Independent, Muma said the situation was tender because the vehicle could have continued on down the mountain with him hanging halfway out of it. Despite this knowledge, Muma continued giving first aid to the driver until firefighters came to the scene.

Muma grew up in Charlevoix and is the son of Earl and Alice Muma of Charlevoix. He has spent 20 years in law enforcement and the last five years as the police chief of the Jerome Police Department.

"His dad and I are very proud of him," Alice Muma said.

Throughout his childhood, Muma always wanted to be outdoors and help people, Alice Muma said.

He also worked for the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department as a young man, which is where he received his first Medal of Valor from the state of Michigan, a letter of commendation and a campaign ribbon in 1986.

Sheriff George T. Lasater presented Muma with the medal, which is the first Medal of Valor ever awarded by the sheriff's department. He also nominated Muma for a similar award from the National Sheriff's Association.

"I know he tried very hard," Lasater said. "His dad was a good mentor for him."

Earl Muma was a bailiff and the Emergency Services Director for the sheriff's department for almost 14 years, Muma said. He also served in the Air Force for 38 years, 15 of which he spent in active duty.

Muma himself went on to serve in the Air Force Reserves from 1982 to 1988.

Muma was a sheriff's marine officer and a deputy on Beaver Island when he assisted in a daring rescue that saved four men from drowning when he was only 24 years old.

An article by Fran Martin in the Charlevoix Courier states that the men had set out for Beaver Island when a storm blew in causing them to head back to Charlevoix.

"He was very enthusiastic about his profession and tried very hard to do the right things," Lasater said.

Lasater knew Charlevoix would hear from Muma in the future.

"I suspected we'd hear from him again for doing some outstanding things," he said.

Muma has received numerous awards throughout his career. He served as the Police Chief in Manton from 1989 to 1998.

During that time he received the Distinguished Service Medal in 1995 from former Governor John Engler and the Michigan Associate of Chiefs of Police for a serial rape case that had occurred over two years.

Muma said his department alone caught the rapist without any aid from the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

For about a year he left law enforcement and worked for Reith-

MUMA

Riley as their project manager. He said they were a good company and the job was good and paid well, but he missed law enforcement.

"Life is not a pursuit of money, it is a pursuit of happiness or at least it should be," he said.

Happiness for Muma is helping other people. So, in 1999 he took the position of Police Chief in Jerome.

During his time in Jerome, he worked for the United Nations and served as a UN Police Advisor in East Timor, located between Indonesia and Australia in the Timor Sea, where he helped train the local police officers and investigators.

He was in the Bobonaro District of East Timor, which had the highest threat level. While there, he appeared on CNN and helped with debriefing and uncovering bodies after the massacre at Atambua.

"You appreciate life in America a lot more," he said concerning being in hostile situations in other countries.

In 2002, Muma was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for apprehending an armed and dangerous felon who was fleeing the scene after shooting and killing someone, which Muma said resulted in a two and a half hour standoff.

Muma's globe-trotting efforts are far from over as he is currently contemplating whether or not he will go to Iraq to help with the situation.

For Muma, law enforcement is about protecting the people he serves.

He said a great number of people in the world are sheep who do good and don't hurt others, while about two percent of people are wolves and do bad and hurt others.

But, he said, there is even a smaller percentage who are sheepdogs that watch and protect the sheep from harm.

Muma is passionate about helping those he serves and sticks to his ethical standards, which he has never violated.

He said he wants new officers to know that they are here to serve the people in the community they live in and not just flash a badge.

"It's a privilege and an honor to serve the community," he said. "We should be held to a higher standard."

Workers continue to dismantle Big Rock plant

BIG ROCK

place it on the ground for further demolition and remediation.

Remediation is the process of taking the radioactivity out of an object. In the case of the stack, it has picked up some low level radioactive waste when the plant was in operation. However, workers will clean it up, making it free from radiation, and the stack pieces will then be shipped to a landfill in Waters.

In all, the stack will create 616,000 pounds of rubble for the landfill.

As of Monday, Petrosky said the actual process of taking down the stack has not started due to weather. Work crews can not be up in the work basket in high winds.

However, Big Rock is hoping to have the stack completely dismantled by the end of November.

But, this is just one of many projects the company undertakes at the site in its efforts to turn Big Rock into open space once again.

In addition to the stack, Big Rock has also removed the discharge channel familiar with boaters and fishermen on Lake Michigan. This channel used to pump warm water from the plant into Lake Michigan.

Because it was warm, it attracted many fish, which in turn attracted many sportsmen.

That channel has since been cleaned and filled. The "screen house" next to the channel, which regulated the water, has also been demolished. The rip cap, a line of rocks that jut out into the water alongside the discharge channel, remains to help control erosion of the beach.

Several other buildings visible to outsiders have also been demolished, Petrosky said, including the administration building. Next on the block are the service building and the turbine building, which are scheduled to come down this year.

The large circular dome at the plant is to come down next year.

NOTICE

If it's not in the newspaper, how will the public notice?

Zoning changes. Tax increases. Legislative proposals. These are just a few topics where government actions can affect your life and community. Imagine if government no longer had the legal obligation to publish this information in your newspaper. How would public notices get noticed? In our democratic society your newspaper fulfills an essential role in serving your right to know. It should not be your responsibility to know how to look, where to look, when to look or even to know what you're looking for to be informed. It is government's responsibility to publish and deliver public notice information as it becomes available. So take notice. Your right to know is being served... right here in your newspaper.

Islanders crush soccer competition

By FRANK SOLLE
Special to the Courier

The Beaver Islander soccer team blasted past the Munising Baptist Bobcats last weekend, winning 11-1 on Friday and 12-2 Saturday, in a pair of games shortened due to the 10-goal mercy rule.

Sophomore Saygan Croswhite led the Islanders with seven goals and three assists. Three of his goals came without any help as the talented ballhandler threaded his way past the Bobcat defenders time after time.

In a show of tremendous teamwork and unselfish play, the team combined for 18 assists on the 23 goals, as they controlled the tempo of play both days. Wojan finished with four assists while Croswhite and Bousquet each had three. Martin and Runberg contributed a pair of helpers, while Cary, Maudrie, John Albin, and Jimmy Gillespie each played a role in a goal apiece.

The games wrap up the Islanders home schedule. They were 6-0 on their turf, outscoring their three opponents 46-4.

As they head into their season finale at Mackinac Island on Oct. 15 and 16, the Islanders are 8-0 overall and in Northern Lights League action.

Golf team takes third in Lake Michigan

By JEREMY MCBAIN

The Charlevoix High School varsity golf team finished in third in the Lake Michigan Conference at the championship match Sept. 29 at Antrim Dells.

Grayling won the day, making them the conference champion two years in a row. But the Rayders shot a 344 to earn a third place finish behind Traverse City St. Francis and Grayling. Plus, Chris Wyniawskyj and Kyle DeYoung were named to the second team, all conference, due to their scores in the match.

This finish allows the Rayders to move on to the regional tournament, Oct. 7, in Tawas City.

Individual scores for the championship were: Wyniawskyj with 84, Kris Bartling with 88, DeYoung with 80, Chris Golski with

Charlevoix football team continues winning

By B. JON GOHS
Football writer

Neither rain nor wind nor Blue Blazers would stop the Rayders from their appointed rounds as they went on to a 21-6 victory over Kalkaska Friday night.

The northern Michigan weather seemed to be back to it's old self Friday at Kipke field. And according to Coach Jess, it had some effect on the Rayders passing game..

"The rain hurt a us a little bit," Coach Jess said. "We didn't pass as much as we'd liked to, but the running game kicked in."

Crummy weather or no, the Rayders had the Blue Blazers' number.

"They ran the ball a lot and we knew they would," he said. "Kalkaska's passing game wasn't bad, but it only occurred in passing situations so we kind of expected it."

Some anticipated this game to be a battle for every yard. And the first half did not disappoint as Charlevoix scored their first TD in the second quarter closely followed by a Kalkaska TD making it 7-6 for the Rayders.

The game remained an even match until late in the second half when The Rayders intensified for their second TD of the game.

Kalkaska knew time was getting tight. They revved up to return the favor but the Rayders intercepted the pass. QB Cody Crain used the opportunity to blast Mitchell Klooster with a 45 yard TD pass for the Rayders third TD. A TD which gave Jeff Golovich the chance to nail his third extra point of the game.

Crain was back in his zone this week with his usual 59 percent of passes completed as he was 13 for 22 over 130 yards with one TD and an interception.

Ezra Baker lead defense with 12 tackles while Jeff Golovich and his enchanted foot followed with 11 tackles.

Receivers Mitchell Klooster and Ben Bergman had five catches for 89 yards with one TD, and seven catches for 41 yards respectively.

Russell Williams lead rushing as he had 16 carries for 85 yards for one TD and Ray Jones followed with nine carries for 27 yards with one TD.

And although there were no penalties levied against the Rayders this week, according to Coach Jess, they gave up a little too much yardage on their run plays.

But, all in all, he said, "We held them to six points which was good considering how much they (Kalkaska) had the ball."

With four conference wins in a row, the Rayders look next to the Rams of Harbor Springs. And despite their record of 0-6, Coach Jess said, "Harbor beat us last year. They are a tough team and we're going to have to play hard."

And Jess said, next week is Harbor Springs' homecoming so they will play even harder.

While visions of sheep may be dancing in the Rayders' heads, this week's emphasis will be on pass blocking, which according to Jess was sufficient, but could have been better.

He added, "We just weren't picking up on the blitzes."

Harbor Springs uses the same type of offense as Kalkaska which could give the Rayders a good idea of how to prepare for next week's game.

"They do a decent job of passing the ball so we have to stop the run especially and shut down their passing game when the time comes," Jess said.

According to Coach Jess, the Rayders are going to stick with their game plan as they try for 5-2 next week.

The Rayders have three conference games left beginning with the Rams of Harbor Springs at 7:00 p.m., Friday Oct. 8 at Harbor Springs.

Rayder girls' basketball team remains unbeaten

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

They keep making it look easy.

The unbeaten Charlevoix Rayders cruised to two more blowout wins last week, 69-40 over Traverse City St. Francis at home and 70-47 at Kalkaska.

A supposedly tough game against previously unbeaten St. Francis never materialized as Charlevoix sprinted out to a 10-0 lead to start the game and never looked back. With the win the Rayders took sole possession of first place in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"I thought the first half was the best half of basketball we've played all year," coach Keith Haske said. "I liked the way our kids responded. We knew it was a big game going in. It was probably the biggest crowd we've had all year and the kids just thrived on that."

He added, "If they are going to be in big games and thrive, that's a good thing."

The Rayders led 29-10 after the first quarter, 53-17 at the half and 67-29 after three quarters.

Grace Farrell led the charge with 14 points, eight rebounds and four steals. Shannon Dibble scored 12 points and Jaime Pettis had 11 in a balanced Charlevoix scoring effort.

Laura Nitchman scored 10 points, handed out four assists and swiped three steals. Madison Ramsey had four assists, four steals and two blocks.

"The team played a great game and our pressure took them out of what they wanted to do," Haske said. "The kids that came in off the bench didn't miss a beat."

At Kalkaska, the Rayders fought off a slow start, leading only 14-8 after one quarter but scored 31 points in the second stanza to lead 45-30 at the half.

Farrell had a double-double, scoring 23 points and grabbing 15 rebounds. Betsy Dennis had 13 points and Dibble had 11. Nitchman had six points and six steals.

"I was pleased with how we executed against their packed in zone," Haske said. "And Shannon Dibble came off the bench and gave us a lift in the second quarter."

Charlevoix (11-0 overall, 6-0 conference) was again ranked no. 3 in Class C by the Associated Press earlier this week.

Asked if he was concerned about the lack of a close game for the team, Haske said, "I worry but then you look at the other teams that are supposedly the best in the state and they are beating everyone by 40. You worry about it and you wish there was (a challenge) because you're never sure how they'll react at the end of a close game."

The Rayders hosted Boyne City on Tuesday, Oct. 5, but results were unavailable at press time.

Charlevoix soccer team improving on the field

Monday saw the Rayders playing Elk Rapids at home and the score of Elk Rapids 5 Charlevoix 1 didn't show the caliber of the soccer played.

For Charlevoix, Curtis Petzak scored the lone goal with an assist by Sparky Nitchman.

"Our team is finally starting to judge themselves on the game they're playing rather than wins or losses," said Coach Block.

Thursday saw the Rayders away at Boyne City.

Other goals were made from Ben Scheelk and Mike DiMartino making the score Charlevoix 5, Boyne City 2.

Later this week the Rayders played Forest Area's homecoming Saturday. The score was 3 to 1 Rayders with Sparky Nitchman scoring the hat trick.

Attorney: Mayor did not violate city charter

MAYOR

Young's opinion, he cannot tell city employees to do certain jobs, but "if I have strong feelings on something, I not only have a right to (speak out) but an obligation to do that."

He added, "If the charter said I wasn't allowed to speak, it would be in violation of the First Amendment."

Campbell said he feels vindicated by Young's opinion and is happy with Wiesner's apology.

"I think he will be more careful on what he does (in the future)," he said.

In a Sept. 13 memo to city council, the mayor and all city employees, Wiesner said city charter prohibits the mayor from speaking to the media about his concerns with city employees. Wiesner was particularly upset with a paragraph in a Sept. 1 edition of the Courier that read, "Campbell also said he doesn't have anything against city administration, but some people could work harder. 'I could see some doing their job a little better or taking up a different job,' he said."

However, Campbell gave the memo to Young and asked him if he could say whether this was a violation of the city charter or not, as Wiesner claimed.

In a memo dated Sept. 28, Young concluded, "....the city charter was not designed to limit a candidate's ability to express generalized views on city administration when those views are expressed in the context of political expressions. Moreover, the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States would not permit such a limitation."

Wiesner said city employees had told him they were upset with the paragraph and it was hurting their morale.

"I am still concerned about morale and generalized statements made," he said during Monday's meeting.

Charlevoix City Council Member Sherm Chamberlain also claimed the mayor made generalized statements and he also heard that city staff were wondering if they were being criticized.

But, Campbell responded he clearly said he was upset with "city administration" — meaning Wiesner — and his comments were not directed at city employees.

Mayoral hopefuls to meet the public

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With elections drawing near, the library is offering the public the opportunity to meet some of the candidates and hear what they have to say about current issues.

The evening will kick off at 7 p.m. on Oct. 20 at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Kay Heise, president of Charlevoix Friends of the Library, said the evening will progress with questions done in the manner of the League of Women Voters. Candidates will have prepared questions, but will also take questions submitted by the audience.

"The Charlevoix Courier is helpful, but it's always a good idea to meet people face to face and listen to a give and take between citizens and the candidates who will represent us," she said.

This is not the first time the library has hosted a meeting of candidates running for positions, for there have been those running for the school board.

"Since the Friends of the Library organized in the fall of '99, it was always a priority to have

Northwest administrator let go

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy of Charlevoix is currently looking for a new administrator as former interim administrator Jonathan Winkjer was released from his position.

The decision came after Winkjer said he had challenged the school board on what the proper role of a school board is. After that, he said the trouble began.

"I'm most upset about what the school board has done to the school," he said.

Winkjer has been involved with Northwest Academy for seven years. His career in education started by being brought on board as the computer systems management person, which evolved into his teaching computers and language arts.

This year Winkjer was teaching social studies and government along with maintaining the computer position and being interim administrator. He was interim administrator from Aug. 28 to Sept. 26.

The school board also let go former full-time math teacher and current substitute Steve Bennett.

The school board is comprised of President John Hagen, Vice President and Finance Chair John Friedly and Secretary/Treasurer Jane Schwartzfisher.

There are supposed to be five members, but Hagen said Friedly and Schwartzfisher recently joined and the board is currently taking applications for the other two positions.

Hagen said Winkjer was let go because he wasn't meeting the qualifications set forth by sponsor school Saginaw Valley State University.

The two requirements by Saginaw Valley State University are that all teachers and administrators have full teaching certification and are enrolled in a degree program that would lead to certification as an administrator.

The other requirement is for teachers and says they need to be fully certified in their subject or have a temporary certification and can show they are enrolled in a pro-

No appeal on assisted living decision

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Since no one has appealed a circuit court decision allowing the construction of an assisted living facility on the city's north side, the project is quickly moving forward.

According to, Ed Engstrom, the attorney for Sunnybank Retirement Community — the assisted living facility being constructed on Petoskey Avenue, near Meech Street, the order allowing the facility became final on Sept. 21. That was the deadline for any appeals.

Ruth Bellissimo, co-owner of Sunnybank, said, "Hopefully we will start building this year. But, we may have to wait until spring. It depends on how fast we can get everything in place."

The proposed development is a single-story building spanning 36,000 square feet, which will cover about one acre of land. The building will be constructed in the shape of an "X" with wings containing 54 units, of which 32 will be efficiency and 22 that will be one-bedroom apartments.

In February 2004, Engstrom filed a lawsuit against the city of Charlevoix on behalf of Sunnybank owners Diane Gillette and Bellisimo.

Engstrom said he based his suit on a constitutional issue. He said the city's zoning ordinance is invalid because it excludes assisted living facilities, like Sunnybank. This was based on a Nov. 17, 2003 Charlevoix city council decision not to set a public hearing to discuss amending the ordinance to allow assisted living facilities in the R-1 and R-2 single family residential districts. Many people who live on the north side, near the proposed site, had pushed for this action.

Sunnybank wanted to locate its facility in an R-2 zoned district. It came to the planning commission with this request in 2003.

However, when they were turned down because of the ordinance, Engstrom approached the planning commission in December 2003 with a new idea. He claimed that professional offices are allowed in the R-2. Because professional office is not defined in the ordinance, what is allowed in the professional office district, including nursing homes, are allowed in the R-2.

Central to this argument was his claim that nursing homes are akin to assisted living facilities.

At that time, the planning commission made the controversial majority vote to set a public hearing to listen to the special use permit request based on this rationale. However, the Charlevoix City Council had made an earlier vote to not to set a public hearing to discuss amending the ordinance to allow assisted living facilities in the R-1 and R-2 single family residential districts.

City manager Mike Wiesner appealed the planning commission's decision to have a public hearing and in late January the zoning board of appeals (ZBA) ruled that Engstrom's line of thinking did not follow the intent of the zoning ordinance. Charlevoix City Attorney Jim Young also warned the planning commission against their actions at the time.

This move prompted Charlevoix City Mayor Gabe Campbell to fire several of the planning commissioners, who in turn fought their dismissal and hired an attorney. Most ended up staying on the commission after the decision was made to sent the matter to the ZBA and not have a public hearing at the planning commission.

Regardless the ZBA's decision meant the city council and the ZBA were saying assisted living does not fit into the single family residential district.

Engstrom's lawsuit argued its not just that the facility isn't accommodated in the single family residential district, the city has excluded this type of facility across the board.

He said his exclusionary zoning case is strong because according to state statute a municipality can't exclude a use when it is proven to be needed.

But, Charlevoix Planner Gerry Harsch, in a previous interview, said assisted living could conceivably be allowed in the R-4, multiple dwelling residential district, but not practically.

"For all practical purposes, there is no district within our zoning ordinance which is available to accommodate this project," Harsch said.

During the build up to the court trail, the city filed a consent order with the Sunnybank Developers in an attempt to settle the matter. But, the case went to court anyway and Charlevoix Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas ruled in favor of Sunnybank.

Since the lawsuit was filed in Feburary 2004, attorney fees related to it have cost the city around $13,000.

According to City Attorney Jim Young, that money is not covered by insurance because Sunnybank was not requesting damages and only wanted a court order allowing the construction of the assisted living facility.

If Sunnybank had requested damages as part of its lawsuit, then insurance would have covered the cost.

OPINIONS

The First Amendment

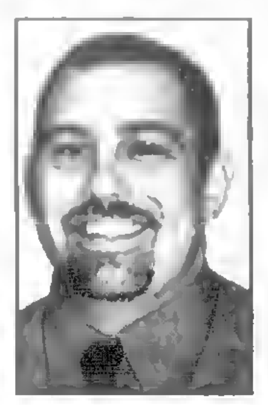
The politics of being nasty should end



Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I've been thinking a lot about politics lately. It could be because of all the political ads that are being thrown at me on television and in the newspapers, but I am not sure.

Most of my column this week deals with politics.

Civility

I have noticed a complete lack of civility in this year's elections. People are angry and people are pushing for their candidate and people are willing to say and do anything it seems to get their point across — thus indicating the further erosion of intelligent political discourse in this country.

This year I have noticed a big push with attack ads being put out in the media by candidates. And I am not talking about just the national races, I am talking about local races as well. Perhaps the insanity of the national races are infiltrating our local races.

Whatever happened to welcoming the challenge of a contest for an elected seat? Whatever happened to respecting your opponent, yet politely disagreeing with him or her? Whatever happened to telling the public what you propose to do in your ads, not spending your time and money twisting the record of your opponent?

I hear this comment many times, "I don't think I am going to vote this year, they are all idiots." Or, "Why vote? They are all the same sleazy politician."

Please, bring back respectability to politics. I believe negative and attack style advertisements do nothing but erode our democracy by creating a cynical public that doesn't even bother to vote.

Personal property

Recently I received a telephone call from a concerned reader who wanted to let me know about an incident they had happen to them. It seems they support John Kerry as president and have a sticker announcing that on their vehicle. But, it also seems that some people just can't respect other people's opinion or other people's personal property.

You see, this person walked outside one day to find a man getting ready to put a sticker supporting George W. Bush over the Kerry sticker on their vehicle. The man had several stickers supporting Bush in his hands and seemed to be doing this to every vehicle he saw supporting Kerry.

When asked why, he told the reader that the reader should not be supporting Kerry.

Huh? Just because you support a different candidate than your fellow citizen does not give you the right to damage their property. This kind of thinking baffles me. The sad thing is it is not the first time I have heard of such a thing happening in our little town.

I have heard tales of people being called "unpatriotic" for supporting certain candidates, being told they are "not good Christians" for their politics and being told they should be fired from their jobs for the political views they have.

The United States is not a country of one political party folks. We have to accept the fact that our process works the best when there are several political parties in power, all trying to come to consensus on laws, thus creating the best laws and policy possible for our country.

No one is unpatriotic for their political views. In fact, I believe having any political view is your patriotic right, one that our forefathers fought for in the Revolutionary War.

No one is violating their religious beliefs with their politics. A person's politics and religion are equal in nature: they are both a set of very personal beliefs. If you believe your religious beliefs and your politics do not violate one another then so be it. No one has the right to push their politics on you by questioning something as personal as your religion.

No one should ever be fired for their political views. That is like firing someone for their religion. How dare you suggest that something as personal as a person's politics means they can not perform their job.

I say, get out there and support whatever candidate you want for whatever elected seat you want. Don't let others tell you what to believe or how you should vote. Just be active and vote.

First amendment

Some people have asked me why I have not written an editorial on City Manager Mike Wiesner telling city council that it is against city charter to tell the media if they are upset with city administration — I guess I am now.

This was a violation of the First Amendment and it was wrong for Wiesner to say such a thing.

But, Wiesner knows this, especially after being told so by City Attorney Jim Young, and he has apologized to the mayor.

If a man can admit when he is wrong, apologize and learn from it, then it is not hard to look past the mistake and move on.

Letters to the editor

Edwards was clear

Editor:

The choices in this election have become clear. The contrast between Senator John Edwards and Vice President Cheney, last Tuesday night, was a contrast between Senator Edwards' honest assessment of where we are and what we can do to improve our country and the Vice President's tired mumblings in defense of policies that have created the chaos in Iraq, the loss of jobs here at home, phony Medicare reforms and a floundering economy.

In Tuesday night's debate, the vice president repeated old and discredited reasons for invading Iraq and unintelligible excuses for the growing domestic mess at home.

He had no answers for the issues of our declining economy, increased unemployment, rising health care costs or the inadequate funding for their own No Child Left Behind Act.

Senator Edwards actually presented real plans, not only for dealing with the situation in Iraq, but for true Medicare reform, for making it easier for people to buy vital medications at reasonable costs, for a tax reform that really would help middle class and working people not the super rich, and for increasing security at home.

This administration is attempting to frighten people into voting for them.

It has been four years of bumbling on major issues while giving insider contracts to their cronies and outrageous tax cuts to their benefactors. It truly is time for a change.

Bush a great leader

Editor:

I have read letters to the editor in this newspaper stating the war in Iraq is a wasteless diversion. This is difficult to accept when history is considered.

Remember during the 90s al Qaeda attacked the World Trade Center, embassies in Africa, barracks in Saudi Arabia and the U.S.S. Cole with no U.S. response to these terrorist attacks and attendant loss of life. No wonder al Qaeda believed 9/11 was a realistic target. I often wonder if earlier responses would have deterred 9/11.

We now know other countries such as France had a financial motive to keep Saddam in power and provided him protection at the United Nations. Without President Bush's strong leadership

Saddam would still be in power using his wealth to support terrorist enemies of the U.S. The Iraq War is vital to the future security of our country. And we know John Kerry would not have acted without French support.

My grandchildren will be safer because President Bush acted in the best interest of the United States. I am grateful for his leadership.

Thank you

Editor:

During the week of Sept. 6, my wife and I (along with another couple) had the pleasure of visiting your fine city. It occurred to us that a friend of ours had a summer home on Lake Charlevoix and we wanted to stop by and say "hello." Not knowing where their address was located, we went to the chamber of commerce office. After a great deal of effort, including enlisting the help of your local Post Office, they were able to get me the directions I needed.

Violet, of the chamber staff, went far beyond what one would expect to help with our search. A raffle ticket to support the chamber's activities was just a small expression of our appreciation.

Then, to our great surprise, came the phone call saying we had won the Chrysler Sebring Convertible!

When I returned on Sept. 20 to pick up the car, I was again given the "Royal" treatment - not only by the chamber staff, but, also, by Greg Henderson of a local car dealership.

You may be assured that we will be returning to enjoy the beauty and hospitality of your city. You are to be commended on the quality of your staff and of the local businesses that promote Charlevoix.

You can look to us as unofficial, non-resident good will ambassadors of your fine community.

Support pool

Editor:

When Mothers for the Pool first met about 16 years ago, we went around the room and asked if any of us ever had a near-drowning experience or knew someone who drowned. All but one of us once had a close call. One had a friend who drowned. Later, we learned that a toddler can drown in only a few seconds which convinced us that we had to make sure that children learned how to swim and to be safe around the water. In fact, our logo shows a child being helped to swim by an adult.

Now children in the area are being taught swim skills and having fun as well. What has surprised us is how much the pool time is needed for therapy by men and women suffering from ailments such as arthritis or injuries. We're happy that Dollar Nights have been such fun for Charlevoix area families.

I could go on about the many benefits that our community pool has provided. Please help us keep Dollar Nights and support the millage for the pool on Nov. 2.

Editor:

This weekend marks Homecoming in more ways than one. Charlevoix High School Class of '69 celebrates its thirty-fifth reunion — and a member of that class celebrates a personal "homecoming" too. My husband, Steve Paterka, returns home on Oct. 14 following a six-month hospital and rehabilitation therapy stay at Munson Medical Center and Boulder Park Terrace. Though he's still in a wheelchair, Steve's physical recovery improves daily, and we have high hopes he'll someday walk again.

There's a new movie playing at Cinema III — "Ladder 49." It's the story of Baltimore firefighters trying to save one of their own caught in a blazing inferno. Our very own Charlevoix firefighters (both city and township departments) have been awesome in their efforts to help a fellow firefighter and his family. Steve, a charter member (30 years) of the Charlevoix Township Fire Department, serves as captain for that department. Both city and township joined together in fund-raising efforts for Steve last Saturday. Their demonstration of the city's aerial truck and ladder and rescue efforts off the Villager Pub's roof was amazing!

The men and women of our fire department are our nation's heroes and our family's personal heroes as well. They've been there with us every step of the way through Steve's illness and recovery. No words can describe how we feel about these two fire departments that banded together through these past six months in a continuing show of brotherhood for a fellow firefighter. We will never forget their loving support.

Special thanks to Bill Supernaw of Cinema III, for organizing and hosting last weekend's event, and to Terry Left for providing a convenient "roof rescue" locale. Our family is grateful for the donations received — not only from proceeds of the movie, but to the many anonymous individuals who made personal contributions. We don't know who you are, but God certainly does. It is my hope and prayer that He blesses each and every one of you for your generosity. Again, many thanks to the people of Charlevoix. You are certainly living up to your name of "Charlevoix The Beautiful"!

Blood drive a success

Editor:

The American Red Cross had a blood drive in Charlevoix on Sept. 16.

I am most grateful, once again, to the Community Reformed Church for the use of their wonderful facility. I'm also thankful to a local Realtor for allowing my Red Cross volunteers to use the phones in their offices to remind donors of the blood drive.

Thanks to Ed Whitley's city water and electric staff for displaying the banners and the Charlevoix Lions Club for providing their service of set-up and take down of Red Cross equipment.

The steady flow of donors during the afternoon allowed each to accomplish their mission of giving a pint of life-saving blood in about an hour. They were then treated to hot fudge brownie sundaes and a mouth-watering variety of bars, cookies, cheesecake, peanut butter pie, fruits and cheeses. Thank you to my great volunteers for their time and their happy personalities which they shared with everyone they came in contact with. They really made the blood drives enjoyable.

The American Red Cross collected 96 pints of blood on Sept. 16 and hope to collect even more at the next community bloodmobile on Nov. 18. There will also be a blood drive for Type O blood from 1 to 5:45 p.m. on Nov. 11 at Bethany Lutheran Church.

Crystal is the daughter of Paul Casciani of Charlevoix and Susan Casciani of Charlevoix. Stephen is the son of Steve and Reta Speigl of Charlevoix.

The Rev. Geri Litchfield performed the double ring rites in the courtyard of the castle with 250 guests in attendance.

The bride wore a strapless, white, satin, a-line gown with beaded crystal bodice. The veil was elbow length, with Swarovski crystals and Sutache edge. Her tiara was made of rhinestones. The bride's bouquet was made of mauve lilies, larkspur, liathus, astroemeria, sweetheart roses, caspia, green ivy and plumosa.

The maid of honor was Danielle Martin. Bridesmaids were Sarah Jones, Jayna Johnson and Jenny Whitney. They wore lavender, Georgette, spaghetti strap, a-line, empire waisted dresses. Their flowers were a bouquet of larkspur, liathus, lilies, astroemeria, caspia, plumosa and green ivy.

Maranda McPeherson was the flower girl.

Derek Willis was the ring bearer.

The best man was Ben Speigl, brother of the groom. Groomsmen were Ryan Willis, Matt Goodrich and Chad Fish.

Ushers were Zach Bajos, Adam Foltz and John Hiemstra.

A reception was given at Castle Farms.

The couple went on a wedding trip to the east coast and spent a week sightseeing.

They are making Mount Pleasant their home, until the bride graduates from college.

Crystal is attending Central Michigan University and will graduate in December with a degree in child development, with an early childhood concentration. Steve will begin the conservation officer academy in October and will graduate in March.

Speaker to give talk on abortion at St. Mary's

Dr. Daniel Pepin, Instructor of Human Biology at North Central Michigan College and Professor of Anatomy and Physiology at Edison College in Naples, Florida, will present "Life Before Birth" at 12:00 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 24 at St. Mary's Family Center.

According to Dr. Pepin, "The vast majority of the American public does not know the facts about abortion, has no coherent position on the issue and simply wishes the problem to go away. My goal is to educate as many people as possible on the issues of pro-life and to uncover the truths, or should I say 'untruths,' about pro-abortion."

Dr. Pepin has created a presentation using intrauterine photographs and a chronological description of key events in a developing child from conception to birth. The presentation will explore the question of "when life begins" and enable discussion of abortion.

All members of the community are welcome to attend this presentation. Due to the content, it is not suitable for young children.

St. Mary's parish will be offering day care services for those who wish to attend. They ask that a minimum donation of $1.00 per child be given to defray the cost of the day care provider.

For more information concerning this event, call Patty Furtaw at St. Mary's Parish at 547-6438.

Security checks offered

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is once again reminding citizens of Charlevoix County who are going to be absent from their homes for a period of time, this office has a program to check on these homes in their absence.

In order to participate in this program, the homeowner must contact this office at 547-4461 to request a security check form. If a citizen has applied for this program in the past, the request form must be re-submitted each year. Please note, this program does not take the place of private security programs — just adds to the coverage and works along with these private organizations.

St. Mary's to host Northern Lights fund-raiser

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

St. Mary School will be hosting it's Ninth Annual Northern Lights Celebration Dinner Dance Auction from 5:30 p.m. to midnight on Oct. 16.

Janet Troppman, principal of St. Mary School, said 191 people attended the event last year raising a net of $43,000. Troppman said the goal is to meet that amount or hopefully surpass it this year.

The event is open to everyone and will include both a live and silent auction, various raffles and a children's art gallery. Food will be catered and will include a garden salad and a combination plate of chicken pomodoro, top sirloin filet with a special wine sauce, seasoned vegetables, whipped potatoes and a choice of various breads and a variety of specialty cakes. There will also be dancing.

"We have a great floor and lots of space," she said.

While people chat and enjoy the evening, they will also be raising money for the operational budget of the school and ultimately helping the children.

The silent auction includes items themed to home, sports and gardening, but also electronics such as a flat-screen computer monitor, gift certificates for dinners to local restaurants and hair salons and memberships to local gyms. There will also be numerous items for children such as a 20 inch boy's Trek bicycle with gear shifts that has a retail value of $240.

The live auction includes a Detroit Red Wing's Jersey signed by goaltender Dominic Hasek and a dinner for six couples catered by the Grey Gables Inn at the house of Dr. and Mrs. Frederic Van Duyne, who's home is one of the original houses on Michigan Avenue and has been there for 100 years.

Other live auction items include Mackinac Island packages for Mission Point Resort and a two-night weekend getaway at the Grand Hotel, a balloon ride for two in Traverse City, a cultured pearl necklace and earrings, a motorized scooter, a Pepsi pop machine and tickets to visit the Mackinac Bridge Tower.

There will also be the chance to bid on a wine-tasting party for 30 at the Rowe Inn Restaurant in Ellsworth, a trip to Drummond Island in the Upper Peninsula, hand-painted secretary furniture and an original painting by local artist Sue Bolt.

There will be several raffles and people are welcome to ask for a certain number they feel may bring them luck.

The Scholarship Card Raffle features only 52 cards that are available for $50 a card and there is no limit on the number of cards that can be purchased. The owner of the card that matches the one drawn wins the $2,125 scholarship, which Troppman said covers a child's tuition for one year.

Cards can be purchased for one's own family or another family can be nominated for the scholarship. The funds were donated by Rita Orlowski and Jay and Kris Balasz.

The "Women's Corner" will feature a trip for four to Toronto for a three-night stay at the Sheridan Center, which is in the heart of local restaurants, stores and theatres.

The package also includes transportation by train, a gourmet basket of goodies from Esperance in Charlevoix, manicures for four, fru-fru baskets featuring spa items and extra funding for a dinner out on the town or a trip to the theatre.

Tickets cost $10 each and only 300 will be sold. The trip has a value of $1,100.

For the men, the "Men's Corner" will feature a four-day Canadian outdoor adventure package for four that includes lodging at Tamawa Cottages on Lake Kabenung in Ontario, a motor boat for fishing, a guide to show where the best fishing is, a quality rod and reel combination and a basket of gourmet foods.

Transportation is not provided. Tickets cost $10 each and only 300 will be sold. The trip was put together by the school and has a value of $1,000.

Another trip available is a Chocolate Lover's Ski Weekend. The trip includes a one-night stay at Cedar River Valley of Shanty Creek Resort and Club in Bellaire.

There will be dinner for four at Murphy's Lamplight Inn, a blanket and a book to log the skiing adventure. Winners will stay in a one-year old, two-bedroom top of the line condominium and can bring whoever they want to as there is no limit.

The package also includes 10 lift tickets for either Schuss Mountain, which has more aggressive runs or the more family-oriented Shanty Creek Mountain.

Instead of tickets, those interested must purchase a large Kilwin's candy bar for $10. There are only 200 available. If the one purchased has an insert that says the owner is one of 10 finalists, that person moves onto the next round. During this round, finalists will chose a container holding Hershey Kisses. Silver wrapped Hershey Kisses eliminate finalists, while only the gold Hershey Kisses denote a winner.

The children's art gallery will be on display during a preview of auction items from 5 to 8 p.m. on Oct. 15 and during the gala event on Oct. 16.

The pieces were created by students ranging from kindergarten to sixth grade.

Many of the pieces will be up for bidding during the silent auction, but Troppman said three pieces will be selected for the live auction.

During the preview of auction items, there will also be a children's raffle. Children can write their name on a raffle ticket and can have a chance to win one of several prizes including an acoustic guitar and a big wheel truck they can ride in. The public is invited and admission is free.

At the gala event, there will be a Canadian beer corner featuring every type of Canadian beer and an open bar will be available from 5:30 to 7 p.m. then it will become a cash bar throughout the evening.

Dinner begins at 7 p.m. accompanied by a short slide show of students at St. Mary School, which the event will support.

The live auction begins at 8:30 p.m. and silent bids can be placed throughout the evening.

Bids are currently being taken and sealed bids will be accepted on live auction items. Raffle tickets are also on sale and can be purchased at St. Mary School.

Tickets are $60 per person for the evening. Tickets for just the auction and dancing are $30 per person.

To make a reservation and for more information call St. Mary School at 547-9441.

Be on the lookout for deer on roads

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office would like to give a warning and notice to motorists in Charlevoix County to be alert when driving in the morning, evening and especially at night to deer crossing the highways.

The sheriff's office is averaging four car/deer accidents a day for motorists in Charlevoix County. All of these accidents are resulting in property damage to the vehicles involved and some accidents have resulted in personal injury to the driver or their passengers.

The sheriff's office suggests you slow down your speed and drive defensively and alert for deer crossing the roadways.

Kelly Wood hired as new all-day kindergarten teacher

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Elementary School welcomes a new face for a new class.

Kelly Wood

Kelly Wood, 26, will be joining the faculty at the elementary school as she begins her career.

Wood will be teaching the newly created all-day kindergarten section.

Wood received her degree from Central Michigan University and did all her studying at the Traverse City campus.

Wood grew up in Belleville near Ann Arbor and has lived in Charlevoix for the past eight years when she moved up here with her family upon graduating from high school.

This is her first year teaching, which is a natural career path for her.

"I've always wanted to be a teacher," she said. "I have a passion for kids and want to be with them. It's what I've always wanted to do."

The lower grades such as preschool, kindergarten and first grade have always appealed to Wood, who said she likes to prepare children socially, academically and emotionally for what lies ahead of them once they leave her class.

"I just want to have the kindergartners in my room fully prepared for first grade," she said.

Wood is looking forward to meeting all the students and helping them create and learn.

"I'm just excited about the kids," she said. "I'm just so excited to be with the kids."

Principal Richard Swenor said a lot of qualified people applied, but Wood stood out because of the way she and the children responded to one another.

"She did an exceptional job with the kids," he said.

Swenor said Wood's lesson kept the children's attention and was well-organized and fun.

"One thing we want teachers to do is to make the kids feel successful," he said. "We want kids to enjoy school."

That enjoyment for learning is something Swenor said the elementary school staff strives to infuse in all the students. Wood will add to that knowledge base.

"She brings just another educational mind and talent to our team," he said.

New all-day kindergarten class

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Due to large enrollment numbers before school started, the Charlevoix Elementary School will now be featuring a fourth all-day kindergarten class.

Swenor said there has been less enrollment in the beginning classes such as pre-school and kindergarten throughout the state.

"We're pleased that we did get an increase this year," he said.

That increase, however, created a total enrollment of 107 kindergarten students including beginkindergarten students, which resulted in larger class sizes.

Before the new class was created there were about 24 students per all-day kindergarten class and now there will be only about 18 students.

Research has been done concerning kindergartners through second and third graders, Swenor said, that shows that age is the most important time to have a smaller class size.

"We realized the educational impact of that," he said.

The new kindergarten section will allow students and teachers to share that valuable one-on-one learning experience.

"The teacher will be able to meet the needs of the individual kids," he said.

Working closely with students and with the class on a whole creates a lot of benefits, Swenor said.

"It gives each child more individual attention," he said.

Area skate park raffle, silent auction extended

The Charlevoix Community Skatepark raffle and silent auction for Indian River artist and master sculptor William Doehring's painted buffalo skulls will be extended until the skate park's end of year bash on Oct. 24.

The raffle is for the "Warrior" buffalo skull and the silent auction of for two skulls called "Seeker" and "Thunder."

Winners who live out of the area will have their skulls shipped to them.

Raffle tickets can be purchased at the skate park from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday and on from noon to 5 p.m. on Saturday and after noon on Sunday.

Cynthia Parker, fundraiser coordinator for the Charlevoix Community Skatepark, Inc., will have raffle tickets available and silent auction forms. The forms can also be obtained from Doehring by e-mailing him at wmdoehring@aol.com.

Parker can also be contacted for more information at 547-4304.

City fire department to have open house

Fire Prevention Week is here.

The City of Charlevoix firefighters along with thousands of firefighters across North America are visiting schools and other sites in the community to teach the basics of fire safety and prevention.

Even though smoke alarms are now widely popular, it is still true that roughly 70 percent of home fire deaths result from fires in homes with no smoke alarms or no working smoke alarms.

If a home fire occurs, smoke alarms cut your chances of dying nearly in half. They should be installed on every level of a home, including the basement, and outside each sleeping area.

Smoke alarms should be tested once a month, following the manufacturer's instructions. Batteries need replacing once a year or as soon as the alarm "chirps," indicating that the battery is low. Replace all smoke alarms after 10 years, even those that are hard-wired or smoke alarms with "long-life" (10 year) batteries.

Smoke alarms with "long-life" batteries should also be replaced when the alarm "chirps" or fails to respond to periodic testing. The batteries in these units cannot be replaced.

A fire can spread through your home rapidly. In fact, you may have as little as two minutes to escape safely once the smoke alarm sounds. In addition to maintaining smoke alarms, it's vital that families develop a basic home fire escape plan so each family member knows what to do when a smoke alarm sounds. Involve everyone in the household in putting together the plan.

The City of Charlevoix Fire Department invites you to attend its first annual "Fire Prevention Open House," from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday, Oct. 23. Come to the City of Charlevoix Fire Department located at 210 State Street.

New scam reported

Sheriff George T. Lasater advises that a new credit card scam has surfaced.

Citizens of Charlevoix County were contacted by a telemarketer advising the Charlevoix County citizen he was representing "JAG" a federal agency.

He informed the citizen that the federal government mandated the citizen surrender their credit card identification number and social security number. If they refused the federal government would send the citizen a bill for $700 for non-compliance.

Sheriff Lasater further advises the scam is usually concentrating on senior citizens. The sheriff has referred this complaint to the Federal Bureau of Investigations.

Get a piece of school's history

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

For many people the old Charlevoix Middle School on Grant Street represents the history of Charlevoix and times past.

Valerie Meyerson, director of the Charlevoix Public Library, said those who wish to take a piece of that history home with them can.

"Well, we just felt like people are very nostalgic about the building," she said.

Meyerson said that along with the nostalgic factor, allowing people to take items will help the environment because the items will get reused instead of being thrown away.

The public is invited to take whatever they may want such as desks and chairs, basketball backboards and various other items before the environmental clean-up occurs.

Meyerson said a company is currently removing built-in items like molding and the public is invited to remove items they may want before the asbestos abatement occurs next week.

> "Well, we just felt like people are very nostalgic about the building."
> Valerie Meyerson, Library director

The abatement is necessary in order to clean up the school before the project can move forward.

"We can't do any work because of it," she said.

The abatement process will take about four to six weeks to complete, and then after that the demo is starting and the new design will take shape.

So, the library is inviting people to take what they want and is only asking for donations that will go toward the capital campaign. Those who wish to take items must schedule an appointment with the library and remove the items themselves.

Appointments will be taken through Oct. 16 and can be made by calling the library at 547-2651 and asking for Julie Burgess.

Council discussing ban on dogs in park

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix City Council moved one step closer to banning dogs in East Park when they decided to go forward with a plan to write up a rough ordinance on the matter at their Oct. 4 meeting.

Council told city staff to write up an ordinance that prohibits dogs from East Park, between Antrim Street and Clinton Streets, but still provides some accommodation for boaters who have dogs.

Charlevoix Mayor Gabe Campbell said, "We have a responsibility to people who want to go sit in the park and don't want to get hit. I think we should have an ordinance."

However, he and the council agreed there needed to be a dog run for the pets boaters in the city marina bring with them. Council member Bob Timms suggested putting one behind the band shell, while council member Sherm Chamberlain pointed out this issue can also be addressed when East Park is renovated.

This decision came after a public hearing, where most who spoke were in favor of some sort of dog ban in East Park. However, many of them were cautious about such a ban for the whole year.

Megan Potter, of Charlevoix, said she likes to take her dog to East Park when there are very few people. She said she sees no problem with banning dogs from the park during the busy summer months and festivals.

Charlevoix County Animal Enforcement Officer Judy Whitley also spoke out in favor of a dog ban in East Park. While she acknowledged there are some good dog owners that know how to control their pets and do not bring them into the park when it is crowded, she said many dog owners are not as responsible as that.

"I could sit here for a half-hour and tell you why dogs should not be in East Park," she said. "It is not a good situation. It stresses me out to see them down there."

Whitley said she has seen dog owners put their pets into all sorts of stressful situations in Charlevoix. For example, Whitley said she watched someone at the carnival in downtown Charlevoix during Venetian Festival with a Chihuahua, who was almost getting stepped on and was shaking in fear.

Whitley also said, while many dog owners pick up the droppings of their pet, this may not be good enough.

"Sometimes you don't get all of it. I don't want to be sitting in that or their urine," she said.

Diane Wojan, a dog breeder, also spoke in favor of a ban. She said the problem is irresponsible dog owners and owners that just want to show off their pets.

But, at least one dog owner disagrees with this possible ordinance.

Joan Wagner, a dog breeder, said she walks her dogs occasionally in the city. While she does not bring her pet to the park during festivals, she said she has never had a problem with her dogs in the city.

Furthermore, she questioned how many official complaints — such as actual dog bites — have been made. Council answered people had complained informally.

Wagner said, "I could walk down and complain about somebody's kid. That doesn't make it an official act to be brought up to council."

The council will be addressing an actual ordinance on the dog ban at a future meeting.

City council siding with Saltonstall, library

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix City Council unanimously voted Oct. 4 in favor of a resolution siding with a plan to sell the current Charlevoix Public Library and use the funds to pay off part of the new library's debt.

Council made this vote after being petitioned to do so by Charlevoix resident and Friend of the Library, Connie Saltonstall. Saltonstall told the council that Charlevoix Community Schools wants to take the current library and use it as an administration building. She argued that the building should be sold, with the proceeds going to the new library, and that the school district has no right to take the building in the first place.

"There is no need for the school district to be there," she said. "There is simply no rational for it."

Saltonstall said her family donated the land the current library sits on. But, the donation came with the stipulation that if it ever were no longer used for a library or educational purposes, then the land's ownership would revert back to the Saltonstall family.

She said the land and building currently belongs to the library, so the library should benefit from its sale by using money gained from it to pay off the new building.

Saltonstall added her family will not sign off on the land if the school wants to use it as an administration building.

Charlevoix City Council Member Sherm Chamberlain agreed with Saltonstall.

"Morally I think that they should sell it, with the money going to the library," he said.

Charlevoix Mayor Gabe Campbell added, "I think what, you (Saltonstall) are doing is right."

But Charlevoix School's superintendent John Sturock said the building will be used for educational purposes, as was outlined in the clause. He said it will be used as the administration building for the school district, a training center for the district and many have other educational uses.

Furthermore, according to school attorney Gordon VanWieren, Jr., back when the library and the schools were splitting in 1997, there was a reverter clause over the library written. This reverter clause says the library's ownership reverts back to the school district when it is no longer being used for a library.

But, due to a mistake in paperwork, that reverter clause was never filed with deed. However, both the school and the library's attorney have said that clause should have been filed with the original 1997 deed.

Sturock argues that the school district can say the library belongs to them because of this reverter clause that was suppose to be filed. Therefore, if the school district then owns the library, Sturock claims school code forbids the district from giving it away.

"I think it is a legal issue," he said. "The law is the law."

The council's resolution just means the city agrees with Saltonstall and the Charlevoix Public Library on this issue. Council can not force the school district to comply with it.

Car raffle winner Donald Lang, expresses gratitude

"During the week of September 6th, my wife and I had the pleasure of visiting your fine city. It occurred to us that a friend of ours had a summer home on Lake Charlevoix, and we wanted to stop by and say "hello". Not knowing the location of their address, we went to the Chamber of Commerce. After a great deal of effort, including enlisting the help of your local post office, the Chamber staff was able to get me the directions I needed. Office Manager, Violet Dinwiddie, went far beyond what one would expect to help with our search. A raffle ticket to support the Chamber's activities was just a small expression of our appreciation. Then, to our great surprise, came the call saying we had won the Chrysler Sebring Convertible! When I returned on September 20th to pick up the car, I was again given the "Royal" treatment - not only by the Chamber staff - but also by Greg Henderson of Crown Motors. You may be assured that we will be returning to enjoy the beauty and hospitality of your city. The Chamber of Commerce is to be commended on the quality of their staff and of the local businesses that promote Charlevoix. You can look to us as unofficial, non-resident good will ambassadors of your fine community."

Football team spoils Harbor Springs homecoming

By B. JON GOHS
Football writer

It was supposed to be Harbor Springs' homecoming, but the Rayders sent them packing as Charlevoix pounded their way to a 26-6 victory over the Rams.

While both teams were scoreless during the first half, it was the plague of mistakes including an interception and some fumbles by his team, which had Coach Jess upset.

"I hope we have it out of our system before this game coming up Friday," he said.

The second half of Friday's game was a different story altogether, as the Rayders made TD after TD in a drive which dominated the third and fourth quarters.

The series of scores began with a five yard pass from QB Cody Crain to Ben Bergmann, followed by Russell Williams' 12 yard run and a 40 yard pass from Crain to sophomore Brad Cyr, who debuted with a bang in Friday nights game.

And though Ray Jones spent most of the game concentrating on defense due to the fact that his hand is in a cast, he managed to score the Rayders fourth and final TD with a nine yard run.

Charlevoix's defense gave up only one TD to Harbor Springs in the last couple minutes of the game.

"They (Harbor Springs) have a good team with some good size kids," Jess said.

"They played real good in the first half."

But, he added, "They did what we expected. They ran the ball a lot and occasionally passed — but not often."

With another task completed the Rayders are 5-2 due in no small part to hard work by both offense and defense.

QB Cody Crain's passing percentage was up 4 percent this week to 63 percent as he was 19 of 30 for 212 yards with two touchdowns and one interception.

Receivers Mitchell Klooster and Ben Bergmann had six catches for 80 yards and six catches for 33 yards with two extra points and one TD respectively.

Bergman kicked for Jeff Golovich who is on the injured list this week with a sprained ankle. But, Jess said, Golovich should be able to play in next weeks game.

Eddie Waldron caught five passes for 55 yards and one interception, while Chris Waha also caught an interception.

"The offensive line had a really good second half," Jess said. "They opened up some big holes for the running backs."

If the Rayders can keep the momentum of a five game winning streak going they will do something they haven't done in several years.

"If we win we make the playoffs," Jess said.

The Rayders are in a position which would make many teams sweat, but according to Coach Jess, there is no more pressure on next weeks game than any other.

"I'm just excited to play the game," he said. "This is what we've been waiting for."

The Rayders next big game is against the Grayling Vikings whose only loss is to the tenacious Traverse City St. Francis, winners of last years playoffs.

"It's kind of been back and forth. Last year Grayling beat us," Jess said. "They are a tough team with a good program."

And, he added, "They are going to throw the ball as much as we do, which is rare. So this is going to be a good game to watch."

Grayling's offense is similar to the Rayders which makes them a dangerous opponent.

Jess said, "Grayling has a good run game, but their strength is definitely their wide receivers."

Regardless of how next weeks game turns out, Coach Jess said, by winning more games than they have lost, the Rayders guaranteed themselves a winning season. A season which not only tops last year's record of 1-8, but the records of several seasons before that.

This week the Rayders will hone the skills which have carried them thus far.

Coach Jess said, "We're going to work on defending the pass and we're still going to have to be able to stuff up the run."

The Rayders attempt to secure a slot in the playoffs against Grayling at 7 p.m., Friday Oct. 15 at home on Kipke field.

Cross country team going strong in meets

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School cross country teams continue to shine in area meets.

On Oct. 9, the teams took part in the Ogemaw Heights invitational. The boys' team took first out of six teams and the girls' took second in the division.

Furthermore, the boys' team was second in the overall meet, only to Petoskey, and beat the coach's poll favorite, Hemlock.

"They beat them without the number one and number five runners, who were sick at the time and did not compete," coach Ken Plude said. "It was a great team effort by all."

Girls' coach Mary Plude said, "The girls' grouping was tight from two through seven, but further hack than we wanted."

Top runners for the boys' team were: Jared Hunt in ninth, with a time of 17 minutes, 57 seconds; Tom Aepelbacher in twenty-first with a time of 18 minutes, 43 seconds; Isaec Matchett in sixteenth, with a time of 18 minutes, 31 seconds; Jacob Wimmer in fifth, with a time of 17 minutes, 44 seconds; Scott Plude in eighth, with a time of 17 minutes, 56 seconds; Jacob Hunt in twenty-third, with a time of 18 minutes, 58 seconds and Nick Wimmer in thirty-third, with a time of 19 minutes, 37 seconds.

Top runners for the girls were: Lindi Edger in sixth, with a time of 20 minutes, 53 seconds; Emily Morgridge in eighteenth, with a time of 21 minutes, 53 seconds; Theresa Martin in twenty-first, with a time of 22 minutes, 29 seconds; Alina Dhaseleer in twenty-second, with a time of 22 minutes, 30 seconds; Emily Westenbroek in twenty-fourth, with a time of 22 minutes, 36 seconds; Brittney Lamb in twenty-seventh, with a time of 22 minutes, 44 seconds and Mia Matchett in twenty-eight, with a time of 22 minutes, 45 seconds.

Rayders continue to roll over competition

By ALLEN TELGENHOF
Sports writer

"It just keeps going," Keith Haske observed.

It does indeed. Eleven straight wins to start the season.

The coach of the Charlevoix Rayders girls' basketball squad was describing the dream season that his team is having, their latest success a 71-45 victory over Boyne City.

"It's been a lot of fun," Haske said. "The kids have been just great."

Charlevoix (11-0 overall, 7-0 Lake Michigan Conference) continues to be ranked as the third-best team in Class C by the Associated Press, behind only fellow unbeatens Pewamo-Westphalia and Detroit DePorres.

The Rayders used their usual formula against the Ramblers, a strong start and a coast to the finish.

Charlevoix led 20-9 after the first quarter and 33-13 at the half en route to the win.

Grace Farrell had 15 points, 10 rebounds and four assists to pace the Rayders. Betsy Dennis added 12 points.

Shannon Dibble and Laura Nitchman each had eight points. Nitchman also had four assists and four steals. Kari Way contributed six rebounds and two steals to the cause.

"Our bench has been playing great," Haske said. "That's been a real key for us."

The only problem the Rayders have faced thus far seems to be the lack of competition.

"It feels like we've hit a bit of a lull," Haske said. "But I'm not sure why it feels that way since we're still playing well. With the tournament a month away and the (tournament) draw in a couple of weeks, we'll start focusing more I'm sure."

Charlevoix began the second time around the conference by hosting Elk Rapids on Tuesday, Oct. 12. Results will appear in next week's Courier. The Rayders play at East Jordan on Thursday, Oct. 14.

Golf team ends season with fourth place finish

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The Charlevoix High School varsity golf team's season came to a close Oct. 7, with a fourth place finish in the regional tournament at Tawas.

Fifteen teams competed to take the top three spots and advance to the state finals to be at Eastern Michigan University.

But, Charlevoix's score of 354, put them in fourth place, taking them out of the state run.

"The team is very disappointed, as well as myself," said coach Jim Glynn.

"We had a good season and I am proud of the boys. A third place finish in the conference and a fourth place at the regionals is respectable."

Grayling took first place in the tournament with 304 and Glynn feels they have a strong chance to take the state. Tawas was second with 328 and Manistee was third with 346.

Glynn said there were some bright spots in the tournament.

He said Kyle DeYoung shot an 83, which is only four shots off going to the state as an individual.

Also, sophomore Kris Bartling shot an 86, putting him fourteenth overall out of 75 golfers.

Other individual results were: Chris Wyniawskyj in thirteenth place with an 85; Chris Golski in fifty-fourth, with a 54 and Kevin Kusina in one-hundredth, with a 51.

"We are already looking forward to next season in hopes of improving a great deal," Glynn said.

Author writes response to Sept. 11 attacks

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

"Common Sense Rediscovered: Lessons From the Terrorist Attack On America" asks people to start thinking about the future of the country and what we as a people can do to make a change.

Professor Dale M. Herder, a part-time resident of Charlevoix, felt a sense of duty after the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and decided what needed to be said needed to be said in a non-politically correct manner.

"After asserting that American ideals still are the best hope for mankind, 'Common Sense Rediscovered' asks tough questions about America's perceived arrogance and diminished status as a global role model," Herder wrote in his book cover.

Herder said he started working on a manuscript in 1997 when he retired from teaching about some things that were concerning him about America.

His thesis was "termites in the cellar," which focused on the problems in the foundation of the country.

Things weren't meshing and Herder sat on the manuscript, hut when the terrorist attacks occurred, he opened it hack up and began to make some changes.

Herder, a retired Navy Commander who served for 30 years, including five years as an enlisted man in the U.S. Naval Reserve, three years in active duty at sea as a commissioned naval officer and 22 years in the reserve service as a commission naval officer, said he initially wanted to throw on his uniform and serve.

However, since he was retired from the Navy, he knew there wasn't a big chance the Navy would take him back, so he used his other life as an American historian and writing professor to pen his book.

He was spurred into action because of his concern as an American for the future of the United States and the attacks on Sept. 11 marked the time to pull together what he had been working on and getting it out.

Herder said his book is geared toward the general audience and the thinking reader.

"The purpose is to share ideas and hopefully make a difference," he said.

The hook is hased on Thomas Paine's 46 page pamphlet, "Common Sense," which was distrihuted in 1776.

Herder said he intended the hook to not only be a sequel to Paine's pamphlet but is also patterned upon it.

Herder said the parallels between 1776 and 2004 are very similar. The moment is pregnant and critical for change, Herder said, just like it was for the American colonists. Also, both years mark a crisis situation people had to face.

Herder said the future of the United States and that of the west is at stake.

"I think we could lose it if we remain seated when we should be getting up and acting," he said.

Herder is no stranger to Charlevoix as he and his wife, Diane M. Herder have summered in Charlevoix and kept their boat at Irish Boat Shop for 20 years.

Herder said they are looking toward moving up to Charlevoix in the future." he said.

Herder said ideas are the currency of a free society and if we shut them down or allow them to be shut down, as a society we could miss the opportunity of the moment and if we do, it will be lost forever.

"What is being said in Common Sense Rediscovered might be the voice of many Americans who also love this country and want to make it hetter by thinking ahout our values and acting accordingly," he said.

The book is priced to be affordable to all hecause Herder said his intent is not to make a profit, hut to share ideas with others like Paine did in 1776.

"'Common Sense Rediscovered" can be found at the Charlevoix Public Library, at various lihraries in the Lansing area and was just picked up nationally hy Barnes and Nobel.

School district enrollment numbers are up

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The numbers are up, but will the current enrollment level in Charlevoix Public Schools continue?

Charlevoix Public Schools Superintendent John Sturock said the increase in enrollment is good for the district because revenues are based on student numbers.

Due to the higher enrollment, Sturock said, the increase in revenue enabled the school to stay within budget and hire a new teacher to oversee the new kindergarten section.

Sturock said the budget is created the June prior to the next school year and an effort is made to anticipate anything that could happen during the year.

The budget is based on 1,360 students and there are currently 1,372 students. Sturock said the addition of twelve students brought $94,644 in revenue.

Sturock said this is the first year the school district has had an increase in enrollment. Prior to this year, the district was losing approximately 20 kids per year.

Sturock said part of the issue is that the basic foundation grant is not necessarily a guarantee and the state could come hack and grant less money if the revenues aren't there. This is what occurred during the past two years when enrollment was approximately 78 students per class.

Enrollment is now at approximately 100 students per class and Sturock said the current numbers are hack up to what they were three to four years ago.

"This is good because it's the first time we've been on the positive side in the past two years," he said.

Council hopefuls debate assisted living

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Sometimes things change and it may or may not be for the better as this week city council candidates look into the issue of assisted living.

Charlevoix recently went to court over a planned assisted living facility on the north side. A circuit court judge ruled that the facility could be built. During the build up to this court case, city council voted to not allow a public hearing on the matter, but the planning commission planned one anyway.

This lead to the firing of several planning commission members, who retained their seats after sending the matter to the Zoning Board of Appeals, as was suggested by the city manager, and eliminating the planned public hearing. But, the Zoning Board of Appeals ruled the planned assisted living facility did not fall within the ordinance for its proposed area — on the north side, in a residential area. Therefore, Sunnybank filed suit in circuit court.

First Ward Incumbent Bill Haggard said he thinks there is a need for assisted living in Charlevoix because everyone is getting older and he himself may need the availability of an assisted living facility in the future.

The concept is rather new, Haggard said, since it wasn't in Charlevoix's zoning ordinance. That is changing, however, as the planning commission is working on where to place assisted living in the ordinance.

"It's going to be interesting to see what the planning commission comes up with," he said.

Haggard said the entire situation could have been handled out of court.

"If we would have had a public hearing, we would have saved a lot of money and a lot of grief," he said.

Haggard said the pros and cons weren't allowed to be discussed because there wasn't a public hearing.

However, he said the proposed location is fine because an assisted living facility is a for-profit business, but is a place where people live and not just a professional office, which is for-profit and allowed in that zone.

To calm fears arising out of what would happen if the facility failed, Haggard said a reverter clause could be put into the ordinance that would state the property would revert back to residential or it's former natural state.

Candidate Rebecca Doan said the whole situation could have been handled out of court.

"It should have been sent to the Zoning Board of Appeals for interpretation for where assisted living belongs inside the city and should not have been sent to court," she said.

Doan said she has always been in favor of assisted living and it's just unfortunate that assisted living is what was proposed.

"The fight was not about assisted living, the fight was about a commercial enterprise inside a residential zone," she said.

Doan said the proposed facility is a higher density than allowed in a multi-family zone and a special permit would be needed to build whether the facility was assisted living or an apartment complex.

She said the proposed facility is too large for the multi-family zone even if it were just apartments.

"I think assisted living is a wonderful concept," she said. "I think it's a wonderful alternative for our aging population, it's just the placement."

Second Ward Incumbent Karen I. Campbell said assisted living is needed in the area, but not necessarily directly in Charlevoix.

Campbell said the entire situation could have been handled out of court, but the city caters to developers.

"It just drives me crazy because they're so in love with those developers," she said.

Campbell said there is a need for more property to build houses on and some of that residential property is now taken up with a commercial enterprise.

The city council and some citizens, Campbell said, didn't want the facility where it is located now.

Campbell said the argument wasn't about assisted living, but about having a commercial enterprise in a residential district, which could in turn be used as a precedent for future commercial building in residential areas.

Campbell said there will be noise factors that come into play with the delivering of food, linens and other services such as garbage pickup.

"It's not my favorite subject," she said. "I didn't agree with it."

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell did not return phone calls by press time.

Third Ward Incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said there is a need for assisted living in the community and the issue should have been handled out of court.

Chamberlain said he had to abstain from voting on any decisions regarding the issue going to court or not going to court because Charlevoix resident and Realtor Ed Amick, who owned the property, was a client of his.

Assisted living facility hot topic for council

In his personal opinion, Chamberlain said there should have been some negotiations on the property and location and the number one mistake made was not having a public hearing.

Chamberlain said the mayor and several council members were too busy trying to please the residents near the facility that they didn't fully research the issue, which would have given them the answer.

"What this court case proved is the fact that council members should base decisions on facts and not conjecture, because when you get into the city's Master Plan and Zoning Ordinance it points you to the correct answer," he said.

The Master Plan from 1982, Chamberlain said, states a need for senior housing in the community and calls for the proposed property to be medium density housing.

"To sit there and limit that property to low density housing wouldn't be consistant with the Master Plan."

Not everyone can be pleased in an issue like this, Chamberlain said, but by not allowing the assisted living facility, the city would not have addressed a community need.

Chamberlain said the issue is something the Planning Commission and Zoning Board of Appeals can find a place for in order to avoid future battles and wasting more money.

"I would prefer to spend that money on productive things and not lawyers," he said. "I'm tired of paying lawyers."

Candidate Dave Scott said he thinks there is a need for an assisted living facility in Charlevoix, but he doesn't agree with everything involved in bringing it here.

Scott said as the baby boomer group ages, there will be a need to take care of them as a community. However, the entire situation could have been handled out of court.

"But people do have the right to sue if they're unhappy with the decisions the city makes," he said.

The real reason behind the issue wasn't about whether or not the people of Charlevoix wanted an assisted living facility, Scott said, but whether or not the site chosen was appropriate.

"Property owners have a right to see that their district remains a residential community," he said.

For Scott, the issue has two parts that are equally important.

For one, he said he understands why the property owners and developers would want relief through the court system. But what he doesn't understand is why the planning commissioners took it upon themselves to engage in legal actions against the city and then turn around and ask the city to pay for it. The planning commissioners were reimbursed for an attorney they hired to fight their firing by the mayor.

Scott said the commissioners had every right to hire an attorney and as individuals sue the city, but they should have asked for approval in advance.

"It's like someone asking for approval for something after they already spent the money," he said.

Scott said the other mistake that occurred was when the city council, not Mayor Gabe Campbell, voted in approval to pay the legal fees of the planning commissioners.

"Taxpayers paid for that," he said.

The other part of the issue that Scott has concern for is whether or not the city put up an effective defense in that case.

Scott said the only witness called by the city was City Planner Gerry Harsch, who testified against the city.

"It almost appeared as for some reason we wanted to lose," Scott said.

Scott said the court case may weaken future decisions, but doesn't know whether or not it will be used as precedent to allow someone else to come in and build in an area not zoned for the intended use.

"It's never a good thing when city decisions are reversed by a court," he said.

Mayoral candidates discuss assisted living

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

With the Nov. 2 elections drawing near, mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson look closely at issues such as assisted living.

Charlevoix recently went to court over a planned assisted living facility on the north side. A circuit court judge ruled that the facility could be built. During the build up to this court case, city council voted to not allow a public hearing on the matter, but the planning commission planned one anyway.

This lead to the firing of several planning commission members, who retained their seats after sending the matter to the Zoning Board of Appeals, as was suggested by the city manager, and eliminating the planned public hearing. But, the Zoning Board of Appeals ruled the planned assisted living facility did not fall within the ordinance for its proposed area — on the north side, in a residential area. Therefore, Sunnybank filed suit in circuit court.

Incumbent Campbell said he thinks there is a need for assisted living in the area, but not necessarily in the city.

During the court proceedings, Campbell said the developers stated that the facility was going to be open to the elderly in Boyne City, East Jordan and the surrounding townships and thus it could have been placed elsewhere.

"I have nothing against assisted living here," he said. "But I think putting it with an outlet to a highway for elderly people is a disaster."

However, since it's already here, Campbell said the focus should be on making it work for where it is.

"As far as I'm concerned, they're building it so we might as well support it," he said.

Campbell said he has been getting blamed for the money spent on the court proceedings when it was the city council that voted on it. The mayor doesn't vote unless there is a tie.

"I think the whole situation could have been handled if the administration handled it better," he said.

Campbell said there were other locations available on the south side of town at the intersection of M-66 and US-31 and also where the proposed Wal-Mart was going to be. The R-1 and R-2 areas are meant for housing, Campbell said, and not commercial entities.

"I think they started from the get go putting it where they wanted it and the reason was not for the need of assisted living," he said. "The reason was for selling the property."

Campbell said the developers went overboard when they said that assisted living is not a commercial enterprise.

"I don't mind people disagreeing with me, but I get really upset when they think they can tell me anything and I'll believe it," he said.

Campbell said he is also very offended that the key witness against the city was City Planner Gerry Harsch, who testified in favor of the developers.

Despite the outcome, Campbell said 33rd Circuit Court Judge Richard M. Pajtas is a fair person and he has nothing but admiration for him.

"But it's done," he said. "Now it's our job to do what we can to make it work."

Candidate Carlson said there is a need for assisted living and to have a facility close to the city would be nice.

Carlson said he hates to think of his parents living farther away and not in the immediate location should they ever need assisted living.

The entire situation could have been handled out of court, Carlson said.

"I think if they would have listened to the advice of the City Attorney (Jim Young) at the public hearing, we would have avoided the thousands of dollars that were spent on attorney fees," he said.

Carlson said he hopes the case won't set a precedent and he respects Judge Pajtas' decision.

"It was unfortunate we didn't have an ordinance to help direct the location of elderly housing," he said.

Carlson said the people who were against the facility weren't against assisted living, but didn't want a commercial entity in their backyard.

"There's a need for it in our community," he said. "But where it goes is a question for the planning commission and the courts."

Carlson said it's unfortunate for those people who didn't want the facility in their neighborhood, but he's glad to see there will be an assisted living facility for the elderly in the community.

Carlson said he wanted to see assisted living in the community, but didn't care where it was placed.

"It's unfortunate the way things turned out the way they did for the people in the neighborhood that were against having elderly housing next door," he said. "But hopefully, we'll learn from the past and not let history repeat itself by adopting an ordinance that would help direct the location of elderly housing in the future."

Flu vaccine shortage announced in area

A shortage of flu vaccine has many people in northern Michigan wondering if they will get their flu shot this season.

"Some local physicians' offices and health clinics have received their orders for flu vaccine," said Patricia Fralick, director of Family Health for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the health department that serves Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego Counties. "We're suggesting people only call their physician to schedule an appointment for a flu shot if they fall into one of the 'high risk' categories for contracting the flu or developing complications from the flu. Unless you are considered 'high risk,' please do not call your physician for a flu shot. We have to save flu vaccine for the people who need it most. Healthy adults have to skip a flu shot this year.

Since it announced the worldwide flu vaccine shortage earlier this week, the US Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention issued new recommendations on who should be vaccinated against the flu. Only people who fall in a "high-risk" category for contracting the flu or developing complications from the flu will receive a flu shot.

According to the CDC, the priority groups for vaccination are:

- All children 6 months to 23 months old
- Adults age 65 and older
- Anyone age 2 to 64 with an underlying chronic medical condition
- All women who will be pregnant during the flu season
- Residents of nursing homes and long-term care facilities
- Children 6 months to 18 years old on chronic aspirin therapy
- Healthcare workers with direct patient care
- Out-of-home caregivers and household contacts of children less than 6 months old.

There are just two manufacturers of flu vaccine in the world, each producing about half of the supply needed. Many hospitals, health centers and pharmacies learned this week that their orders for flu vaccines will not be filled due to production problems from one supplier, Chiron Corporation, in England.

The flu vaccine that is available is from Aventis Pasteur, the other flu vaccine supplier.

Influenza, commonly called "the flu," is caused by the influenza virus which infects the nose, throat and lungs. Unlike many other viral respiratory infections, such as the common cold, the flu causes severe illness and life-threatening complications in many people.

Symptoms of the flu include fever, headache, extreme tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose and muscle aches. Children can have additional symptoms such as nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, but these symptoms are uncommon in adults.

With the flu vaccine shortage, it is more important than ever to practice good health habits to avoid getting the flu. Just covering your mouth and nose when coughing and sneezing and cleaning your hands often can stop the spread of flu, according the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) & Prevention.

"The flu spreads quickly when people who are infected cough or sneeze, sending germs through the air and on the mouth or nose of someone nearby," said Fralick. "Sometimes the flu is spread when people touch flu germs left on a surface like a desk and then touch their eyes, mouth, or nose before they wash their hands. Some viruses and bacteria can live up to two hours on surfaces like cafeteria tables and door knobs."

Good health habits to prevent the flu and other diseases are to:

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick. When you are sick, keep your distance from others to protect them from getting sick too.
- Stay home when you are sick. Stay home from work, school, and errands when you are sick. You will prevent others from catching your illness.
- Cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing. Cover your mouth and nose with a tissue when coughing or sneezing and then throw the tissue away. If you don't have a tissue, cough or sneeze into your upper sleeve, not into your hands.
- Clean your hands. Washing your hands often will help protect you from germs. When soap and water is unavailable, alcohol-based disposable hand wipes or gel sanitizers will kill the germs on your hands.

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency is the local health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego Counties. Its staff is dedicated to preventing disease and injury and promoting healthy communities. For additional information about flu vaccines or the flu vaccine shortage, visit www.nwhealth.org or www.cdc.gov.

Board claims Winkjer didn't meet qualifications

gram that would lead to full certification by the end of the 2005-2006 school year.

Saginaw Valley State University also stated that federal law through No Child Left Behind and the Michigan Department of Education are enforcing the certification and qualification of teachers and administrators.

Winkjer said Saginaw Valley State University had no problem with him as interim administrator or as a teacher due to the "crisis" nature the school was in, and wants to know when they created these requirements and if the other 12 schools they sponsor are to uphold them as well.

Winkjer's certification had been expired for a year, but instead of rushing out and enrolling in a program for a degree he didn't truly desire, Winkjer said he waited until a program in educational technology opened.

The school board was aware of this, Winkjer said, and was OK with him teaching and administrating until he could officially be accepted into the Michigan State University program in October.

Hagen said the board was aware of this, but couldn't keep him on board because he wasn't certified and the school risked the loss of federal funding.

"He did not fit the requirements so he needed to be let go," Hagen said.

Winkjer said there aren't any requirements for administrators under No Child Left Behind and the school wouldn't have lost funding.

Jonathan Winkjer

"The idea of losing federal funding is a convenient excuse as far as I am concerned and it's not the best for the school," Winkjer said.

Hagen said the board was mislead by Winkjer's application and didn't know his certification had expired until recently when they did their own research.

Hagen said the board didn't agree with the way Winkjer had filled out his application and said it lacked a notary signature.

"He presented himself, along with the staff, that he'd be willing and able to be administrator of the school," Hagen said.

Winkjer said a Charter school doesn't have a union, but the staff worked well together and collectively decided he should take over as interim administrator until a person could be found to fill the position permanently.

"Perhaps the board didn't like the feeling that there was some kind of organization," he said.

Winkjer said he never thought the position was permanent and since the school was in a chaotic state at the beginning of the year, he said it seemed like a good idea to promote from within.

His dismissal seems personal to him.

"There must be some reason because it doesn't seem best suited for the students and the school in general," Winkjer said.

He said his only concern is for the students and parents who need to be more involved.

"If something is to be gained from this turmoil,it is that they need to be more involved," he said.

Hagen said the school board was following the guidelines set forth by No Child Left Behind and the requirements from Saginaw Valley State University.

"I believe the school board was handling it the best they could," he said.

Winkjer said he is currently looking to finish his master's in education and continuing his teaching position at North Central Michigan College as a computer technology instructor, which he has done for six or seven years. He is also going to continue with his computer network freelance work.

the library as the center of community activities and meetings and one priority is to hold a forum for candidates," she said.

After all is said and done, Heise said people will have heard first hand what the candidates have to say and what questions other citizens may have.

"I hope they will have a better idea of who they intend to vote for," she said.

The public can meet mayoral incumbent Gabe Campbell and mayoral candidate Norman "Boogie" Carlson. In attendance will also be Kevin Elsenheimer, the Republican candidate for the 105th District, and Jim McKimmy, the Democratic candidate for the 105th District.

All of the candidates for City Council have been invited to come and introduce themselves and state why they are running, but won't be involved in the questioning.

Mediating the event will be Toni Felter along with Anne Marie Conway, Charlevoix High School government teacher, and Conway's government class who will be assisting the Friends of the Library.

MAYOR CAMPBELL

ISSUE	ACTION	RESULT
Open Government/ Senior Housing →	Mayor Campbell casts tie-breaking vote to deny public hearing regarding Senior housing. City then fails to adopt ordinance permitting Senior housing. →	City loses Circuit Court lawsuit as permanent injunction is issued which prohibits City from interfering with construction of Senior housing facility. Judgment confirms finding which City could have made at the requested public hearing, that a "demonstrated need" for Senior housing exists.
Cooperation Between City Boards →	Mayor Campbell hastily announces his firing of five Planning Commissioners after they support public hearing regarding Senior housing. →	Since his rash decision lacked merit, the Mayor fails to conclude required legal procedure to remove the five Planning Commissioners that he had claimed to "fire." All five Planning Commissioners continued to serve their term of office.

COST

Taxpayers' money is wasted on $25,000 in attorney fees paid to defend indefensible positions. Valuable staff time is consumed trying to salvage the Mayor's flawed decisions, and is diverted away from productive tasks at hand.

Candidate for city council faces several large tax liens

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

A city council candidate who has made fiscal responsibility a part of his campaign is having financial problems of his own.

According to documents given to the Charlevoix Courier, Charlevoix City Council candidate Dave Scott has several state and federal liens out against his company Third Coast Communications, also called Michigan Talk Radio Network, totaling over $200,000.

According to the information, which was federal and state lien paperwork, Scott's company has been behind on its withholding tax since December 2002. Scott said this new company has been having some financial troubles, but he is taking care of it.

"Like many other businesses, the Michigan Talk Radio Network was hurt by Sept. 11. Advertising took a hit and as a new company it had a more profound impact on us than others in our business. It was unexpected, yet we are recovering, with more revenue, advertisers and listeners. I am working diligently to resolve these matters and believe we have a bright future," he said in a written statement.

The paperwork was given to the Charlevoix Courier by Charlevoix resident John Winn. Winn said he received the paperwork in an unsigned envelope through the mail and does not know who it came from. The only other thing with the paperwork was a note telling Winn to "do with it what (he) pleases."

Winn pointed out lien information is a part of the public record.

Scott said, what happened was, the company was completing its federal tax paperwork wrong and did not realize it. By the time he did, he discovered the company owed over $200,000 to the federal government in withholding taxes.

He said he has already started paying this debt to the Internal Revenue Service.

"I just sent a check out to the IRS today. We are working on these things," he said. "We are making great progress."

This is not the first time Scott has been behind on his taxes. Scott said he was also behind on his company's city taxes for a period, but he took care of the matter, just as he will take care of this.

Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi confirmed Scott's company did owe some city taxes, but he is caught up to date.

Charlevoix grad living, traveling her dream

With her adventurous nature and global connections, former Charlevoix resident Rebecca Chamberlain-Creanga is traveling to an unrecognized region to continue her research.

Chamberlain-Creanga, 27, will be going to a region within the Republic of Moldova. She said the region, known as Transdniestria, is not recognized by any country in the world.

Rebecca Chamberlain-Creanga

Going into an area without guaranteed protection or established diplomatic links makes Chamberlain-Creanga nervous.

"The situation being that it's a tense place," she said.

Chamberlain-Creanga has diplomatic links, but said the United States Embassy advises not to go to the region and can't guarantee her safety.

"It's a region known not to abide by human right's standards," she said.

Chamberlain-Creanga will be researching at a cement factory that has women as 40 percent of its workers for her doctorate work in anthropology. She said Transdniestria still thinks of itself as a part of the Soviet Union in terms of identity. Her focus is on ethnicity and industry and she will be investigating what entity people identify with and how industry was used to create that identity.

She speaks decent Romanian, is currently learning Russian and can still speak Serbian-Croatian from when she went there as a part of her independent studies. However, she is nervous about having to work with two languages: Romanian and Russian.

Transdniestria thinks of itself as its own country, but this sovereign territory of Moldova still has a Russian presence, which Chamberlain-Creanga said is left over from when the Soviet Union was in power.

The Russian troops had signed an agreement with NATO stating they would leave by 2003, but they're still there. Chamberlain-Creanga said Russia wants to include this region as a balance of power against NATO, and Romania,

Correction

In the Oct. 13 edition of the Charlevoix Courier, in the article about the administrator being let go from Northwest Academy, it was stated that Steve Bennett was also let go. Bennett was not fired, but was temporarily suspended because the school board said they needed to see his certification papers before he could continue as a substitute. Bennett was not made aware of this before he was temporarily suspended. After he turned in the paperwork, Bennett said School Board President John Hagen told him he could return to work. Bennett said he wouldn't continue working without a verbal apology from the board and chose to leave Northwest Academy.

LaBlance honored by Crooked Tree Arts Center

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Marina LaBlance, music educator at Charlevoix Elementary School, recently received an eddi Award for her dedication to the arts and education during the Fourth Annual eddi Awards on Sept. 17.

LaBlance has been teaching for 32 years and believes strongly in the benefit of the arts in a child's education and development.

"I believe the arts touch and change our lives opening our hearts and minds to all kinds of possibilities," she said in part of her acceptance of the award.

LaBlance and the other nine participants, were recognized for their role in promoting the arts in Emmet and Charlevoix counties.

The awards are in honor of the late eddi Wrigley-Offield, who dedicated her life to the arts in northern Michigan.

The event took place in the Ross Stoakes Theatre at the Crooked Tree Arts Center, and it's the first time the awards occurred at the Center.

"It was quite an honor," she said. "It just makes me feel that what I do is worthy and that it is important for the children."

During her acceptance speech, LaBlance quoted Elliot Eisner, a leader in arts education and a professor of Education and Art at Stanford University.

Quoting Eisner, LaBlance said, "A school's mission is wider than learning how to make a living, it is a place where students can learn how to make a life. Those who would send schools back to the basics set their standards much too low. The logic of language, the structures of mathematics, the conclusions of science give us distinct perspective, but they do not exhaust what we know, what we can imagine, or what we can feel. The arts are among the important ways we remake ourselves."

LaBlance said it's her passion for what she does and her love for the children that has kept her teaching music for all these years. Being a music educator isn't just a job, she said, but it is a part of who she is.

She takes her passion for music and knowledge of various forms in order to set the framework for the education of her students.

"My job is to give my children a little bit of experience to all kinds of music," she said.

Music and art at the elementary level is important, LaBlance said, because that is where children are exposed to all forms of art and music that are out there in the world and it helps to create an interest in the arts.

Statistics show that children who are exposed to music, especially classical music, at a younger age score higher on tests and have a better self image and self esteem than those who aren't, LaBlance said.

LaBlance said Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart was not only a musical genius, but a mathematical one as well.

Mozart's Effect, which involves how music can help a person in health, education and well-being, documents how instrumental classical music can be in a child's development.

"Statistics show how if children are exposed at an early age that develops a part of the brain that normally wouldn't ever develop," she said.

LaBlance teaches kindergarten through fourth grade. She said she truly believes that art and music bring together the whole child and enables them to connect what they learn in other academic areas because music involves math, geometry, science and reading.

"A lot of the time people think it's a frill or an extra thing, but really it's an intricate part of the curriculum," LaBlance said.

Creating an interest in the arts through music helps make the children feel good about themselves and music, LaBlance said.

LaBlance said she knows that not every child that comes through her classroom will go on to be vocalists or concert pianists professionally, but they will hopefully gain an appreciation for the arts and music.

"The interest starts at the elementary school," she said. "It's all created down here. So, it's very, very important."

LaBlance thanks the Crooked Tree Arts Council for their leadership role in the community and for National City Bank of Petoskey for their sponsorship.

'Just a thought'

Yep, the rumors are correct. I am leaving.

You probably saw the advertisements that have been running in the Courier lately, asking people interested in being a weekly newspaper editor to submit their résumés to the Charlevoix Courier. Or, maybe you heard one of the many various rumors floating around town about me departing.

The bottom line is, I am leaving. But not for a little while yet.

You see, recently, my boss, Ken Winter, made an offer to me that I could not refuse. Ken, in addition to being the newsroom mentor to me — he goes by the name publisher, but this is my nickname for him — is also the editor of the Petoskey News-Review. It seems that that newspaper had a job opening for a special sections editor and reporter and he felt I was perfect for the position. He also felt it would be a great change for me — a valuable employee who he believes does a fantastic job as a reporter.

I had told Ken a while back that I was interested in moving on in my career. At the time, I had been the editor of the Courier for three years. Now, two years later, that chance to move on has come.

So, after five years of being the editor of the Charlevoix Courier, I will be moving on up to Petoskey to take a a new job as their special sections editor. I will miss my job as editor of the Charlevoix Courier, but that is a topic for a future column when it is actually my last week.

I know, I know....I have heard the rumors. I have heard I am being forced out for "pushing the wrong people." Or I am being "silenced." Every one of those rumors are completely false.

But, if people want to believe it, go on ahead. At least I told you my version of the story. You just can't convince some people that their beliefs and the facts are a little off. Heck, some people believe there are still weapons of mass destruction in Iraq.

I am not being forced to do anything. I have been interested in moving on to a daily newspaper for a few years. Ken had a job opening at the daily newspaper that the company that owns the Courier also owns and asked me if I wanted it. I said yes. I could have said no with no repercussions.

In fact, I am still going to be covering some areas of Charlevoix and will be the back-up editor for the Courier when the new editor goes on vacation or if the company is between editors.

Sure this is coming at a time when the community is getting ready to make a choice in what is turning out to be a very competitive local, state and national election — especially local. And sure I have been taking a few hits lately — most notably when the city manager called me biased in a public memo to city council because I published a story about how some on council did not have a very good opinion of him. But, this has nothing at all to do with me moving on.

And you will notice I am still going to be around here for the election as I am not leaving for a little while yet. We still have to find a replacement for me — even if I think replacing me is an impossible task — and then I have to train this new person. Then I have to start my training in my new job. It will be an exciting time.

So I still have a lot of work to do here at the Courier before I leave. Just cleaning my desk will be a huge task, not to mention my files. I shudder when I think of all the documents and notes I have accumulated over five years.

It is just time for me to make a change in my career. Journalists are strange creatures like that. We need new challenges, new scenery and new adventures to stay sane. That is just what I am going to get with this promotion.

But, I will let you know when I am leaving as I am not going to go without saying good-bye. I just wanted to take a moment to quell the rumor mill.

I am sure the mill will be churning out something else next week. Maybe in these new rumors it will come out that I was actually an alien that had to go back to his home planet and the government was forcing me to write this column.

A side note — next week we will go over the Charlevoix City Council and mayoral candidates in this editorial space. That is if my government captors let me out in time for that issue.

May the force be with you.

Vote Beemon

Editor:

What better legacy to leave our children than clean water and a healthy environment?

I know of no one more dedicated to that idea than JoAnne Beemon. She has taken her job as Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner seriously, and has worked diligently to protect our natural environment. It is a worthy goal which many people agree with.

But, apparently, not the county commissioners. They value the job — the only elected position specifically designed to protect the environment — at $1 per year plus per diems.

No wonder greenbelts and wetlands — critical components of the ecological filtering system — are disappearing, and with them, the quality of our water.

I support JoAnne's bid for reelection as Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner, and urge others to do so.

The State Drain Code says the drain commissioner must receive an "annual salary," plus expenses, "to be paid as other county officers are paid."

I ask the county commissioners to please state publicly in the local papers, whether or not you intend on raising the salary of drain commissioner to meet state law. Please respond before Oct. 27, which is the cut-off date for adjusting the salary.

It is time to bring the office of Charlevoix County Drain Commissioner into the Twenty-first Century — where it rightfully and respectfully belongs.

Writer wants vote

Editor:

My name is JoAnne Bier Beemon. I am running for Drain Commissioner of Charlevoix County.

My top priority is protecting water quality and the public through responsible development and education. Pushing limits and cutting corners may be good for short term profits and revenues, but it is expensive to natural resources, our economy and our quality of life. Best management practices protect the land, our fisheries and keep our beaches clean.

Excess water created by human development is a liability 99.9 percent of the time. Costs of private development should not be born by neighboring property owners or by road commissions with limited resources or by the degradation of our lakes and streams. Every builder and developer is responsible for containing any excess runoff created by their development on their own site. While a lower elevation property owner must accept surface storm water in its natural flow, the upper estate may not increase or concentrate the flow of water.

The quality of our lives is rooted in the quality of our water. We must move away from discharge of stormwater and wastewater to our streams, rivers and lakes. Our economy and property values are dependent on healthy natural resources. I am committed to protecting water

Thank you

Editor:

Just a small note of appreciation for the many years of outstanding service to our community by city electrical supervisor Ed Whitley. As Ed retires soon, the city will be losing one of its greatest assets. Tireless, helpful and always positive, Ed has solved our problems and implemented significant improvements to our electrical and water infrastructure. Ed has provided leadership but also takes his turn climbing the pole, quite often in nasty weather and more often than not, in the dark or on a weekend. It has been comforting for our residents to know that under Ed's watch, power is has always been restored.

One of the ones who make Charlevoix special, he will be difficult to replace. We wish him well and look forward to seeing him in his new endeavors.

Vote for pool

Editor:

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool is a true community resource, because its activities advance the health, safety and welfare of the community.

The pool board is asking for modest tax, because the current sources of income (gifts, grants, fees) aren't keeping up with the cost of maintaining the pool's 80-plus hours per week level of activity. In addition to wages, energy and chemical costs, there are needed improvements and repairs as the building ages.

While gift giving has remained strong, some matching grants are expiring, and the pool board has wanted to keep fees affordable.

A number of years ago, when the plan for a community pool was first brought forward, Charlevoix voters were asked to approve a large millage to construct and maintain a full-sized pool. This ballot initiative was defeated.

Adopting a can-do attitude, the pool board then said we will build a somewhat smaller pool and get it up and running without using tax money. This has been done.

Now, the hour for deciding the future direction of the Charlevoix Area Community Pool has arrived. Vote yes for the pool. Vote yes and keep the community programs running.

Is prosecutor in office?

Editor:

Who's running our Charlevoix Prosecuting office?

After reading your current article regarding Mary Beth Kur joining a new law firm in Petoskey, I would like to know who is in charge of the current prosecuting position in Charlevoix? My understanding is that this position is effective until Jan. 1, 2005 when the newly elected prosecuting attorney will be sworn in to take office. If she is currently receiving a salary of $85,000 a year is she not responsible to act in this position full-time until the end of the year and/or until the new prosecuting attorney takes office?

I am certain that the newly elected prosecuting attorney will be available on a full-time basis which this position requires. Perhaps that is why she is proposing to reduce the salary from $85,000 per year to a recommendation of $55,000. Could it be possible that we are only receiving her services part-time as she is working in another office in Petoskey?

A concerned tax paying citizen of Charlevoix County.

Vote for pool

Editor:

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool is a tremendous resource for our whole area.

Our family has benefited from the aqua therapy for both Bob and Noreen. Our son Matt enjoyed swimming with his class when he attended CharEm Community Based Program. Matt and his brother Paul both have been swimming weekly for the past two years in preparation for Special Olympics, with great success.

My husband I have volunteered to assist CharEm classes and seen the sheer delight on the faces of children with multiple impairments as they move more freely in the water.

We encourage those citizens who can vote on the mileage to vote yes. As residents of Banks Township we will "vote" with a check for several times the amount we would be assessed if we lived in Charlevoix Township.

Please support this valuable resource

Get rid of cowboy

Editor:

The federal government needs a reality check! Our president still thinks that the nuclear threat will come from ICBMs (Intercontinental Ballistic Missiles) when everyone else knows it will come from a backpack with a dirty bomb.

So the solution, is that he spends billions ($60 billion and still counting) deploying Regan's "Star Wars" defense system which has failed eight out of 10 times. He then brags about rejecting the International Criminal Court, the Kyoto Accords and the treaty banning land mines. We can do better without this arrogant cowboy in the White House.

Vote Beemon

Editor:

We are writing to ask Charlevoix County voters to vote for JoAnne Beemon for County Drain Commissioner.

JoAnne has shown her dedication to protecting the waters of Charlevoix County. She is a very hard worker who donates many hours of her time educating herself on the best practices of water and drain management.

She assures that the best environmental practices mandated by law are included in development plans.

JoAnne is very knowledgeable about the Drain Commissioner's legislated responsibilities.

The duties and powers of the drain commissioner are clearly defined in Drain Code Act 40 (1956) , Lake Improvement Act - Part 309 of Act 451(1994) , Inland Lake Level Act - part 307 of Act 451(1994), Land Division Act 591(1996), Erosion and Sedimentation Control - Part 91 of Act 451(1994), the Clean Water Act - Phase II and several more acts.

She is very concerned about the pollution of Round Lake, Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan by the pollutants in surface water runoff which go into our lakes and streams. JoAnne is a valuable asset to Charlevoix County. She deserves our votes on Nov. 2.

WE Agree On A Rayder victory

Charlevoix's streets were crowded with floats made by high school students Friday during the annual Homecoming Parade. Each class made their own float for the festivities. (Right) The Senior Class of 2005 topped off their float by showing that the disputing Presidential candidates, George Bush and John Kerry, can agree on at least one thing: A Rayder Victory!

Tribe gives out grants

The Grand Traverse Band of Ottawa and Chippewa Indians recently gave $11,384.58 to the Charlevoix Public Library, $30,000 to the Charlevoix Public School's Title Seven Program and $10,000 to the Charlevoix Senior Center. This money was given as part of the tribe's twice a year 2 percent gaming revenue allocations to local units of government.

Corley causes donation

Jerry L. Corley, a retiree living in Charlevoix, performed more than 500 hours of volunteer service over the past year with Top of Michigan Trails Council. Because of this, the organization he worked with was awarded $225 for preliminary engineering work for a Boyne City/Charlevoix trail by Consumers Power.

David W. Bussler, Sr., of Williamsburg, Mass., formerly of Ellsworth, East Jordan and Charlevoix, died peacefully Sunday morning, Oct. 10, 2004 at the home of his son, following a day's foliage tour in Vermont and Thanksgiving dinner with his children and grandchildren.

Mr. Bussler worked for many years as a heavy equipment operator in road construction. He also built garages at various locations as well as a house on Grand Traverse Bay. He built the stairway at the Ellsworth Christian Reformed Church where he was a member. He enjoyed travel, visiting friends and playing cards.

Surviving are his children Larry (Christie) Bussler of Greenfield, Mass., David (Anne) Bussler Jr. of Haydenville, Mass., and Gloria VanAartson of Middleville; brothers Thomas Russell of Cadillac, William Russell of Boyne City, and Guy (Irene) Russell of East Jordan; 10 grandchildren; two great-grandchildren; a sister-in-law Ella Hoffman of Charlevoix; nieces and nephews.

Students creating arboretum

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

One teacher is taking a class project and turning it into something the entire community can use.

Tim Volovsek, chemistry and physics teacher at Charlevoix High School, is currently working on an arboretum that will house species of grass and trees that are native to Michigan.

"It's a valuable educational tool that will economically impact our school district," he said.

Volovsek, along with his Science and Life class, are making this idea a reality, but the arboretum will be open for community use as well as that of other classes.

The arboretum has a trail half a mile long and intersects some of the cross country trails. Volovsek said it is between two and five acres.

The Science and Life students did the research and discovered what trees, shrubs and grasses are already present and what they will need to complete the arboretum.

Volovsek said the idea is to group different species together and label them so people can not only walk through and enjoy the beauty, but also learn how to differentiate what grows in Michigan.

Volovsek said the project is economically sound because it is getting help through volunteerism and donations, such as a grant written by his Science and Life class, who will also be incharge of maintaining the arboretum.

Volovsek said the first phase of laying out walk ways and putting up signs to designate what is already there can be completed by the end of school next June.

"Hopefully it will be usable next summer," he said.

George DeBoe, 17, a student in Volovsek's Science in Life class helped lay the cedar bark on Oct. 12. He said the project allows students to learn by hands on experience and not just through pictures in a book.

Cindy Brooks, teacher's aide, said about 40-45 students are involved in the project.

"Make this a community thing, not just a student thing," she said.

Zandra Gardner, 16, said she thinks it adds a really cool new atmosphere for people to enjoy.

"It give kids who need to be hands on a change to learn better," she said. "Instead of being cooped up in a classroom you can be outside."

Grant Newcomb, 17, agrees.

"I think it's good because it'll bring people out here and have a nice nature walk," he said.

Charissa Kniseley, 17, said it's a good addition that will make the school look better.

"It's a really good learning experience for the students working on it," she said in regards to all the research the students did to make the project a reality.

Mother concerned about bus stop safety

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With the weather changing and winter drawing near, are children in danger when walking home from school on a road without sidewalks?

Charlevoix resident Stephanie Brown brought her concern for her son's safety when coming home from school and for other children who walk along busy roads such as Marion Center and Loeb roads to the attention of the school board during the Oct. 11 meeting.

"I'd like the board to review the policy for the safety of the children," she said during the meeting.

Brown said her son is currently walking approximately one-tenth of a mile when he is dropped off at the bus stop after school. She said the distance isn't that far, but a child could be hurt or killed since there isn't a safe place for them to walk on Marion Center Road specifically.

School board policy states that a student in elementary school may be required to walk up to a half of a mile to a bus stop and a middle and high school students may be required to walk up to one mile.

Brown said during the meeting that her concern isn't over the distance, but the environment her son is walking in.

She said the coming winter causes the snow to bank along the edges of the road leaving less space for children to walk since there aren't any sidewalks.

Brown said she doesn't want special attention to be given to her child, but rather would like to see the school board revise their policy to ensure the students aren't put in harm's way.

Her son is currently picked up at the end of the driveway before school, but not dropped back off there afterward. Brown said she was told by Transportation Supervisor Gordon C. Russell that the bus runs on a tight schedule and it would take too long to drop him off after school.

Russell, who has been the transportation supervisor for 18 years, said he upholds the policies set forth by the school board and knows that no child is walking a half of a mile or a mile to get to the bus stop.

He said in order to pick that particular child up in the morning, it requires the driver to go a little over one-fourth of a mile to turn around because the child's driveway is too small.

Russell said the Charlevoix School District isn't doing anything different from other districts in regards to bussing.

"We do the best we can and try to serve the majority of people that need us," he said.

There haven't been any accidents, Russell said, but there is always that danger. He said the danger is just as real for those students who walk in town.

"We're not purposefully trying to put children in harm's way," he said.

Russell said he looked at the particular bus stop in question and, along with Superintendent John Sturock, decided the distance wasn't unreasonable when compared to other places in the district.

"Do the best to please as many as you can," he said. "You would like to please everyone but sometimes you can't."

Russell said the bus picks up the student in the morning because it's dark out, but drops him off at the bus stop in the afternoon because it's light out and he's going straight home.

However, Liz Neblett, spokesperson for NHTSA, said while school buses are probably the safest mode of transportation, the danger lies in getting to and from the school bus.

According to information from the National Center for Statistics and Analysis of the National Highway Traffic Study Association, more student pedestrians are killed during daylight hours when coming home from school. It states that 38 percent of the fatalities occurred between the hours of 3 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The information also states that an average of 22 school-age pedestrians (younger than 19 years old) die each year in school-bus related crashes, with six as school bus occupants and 16 as pedestrians.

From 1993-2003 an average of 27 school-age pedestrians were killed, with a total of 26 students in 2003.

The NCSA also states that 191 school-age children have been killed since 1993 in school-bus related crashes.

The NCSA defines a school transportation-related crash as "a crash which involves, either directly or indirectly, a school bus body vehicle, or a non-school bus functioning as a school bus, transporting children to or from school or school related activities."

School Board President Dennis Halverson, said there haven't been any problems in the past and this is the first time he can recall a specific issue like this being brought up.

During the meeting, Halverson said the school board doesn't have enough experience as Russell to examine individual bus stops. He said he doesn't want to overstep department heads.

"I would be really reluctant to override his direction on things like this," he said.

Halverson said Russell has safety as his number one issue and thinks the current operation is consistent with how that street has been operated before.

"We rely heavily on the transportation department doing the best they can," he said.

Halverson said the whole operation of the school buses is a fluid function because the needs change and new houses are built in areas that were once not serviced by the busses.

Halverson said there are occasionally violators who drive around a stopped school bus, but usually people respect the school bus and stop.

Do the council candidates want a change?

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

As the Nov. 2 elections draw near, City Council candidates take a close look at what is going on in the city and whether or not a change is needed at City Hall.

First Ward incumbent Bill Haggard said he thinks City Hall is fairly good.

"I don't know what changes I'd want to make right now," he said.

Haggard said one thing that could be improved upon is the timeliness in which City Council is informed on issues affecting the city.

"I don't see what you could really change," he said.

Haggard said attitude works both ways and if all members of City Hall and City Council and anyone else involved work together in a polite manner, more things could be accomplished.

As far as he is concerned, Haggard said the city runs efficiently.

"I don't see a need for a drastic change," he said.

As long as everyone works together, Haggard said things can be accomplished more easily than when everyone is butting heads.

Candidate Rebecca Doan wouldn't comment on whether or not a change was needed at City Hall due to personal reasons, but said a change is needed in communication.

"What I'd like to see is department heads bring a monthly statement before council," she said.

The statement doesn't have to be long. She said the statement can be one page as long as it states a general review of accountabilities and the goals that are to be accomplished that month.

As far as City Hall goes, the statements are what Doan would like to see in order to keep the City Council up-to-date monthly.

Second Ward incumbent Karen I. Campbell said her constituents are not happy with the current makeup of the administration at City Hall.

Campbell said the current administration is pushing certain candidates in order to prevent council from being able to cast the four votes needed to remove the administration.

"I think they're hoping it can go the other way and they can stay there their whole lives," she said.

If a change is made and people are removed, Campbell said there would be a need to hire new people for all the administrative positions.

"The town people don't want them in there," she said. "Think they run the town and let developers do what they want."

Campbell said at least that's what it looks like with condominiums going up all the time.

"What's the sense in having a lake if you can't see it?" she said.

Hopefully, she said, the new people would be recruited from town and promoted from within and not brought in from the outside.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell said he is satisfied with the current makeup of City Hall and doesn't see a need for a change in personnel..

"When I was there I had no problem with personnel," he said. "I think they all did a great job."

Russell was on City Council from 1987 to 1998 and then served as mayor from 1998 to 2002 and in all that time he said he always thought things ran efficiently.

"I didn't see any problems when I was in office," he said.

With the new facility, Russell said things should run even more efficiently.

Third Ward incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said a change is needed in relationships, not people.

"I don't think there should be a change, but I think City Council should be more active in developing a relationship with the department heads," he said.

Chamberlain said the city manager should bring all department heads to the first meeting of the year. That way, City Council could coordinate the goals they set with both the city manager and the department heads.

"By having a closer relationship with the department heads, we can communicate better with our constituents," he said.

A change in personnel will come through the natural progression of retirement and Chamberlain said the next person to take over for current City Manager Michael Wiesner will be hired to address the city's changing needs.

ELECTION 2004

Chamberlain said when Wiesner was hired in the early 80s, he was brought on board to take care of the infrastructure problems afflicting the city.

The ideas presented in the 1982 Master Plan were implemented by Wiesner, and Chamberlain said he has done a good job doing what the people of Charlevoix want according to the Master Plan.

"We're fortunate to have a stable staff at City Hall," he said.

Over time, Chamberlain said things have been running smoothly, but he hasn't been happy recently with the Wastewater Treatment Plant and CCMS check. However, instances such as this are not a reason to change employees.

What type of change do council hopefuls want

"I'm not one to judge employees based on one action," he said. "I look at total commitment to the city."

Candidate Dave Scott said there are some problems at City Hall, but the change that needs to be made is in the City Council.

He said the problems the city is facing are ultimately the responsibility of the City Council.

"I think the current City Council has not done an effective job of oversight," he said.

Scott said it's through the City Council the public can have a real direct effect upon because they answer to the people who voted them in.

"The big change is that we need to follow the City Charter," he said.

Following the Charter, Scott said, would mean that the city manager answers to the City Council, who in turn answers to the voters.

However, the city is currently being run backward, Scott said, because City Manager Michael Wiesner seems to run things and he's not accountable to the voters.

Scott said it doesn't mean Wiesner is a bad person, it just means that the City Council isn't doing their job and should be more actively involved in what is going on in the city and understand what is happening at City Hall.

"It's easy when we're having problems with sewage, checks and no-bid contracts to make it personal and assign personal blame," he said. "But if you're looking to lay blame, look at the makeup of the current City Council."

He said they rubber-stamp everything, especially Chamberlain.

"This guy approved every single funding request in the city for the last year-and-a-half," he said.

He said the number one issue most people have is that when they call City Hall with a complaint, nothing gets done.

"If you have a beef with the city, you should be able to go to City Hall and fill out a complaint form and have someone respond to it," he said. "Here in Charlevoix, I had the door slammed in my face."

Is change in city business in the future for next mayor?

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With the elections closer than ever, the heat is on for candidates to show the public what they think of issues facing the city.

Mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson look into the issue of whether or not there needs to be a change at City Hall in light of the mistakes made recently.

Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

Incumbent Campbell said he thinks there should be a change, but that change could be in personnel, attitude or the way business is conducted.

"I don't like being kept in the dark," he said.

In order for City Council to be kept up to date on situations affecting the city, Campbell said he wants to see a monthly report issued from all the city department heads.

Campbell said City Manager Michael Wiesner doesn't like to inform City Council immediately, but prefers to wait until he has all the facts.

The City Council is elected by the people and has a right to know what's going on, Campbell said.

"I don't think we've been efficient that way," he said. "I don't think it's the staff's fault, I think it's the administration's fault for letting it happen."

Campbell said he wants an administration that openly informs the City Council on everything going on in the city.

When the Department of Environmental Quality found the previous plan for the marina not completely acceptable, Campbell said Wiesner knew for about three to four months that the DEQ was upset before he released the information to the City Council.

Campbell said Wiesner will say he has told the council everything, but really only picks out a few things to tell.

"I don't think we can operate the way we're operating," he said.

Campbell said if developers come in and want to use the city staff's time, they should pay for that time.

Also, when they come into town, Campbell said they should work step-by-step with City Council.

"I try and make it a point to tell people the truth because if you don't you're always in trouble," he said.

Campbell said he has nothing against Wiesner personally, but thinks the way things are done needs to change.

"I think he or whoever replaces him would get a lot more cooperation if he were up front and honest," he said.

Selective enforcement is something Campbell thinks is happening throughout the city. He said if something is going to be enforced or not enforced, it should be consistent all the time and with everyone, such as the yard signs stuck on city property.

"It seems to depend on whose signs they are whether or not they're removed," he said.

Overall, Campbell said the type of change that occurs depends on whether or not people can change.

"Hopefully, we can just work things for the benefit of everybody," he said.

Candidate Carlson said he thinks there is a need for a change in mayor, because he said Campbell doesn't seem to ever get along with the administration and department heads.

As far as City Hall is involved, Carlson said he thinks they did a good job in handling the Wastewater Treatment Plant

Mayoral candidates discuss change in the city situation because they let go of the department head who supervised during the time reports were falsified.

MAYORAL

"I think they did the right thing in handling that," he said.

In regard to the CCMS check, Carlson said he doesn't know for sure since there are so many different versions being said about what really happened, but based on past records of department heads he thinks they have done a good job.

Carlson said the proper channel to take would be for the City Council to direct the mayor to have a review.

"People should be accountable for what they're responsible for," he said.

However, Carlson said one can't clean house without talking to everyone involved and hearing all sides.

Carlson said as a businessman, he doesn't fire someone for making a mistake without talking to them and hearing what happened from all sides.

For the most part Carlson thinks the city has done a good job at running things, but said there is a problem with following the proper channels.

"The change that needs to be done is for people to open up communication, discuss more and work together," he said. "The only way we can get anything done in a productive manner is to work together."

Carlson said everyone includes the City Council, the mayor, the city manager and constituents.

The city manager has staff meetings every week, Carlson said, and he doesn't see why if someone from the council or the mayor couldn't sit in on it if they wanted to know what was going on.

"I don't think anyone's being kept in the dark," he said.

Carlson said the lines of communication aren't what they should be and the working relationship between everyone probably isn't where it should be.

"I just think we need to communicate more, follow procedure properly and things should work out in the end," he said.

Car hits Ironton gate

A 79-year-old Boyne City man was injured in an accident around 7:30 a.m., Oct. 11 at the Ironton Ferry.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Charles Fredrick Davis' white 1996 Lincoln struck the traffic gate on the east end of the Ironton Ferry.

The arm of the gate that raises to allow traffic to proceed was severed from the post and traffic across the ferry was halted for a couple of hours.

The accident occurred at dawn while there was a thick fog. The vehicle was seriously damaged, the airbag was activated and Davis complained of pain in his chest.

Davis was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the East Jordan Ambulance. He was wearing his seatbelt.

Students setting up native fish aquarium

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

One Charlevoix Middle School teacher is recreating the lake ecosystem in her classroom as a way to teach her students how the environment works.

Gretchen Rice is enhancing the learning environment of her students by allowing them to visually see the aquatic environment that lies in the shallow depths, around 30 feet, of Lake Charlevoix and Lake Michigan.

It will also provide a way to teach them about how to take care of the environment and establish a respect for it.

Rice's father, Chris Siegmund, provided the aquarium for the classroom.

"It's something we're doing to expand their horizons," he said.

Siegmund has been dealing with fresh and salt water aquariums all his life and will assist Rice as a guest speaker to share his knowledge with the students.

He said it will enable the students to understand how nutrients are taken into the water, used by fish and disposed of. It will also visually show them how an environment can cleanse itself.

This aquarium is designed to mimic what is found in the lakes in Michigan and only native fish will be added, such as perch, walleye and small mouth bass.

Siegmund said they are currently going through the application process for a scientific collector's permit from the Department of Environmental Quality.

"With that permit we can possess fish under the legal weight limit to put in the aquarium," he said.

Siegmund said the DNR sends pamphlets for teaching, which Rice may incorporate into her lesson plan. The permit should be granted in the next few weeks.

Siegmund's friend, Tom Foley, helped install the aquarium. He said the aquarium is not only a learning tool, but is also something calming and peaceful for the classroom.

Rice said she had the aquarium placed near her reading room, providing a wall of sorts from the rest of the classroom. She said it will allow her students to read and enjoy nature and not the other sounds in the classroom.

Rice said she has taken her class to Michigan Beach before to search for rocks to put in the aquarium. She said they are learning the process of how to prepare an aquarium for fish, but also how the fish interact with their aquatic environment.

Beemon, Seelye run for drain commissioner

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

. Incumbent JoAnne Beemon will be facing off against challenger Marc Seelye for Charlevoix County's Drain Commissioner seat in the Nov. 2 general election.

Beemon, a member of the Green Party, will be going for her second term as the drain commissioner.

JoAnne Beemon

"I think that for the first time in a real long time, people are more aware storm water is an important issue," she said about her first term. "They are real conscious that whatever they put in the drains runs into the lakes and rivers."

Marc Seelye

During this first term, Beemon advocated people watching what they put in the drains and she put out flyers informing the citizens that the drains ran into the area lakes and streams.

As for her new term, Beemon said her first goal will be to get developers to understand that they will be held accountable to keep their stormwater on their own site. She said there needs to be more control over runoff from developments, saying those who live at a lower elevation should not have to put up with increased water from a higher development.

"It really is a sort of trespass," she said.

Beemon said state statute supports this already, but it needs to be enforced more.

"Right now we are at a state where it really becomes obvious that we are not enforcing the rules of the state and it is starting to cause problems. I can take you to site after site where water is a problem," she said.

With the county not enforcing this, the problem becomes that of the estates that are at a lower elevation than the one throwing off water, because then they have to hire an attorney to solve the problem.

"People don't want to have to sue their neighbor," she said.

Therefore it is very important that the county take care of the situation before it becomes a problem, she said.

Beemon also said we need to get all of the drains in the county mapped with the help of GIS mapping. This will enable developers to know where drains are at and how water flows on a site, which will help them in planning for construction on a piece of property.

She said she has heard of cases where developers filled in historical drains on their property, not knowing they were there. Then they had trouble with water.

Beemon also said she wants to work more closely with the townships and the state — to highlight the special needs of northern areas — and wants to work toward establishing more county drains.

"We are going to have to establish county drains because the problems we have created in the past are so enormous. We will continue to have problems, such as flooded basements," she said.

Beemon has lived in Charlevoix since 1972. She has a husband, Richard, and five children, Shaan, Carrie, Sally, Maggie and Helen.

In addition to being the drain commissioner, she is a substitute teacher, director of the Children's Choir and is director of the Charlevoix Land Conservancy.

ELECTION 2004

Marc Seelye is running as a republican for the drain commissioner seat.

Seelye said he wants to help protect the county's environment.

"I will be working to uphold the stormwater ordinance and make improvements on that," he said. "There will be changes that we will need to make as we go along."

He said he is going to take a more active roll in the county, especially if we get to a situation where all storm waters must be treated before it is released — a rule that is reportedly going to be a reality soon.

Seelye said stormwater can be treated in many different ways, such as an infiltration pond or a sewage treatment facility.

Currently the storm water is not treated in Charlevoix, although some newer construction sites connected to newer storm drains are treating it.

Seelye said he is in his third year as the county's soil erosion officer and said he can be both the soil erosion officer and drain commissioner legally and practically. Before being the soil erosion officer, he was in construction for 20 years.

While in construction, he said he had to deal with a number of drainage issues, thus adding more experience with the issue to his resume.

Seelye has been a resident of Boyne City and Charlevoix County for 40 years. He is married to Cindy and has three children, Melissa, Nolan and Tess.

In his spare time he helps coach Little League in Boyne City.

Hospital's Holly Daze committee announces goals

The Charlevoix Area Hospital Foundation Holly Daze Committee has announced this year's fund-raising goals.

"This year, in keeping with the foundation's desire for this to be 'A Year for Women's Health,' funds raised from our twelfth annual Holly Daze event will support the foundation's goal to purchase a Computer Aided Detection Mammography System, fund the expansion of Boyne Rehabilitation Center in Boyne City and underwrite our Community Out-Reach programs," event coordinator Patti Barraw said.

Computer Aided Detection or CAD mammography is the newest breast screening technology which provides a high-tech second review of the mammogram that increases the likelihood of finding breast cancer in its earliest, most treatable stages. Studies show that the addition of the CAD review can result in earlier detection of up to 23.4 percent of breast cancers.

The Boyne Rehabilitation Center originally opened in the spring of 1994 with two full time physical therapists. Since that time the facility has relocated to a stand-alone building and expanded its scope of services. The center has grown to include four physical therapists, two occupational therapists, one certified athletic trainer, a physical therapy assistant, secretary and a part-time speech therapist.

Patient demand generated by the new Healthy Woman Program, along with growth in existing patient service areas, has created a service problem that can only be improved by expanding the facilities.

"Our Holly Daze Celebration Dinner with live and silent auctions will take place on December 1, at the Charlevoix Country Club," said Barraw. "We already have wonderful things donated and anticipate this being our most popular auction yet. The focus this year is on one-of-a-kind packages and unusual items ideal for gift giving."

For more information regarding Holly Daze or to make a donation, call (231) 547-8685.

Charlevoix Area Hospital to have annual Baby Fair

There'll be lots of healthy fun in store when Charlevoix Area Hospital holds its annual baby fair next week.

The popular event will be Thursday, Oct. 28 in the lower level of the hospital. There is no charge and parents, babies, preschoolers and parents-to-be are invited to attend.

More than 30 businesses, vendors and community resources will be on hand to introduce their programs and services for babies and young children. Included in the mix are health and safety tips, childcare and early childhood development options, and age-appropriate toys and games.

Information and registration for the hospital's prenatal, Safety/CPR, and breastfeeding classes and our new twins group will be available. Guided tours of the birthing center will also be offered.

Parents and youngsters are encouraged to dress in Halloween costume and participate in our costume contest, which will be judged by our physicians. Jodell Danbert will be offering a professional photo sitting of your child for a small fee and will mail the photos to your home. Many door prizes are anticipated this year including a Pump-N-Style breast pump valued at $300.

More information about the baby fair is available by calling the Charlevoix Area Hospital Birthing Center at 547-8669.

Spirited tug of war

Charlevoix High School students had a pep rally before the homecoming game against Grayling Friday. While the football team lost, students still had a good time. Here, all class levels took part in a tug-of-war that left the seniors victorious when they battled the junior class (pictured) and later the freshmen class.

Strong will, heavy rain and a nod from Odin may have helped the Vikings as they floated to a 21-7 victory over Charlevoix.

According to Coach Jess, the poor weather definitely had a negative impact on the Rayders' performance.

"It rained the whole game," he said. "We turned the ball over six times, so the wet weather had something to do with that."

And as well as the Vikings played, the Rayders had a big hand in their own demise.

"Grayling is a good team," Jess said. "You can't turn the ball over six times and beat a good team."

The rash of turnovers included three fumbles and three interceptions, two of which went through receiver's hand's only to be picked off.

Despite their loss, Coach Jess thought his defense played well.

"The defense kept us in the game really," he said. "We turned the ball over the first four times we had it."

And, Jess added, "We could have easily been down a lot of points, but the defense prevented it from happening."

While Grayling scored a TD in the first, second and third quarters, the Rayders didn't score their TD until early in the fourth quarter. It was a long drive ending with an eight yard TD pass from Cody Crain to Ben Bergman.

Aside from his TD, Bergman also lead receiving with eight catches for 91 yards while Mitchell Klooster had six catches for 49 yards.

Jeff Golovich was back in the game this week to kick an extra point, but he also had a blocked punt and a fumble recovery.

QB Cody Crain was 16 of 32 for 160 yards with three interceptions and one TD. Crain's passing percentage was down 13 percent this week. from 63 to 50 percent.

Rayders defense was lead by Ezra baker with 19 tackles, Jake Teuscher with 13 tackles and Jaimen Waha with 11 tackles.

And Michael Wojan and Crain both caught an interception.

Grayling didn't pull any surprises on Coach Jess and the Rayders, but they did play hard.

Jess said, "They have a good passing game, but they were able to run the ball quite a bit on us."

A good run game which, in addition to countless mistakes by the Rayders,ensured Grayling a win.

And though it is never easy to recover from a loss, the Rayders must shake it off and get back to Haske is 287-126 as a boys coach (137-42 at Charlevoix) and undefeated in his 13 games as a girls coach.

The Rayders cruised to a 28-2 first quarter lead against the Elks before upping the advantage to 49-5 at the half.

work if they hope to compete in next week's game against the Traverse City St. Francis Gladiators.

"We know we have a good team waiting for us," Jess said. "I'm sure the kids will be up and ready to play because it's always a tough game."

And ready the Rayders will have to be as they face quite possibly the toughest team in the Lake Michigan Conference.

"They beat us the last few years," he added.

Armed with a tough running game and the ability to change strategies on the fly, the Gladiators could be the Rayders toughest opponent yet.

"Sometimes they're 'wing-t' but they're a running team," he said. "They don't throw the ball very much."

But, Coach Jess added, there is a positive side to playing a team which doesn't often pass.

"We're usually able to throw the ball against them quite a bit," he said.

And, according to Coach Jess, another saving grace going into next weeks game is that the Gladiators aren't quite as mobile as the Rayders.

Still, the toughest thing about playing the Gladiators will be to keep them immobilized.

"We've got to shut down their running attack," he said. "We can't give up any running plays."

And, he added, "Our receivers will have to make plays on offense."

Offense is the most important thing the Rayders should focus on this week.

"We're going to be working on our offensive line blocking," he said. "They (Gladiators) do a lot of shifting with their defensive line."

And that is something the Rayders will need to be aware of if they want to make the appropriate reads needed to stop Traverse City.

The last time the Rayders made the playoffs was in 2000. If they make it next week, it will be the third time in the school's history.

The Rayders battle the Gladiators at 7 p.m., Saturday Oct. 23 in Traverse City.

Chamberlain-Creanga studies and helps out

TRAVEL

Moldova and Ukraine all have a stake in what is happening to this section of land.

In the recent past, ethnic Romanian schools in Moldova were teaching the native Romanian language, but the Russians did not agree. Chamberlain-Creanga said that although the Russians are a minority in that region, they hold the powerful positions and have forced the people to write in Russian and not Romanian.

"Civil unrest broke out," she said.

The Russians forcefully went into schools and shut them down in an effort to keep the native language from being taught.

Despite the unstable situation, Chamberlain-Creanga and her husband, Ovidiu Creanga, 28, will leave in three weeks to spend about 12 months in Transdniestria.

Chamberlain-Creanga grew up in Charlevoix and graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1995. She said her adventurous spirit, natural inclination to explore, and knowledge she gained from reading about other places in the world have helped lead her to such a globe-trotting life.

Chamberlain-Creanga was active in cross country and track during high school, which she said helped her learn how to set goals and achieve them.

"Especially, it taught me to be a visionary," she said. "To set a goal, envision it and achieve it."

She said the discipline she learned while running in high school enabled her to balance studies and running in college.

Chamberlain-Creanga said her father, Sherman Chamberlain Jr., has taught her many things that have carried over into what she is doing now. She said he has also helped her deal with being in an academic and political field, which can be a cut throat world at times. But, Chamberlain-Creanga said politics are about public service and not oneself.

"Remember, it's about people and service to others and not getting caught up in the power of politics, academics and being a scholar," she said.

Chamberlain-Creanga was the Ambassadorial Scholar through the Charlevoix Chapter of Rotary International from 2000-2001 and received the British Marshall Scholarship in 2000 to be applied for 2001-2004.

She received her bachelor's in international relations from Wheaton College in Massachusetts.

Chamberlain-Creanga has two master's, one in Southeast European Studies and the other in anthropology. She is currently studying in the London School of Economics at the University of London.

Her studies and research have taken her to Croatia for one year where she did independent research and to Bosnia where she spoke through Rotary International.

Chamberlain-Creanga uses a research method she calls participant observation, which entails gathering a lot of information through watching and listening to people and through various conversations. She will continue this method while in Transdniestria.

Creanga will be accompanying her and continuing some of his doctorate work concerning organizing his second International Theological Symposium, which helps facilitate a platform between Western and Eastern theologians. He studies in the Kings College at the University of London.

Chamberlain-Creanga said there has been so much conflict over there and that Creanga's efforts are to bring together people of various Christian backgrounds and possibly some from Judaism theology.

Chamberlain-Creanga will be there for primarily research, but she will also participate in the community by volunteering her time for children.

Chamberlain-Creanga and Creanga may form youth track and soccer teams as a way to make international connections for the youth in Transdniestria by trying to connect the children with Moldova and the United States.

Chamberlain-Creanga said she and Creanga have worked with children before in similar capacities by having a track and field day for the gypsy children they worked with in Romania.

In November 2001 Chamberlain-Creanga said they presented information about the program to Queen Elizabeth II, who is a patron of the University of London. They also met Prince Charles.

Chamberlain-Creanga said her advice for everyone, especially students, is to follow one's dreams even if things get hard and don't seem to be working out.

"There's such a world out there and if you have a dream you should go for it as long as you can," she said. "A dream is a gift."

SCRAPBOOK

Writer remembers the people of Charlevoix in 1940

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

The 1940s were anxious years with the war and rationing.

I wasn't too absorbed with the far away happenings as a child at that time. I do remember the concern that the Japanese might fly over our shores, but my world was pretty much wrapped up in small town security: I remember so many of the families who lived here at that time. Many of them were poor, but everyone got by, and we really knew and cared for our neighbors.

In 1940 Robert and Emma Dell lived just two houses down from mine, at 203 W. Hurlbut. Their daughter was Edna Mary. Emma used to baby sit for us, and would tell us stories and sing old songs. Her grandson, Dwight, lived with them at one time, and played with our neighborhood kids. Gordon and Marian Dennis lived on the corner of Meech and Division. He worked for the Post Office. They had one son, Charles, at that time. Gertrude Dick lived at 211 Antrim. She was my third grade teacher, and I remember her as being a good teacher, but very strict. Curtis and Elizabeth Dixon lived at 605 Norwood Road. Their children were Mary, Louise, Raymond and Thomas. Maurice Dixon, and his wife Dorothy, lived at the corner of Division and Michigan. He was a driver for the Charlevoix Coal and Ice Co. Dorothy worked at the Charlevoix State Savings Bank for years.

Bruce Donaldson was a repairman, and he and his wife, Florence, lived at 402 W. Garfield. Their children were Richard, Thomas, Charles and Ann. Eva Doyles' home was at 110 Wood Street. Her children were James, Ilo, Marilyn and Evelyn. Albin Durance and his sister, Frances, and sister-in-law, Mary, resided at the family farm on Mercer Boulevard. Albin farmed the land, and Frances also worked in the summer, raising strawberries. Frances was also a school teacher, and lived to be 103 years old. She had a sharp memory and never had to use glasses to read. Percy Durance and his wife, Doris, lived with their daughter, Donna, at 213 W. Hurlbut. Percy worked for the postal department. Del and Grace Dutcher lived at 205 Antrim. He was a carpenter and their daughter, Daisy, lived there also. She was a clerk. I remember them well, as they were next door neighbors of my Grandma and Grandpa Ikens at the jail. They had a wonderful yellow transparent apple tree in their side yard. I loved eating the apples that fell to the ground in early summer. Their son, Harold, and wife, Jessie, and children, Joyce and David, lived at 405 Antrim. Harold was a butcher at Martin Block's store downtown.

James Earl, and wife, Edith, were neighbors at 208 W. Hurlbut. Their daughter, Bessie Fox, and children, Cassie May and Albert, lived with them. Guy and Anna Eccleston lived at 200 Alice with their children, James, John and Sarah. Guy was a clerk at the Charlevoix Insurance Agency. Their older son, Bill, was a student at the time. Albert Edwards and his wife, Charlotte, lived at 102 Wood Street with their children, Ruth and Elaine. He owned Edwards Florist with his brothers Arthur and Percy. Their business was located at 1002 May Street. It was a large greenhouse and truck garden. Arthur and Rena Edwards lived at 225 Stover Road. Their boys were Richard and Louis. Edward Edwards and wife, Ethelyn, and daughter, Margery, lived at 512 Belvedere. He was a warden at the Belvedere Club. Percy and Ruby Edwards lived at 1301 Bridge Street. They had a daughter, Helen.

Charles Emrey was the owner of Emrey's Men's store at 223 Bridge. His wife was Enid. They made their home at 202 Michigan Avenue. Arthur Emmons was a clerk at Kroger Grocery and Baking Company and lived on Rural Route One. Karl Erber and wife, Margaret, lived at 314 Meech with their two sons, John and Thomas. He was the manager of Northern Auto Company. Later he bought the business and named it Erber Auto. He also owned Erber Oil Co. Andrew Essenberg and wife, Minnie, and children, Rolland, Ruth, and Andrew Jr., lived at 106 Clinton. He was a salesman for Brown Motors. Leslie Everts, wife, Emily, and daughter, Donna, lived at 114 W. Lincoln. He was a salesman. In later years, he worked for the city, and one of several men who kept the city cemetery in beautiful shape. Arthur Fagan owned Fagan's Recreation at 325 Bridge. Ron Fairbanks owned Charlevoix Home Bakery at 808 Bridge. He and his wife, Grace, lived at 207 E. Lincoln with their sons, Charles and Bruce. His brother, Leo, was also a baker, and their mother, Agnes worked at the bakery also. June, their sister, was a clerk and lived with Leo and their mother, Agnes, at 808 Bridge.

Hershell Fales and wife, Nettie, lived at 110 Robinson with their son, Howard. In later years, they ran a five and dime on the corner of Bridge and Upright, where the office of Jay Balasz is now located. Richard Farmer and wife, Catherine, and children, Donna and Daniel, lived at 102 Robinson. He was a trucker and hauled sand and black dirt. Ray Faulkner was a postal carrier, and he and his wife, Sadie, lived at 300 Nettleton. John L. (Lawrence) Feindt was an engineer for the Beaver Island Boat, Mary Margaret. Floyd Fessenden owned the drug store, F.J. Fessenden and Son, with his son, Bill. Floyd and his wife Mame lived at 318 Mason. Bill and his wife, Eileen, lived with their children, Thomas and Kathleen, at 105 Petoskey Avenue. Kate later married Vanc Smith, a principal in the Charlevoix Schools, and a classmate of mine. Arthur Fitch lived at 404 Michigan Avenue with his wife, Pearl. Katherine Fitch, their daughter, owned the Polly Kay clothing shop on Bridge Street with Polly Haggard Shadko. Lillis Flanders was Charlevoix County Treasurer, and she and her mother, Laura, lived at 301 Mason Street. James Flynn was the manager of the Lakeview Inn, and later owned it. It was located on the piece of property where the Oleson complex is now. He sold the property to Olesons in 1963. He then became caretaker of the rental house owned by Anne Harsha, next to the Congregational Church on State Street. He also worked for the city in the summertime, taking care of the shuffleboards at the Lake Michigan beach. In 1978, when Dale approached Anne Harsha about buying the house for the Historical Society, she asked Dale what he would do about Jim, who lived in one of the apartments. Dale told Anne that Jim could live there the rest of his life at the same rent he was currently paying. Jim went to see Anne, who was in the hospital, and he told her not to sell it to the society, but to give it to them, which she did. Jim and Dale had been friends for years. Jim lived in the apartment for 10 years before he died, and his boys, Jim and John, gave Dale Jim's prized 65 Ford with only 18,000 miles on it. We have it today.

We certainly have had some great people who have lived here, and it is a joy to remember them.

Scott says he is getting caught up on tax bill

SCOTT

"I am working on the bad guys and he is not on my list," Brandi said.

Scott has made fiscal responsibility a part of this campaign in his bid for a seat on the Charlevoix City Council. He is challenging incumbent Sherman Chamberlain in this quest.

However, he said this financial matter with his company does not disqualify him from the race.

"I think everybody should give back to the community by being on city council," he said. "If people don't want me on city council fighting against no-bid contracts because I am not the richest guy in town, then that is a decision they have to make."

He said when he decided to enter the election he knew he was vulnerable on this issue, but still wanted to run.

His opponent, Chamberlain, said he has heard of the tax issue with Scott's company.

"My personal opinion is to spend the taxpayer's money you have to be a responsible taxpayer," he said.

Scott has been a regular critic of the way government runs in Charlevoix, particularly when it comes to the airport. He began taking an interest in city politics when he noticed the airport's management contract was not being bid out.

Scott argued that it should, but the city did not take this suggestion. Because of this and other issues he had with the city, he decided to run for council against Chamberlain.

Scott said these documents were given to the Charlevoix Courier as a way of trying to intimidate him and smear him in public.

Scott said in a written statement, "With the election only days away they attack me personally by dropping off my personal financial information at the newspaper. That's just dirty politics and I think the people of Charlevoix recognize that."

Chamberlain said he was not behind giving the information to the newspaper.

Winn said he has not contributed to Chamberlain's campaign, but has donated to the campaign of Norman Carlson. Chamberlain is not accepting any campaign donations.

A check of all the other city council candidates and mayoral candidates did not turn up any other federal or state liens to date.

However, current council member and also a candidate Bill Haggard had a federal lein on his property in 1994, over some taxes his company, Haggard's Plumbing and Heating, owed. That bill was paid within a year and he no longer has a lein against him.

Haggard said he does not think it affected his abilities as a council member.

Halloween happenings

On Oct. 29, the United States Coast Guard will transform the ACACIA into a haunted ship full of terror. These monsters are only a sample of what will lie beyond the ship's entrance way. Modeling sample Halloween costumes are (from left to right): Seaman Samuel Guzman, Petty Officer 3rd Class (BM3) Brian Klinger, Petty Officer 3rd Class (MK3) Shaun Wilson and Seaman Jeff Catanzarite.

Halloween is almost here and in order to get the town in the spooky spirit, the United States Coast Guard will uphold their yearly tradition and transform the ACACIA into a haunted ghost ship.

Ensign Mike Grochowski said this year the public can expect a scarier and different ghost ship than the one last year.

"It's a lot of fun for us to put on and a good way to get involved with the community," he said.

Without giving away any surprises to be found inside, Grochowski said Coast Guard members got together and decided on what to do this year. Given the nature of ships, which Grochowski said can be pretty scary on their own, those who are brave enough to enter the ship will find many surprises lurking inside.

"It'll be good," he said.

Grochowski said the course takes between 15 and 20 minutes to complete and is open to everyone.

The ghost ship will be available from 6 to 9 p.m. on Oct. 29. Admission is any non-perishable food item that will be given to the Charlevoix County Food Shelf.

Trick-or-treating is a Halloween tradition and this year's hours will be from 6-8 p.m. on Oct. 31.

Candidates meet with the public at forum

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

On Oct. 20 the citizens of Charlevoix were able to meet and listen to what mayoral candidates, City Council candidates and 105th District candidates had to say during the Meet the Candidates event at the Charlevoix Public Library.

Mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson answered several questions at the meet.

The first question asked regarded what the candidates envisioned for the city of Charlevoix in five years.

Carlson said he thought the city was heading in a positive direction. He said the number one industry is tourism and by helping that thrive the city needs to also control growth.

Campbell said he sees the future looking how it does right now. He said there will be times change is needed, but it should be done for the better and not just to be bigger.

Several Charlevoix students attend Cheney rally

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Several Charlevoix High School students recently attended Vice President Dick Cheney's Traverse City visit and two got to shake his hand.

Cheney visited Howe Arena on Oct. 20 and Brittni Whittaker, Sierra Whisler, Jacky Heckendorn, Chuck Mason, Will Kautz, Taylor Martin and Chris Golski said the experience was once in a lifetime.

Whittaker, 17, said she went because she wanted to see the vice president and to re-establish where she stood on things.

"It was really neat," she said.

Whittaker was one who got to shake Cheney's hand. She, Whisler and Golski volunteered their time to make 100 phone calls telling people to vote for President George W. Bush.

She said they were then allowed to get in the very front row, but Whisler got separated. No one was in front of them except for the Secret Service, she said.

"It was an experience I'll never forget," she said. "I got to shake his hand. That doesn't happen often."

She said it was neat to see a sitting vice president because he would become president should something happen to Bush.

"He's done so much for the country," she said. "He's the most influential vice president."

Whisler, 17, said she helped make phone calls, but was unable to get up front due to being separated from Whittaker and Golski.

She said she went to see Cheney because she didn't get to go see Bush when he came to Traverse City this summer.

"I didn't want to miss this opportunity," she said.

She said she doesn't care if someone is Republican or Democrat, but Cheney is an awesome speaker.

"It was tremendous," she said.

She said it's important for people her age to know about politics.

"You need to get into politics so you can show your opinion when it comes time to vote," she said.

Whisler said there were a few things she had issues with that Cheney said, but overall enjoyed his speech.

Heckendorn, 17, said she went because it was an opportunity she didn't want to pass up.

"It was the first time I've ever seen a politician of that stature and position," she said. "It's something I'll never forget."

She said it's important for people her age to attend such events because government touches everyone's lives.

"It got me more inspired to get involved with politics," she said.

Mason, 16, said he went to gather more information before he made a final decision of who he thought should be president.

"I like Dick Cheney a lot and I needed a little reinforcement in the Bush/Cheney campaign," he said.

The speech gave him just that, and Mason said it was amazing to see Cheney because he has such a mystic curtain around him.

"It definitely boosts our interest in politics," he said of young people seeing a political figure in person.

Kautz, 17, said the chance to see a sitting vice president is one of the reasons he made the trip.

"To hear someone with that intelligence and someone that has that much experience," he said.

He said seeing a person in real-life is great because one can be influenced by their parents, but there's nothing like a first-hand experience.

Martin, 18, said he wasn't going to go because he was sick, but went for the whole experience.

"You don't usually get that experience in this part of the state," he said.

He said young people should attend such events in order to get involved.

"I walked away from it pumped up and ready to vote," he said.

Martin said he shares many of the same views that Cheney presented.

Martin said when he votes for Bush on Nov. 2, he's voting for the people around him such as Cheney.

Golski, 17, said he decided at the beginning of his senior year that he would take advantage of any opportunity that came his way while he had a relatively small amount of pressure on him.

He saw Cheney's visit as his opportunity.

To see a sitting vice president was neat for Golski.

"Obviously he's so important and influential in our national government," he said.

Golski said seeing Cheney is more valuable than seeing past political figures because he is in the present.

Golski got to shake Cheney's hand and said the experience was neat.

"It was pretty exciting," he said.

He said people behind him were trying to jump over him to get to touch Cheney. Golski said it was as though he was a god-like figure.

"I shook hands with one of the most influential men in the world," he said.

Golski said it's important to take advantage of any opportunity of this magnitude. He said he would be more than happy to listen to any powerful figure that came up here.

"I think it's a big deal when any powerful figure like that comes up here because it shows that we're important to them and what we think does matter," he said.

Editor's pros and cons of the city candidates

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

After months of campaigning, we are at that wonderful time where we finally get to make our picks in this year's election on Nov. 2.

The election was hot and heavy this year, with many people running for many different positions in federal, state, county and local government. While it is fantastic to see so many new faces, the only regret I have over this year is how nasty some of the races got.

The problem for me this year was trying to filter out the basics on what I thought was good and had about each of the candidates. Many others have told me they are having this problem too.

With that in mind, I have decided to forgo any editorial endorsements this year. Instead, I am going to give you what I think are the pros and cons to each of the candidates.

To determine this, I met with each of the city council candidates and asked them a series of questions for about an hour.

In the race for Charlevoix City Mayor, we have incumbent Gabe Campbell facing off against Norman "Boogie" Carlson.

Here is what I like about Campbell: he is very dedicated to giving the regular people of Charlevoix a voice in city government. I love how he tries to let as many people as he can talk at meetings and how he really seems to listen to them and their concerns — even so far as to suggest council actions on some. Too often, government officials seem to act as though the actual concerns of the voters don't really matter in the big picture. Campbell doesn't act that way.

Here is a strike against Campbell: he sometimes makes rash decisions. Take for example the firing of the planning commissioners a few years back. Sure, those planning commissioners were probably acting foolishly for trying to have a public hearing on a matter they should send to the Zoning Board of Appeals, but firing them for it was a little overboard. That matter could have been handled in a better way — even Campbell admits to that.

Here is what I like about Carlson: he seems to really want to create an air of cooperation in the city. In his interview with me, he said he wants council, city administration and the community to work together to build a wonderful city. I think it would be nice to see the administration working with council and hope Carlson can do that.

Here is a strike against Carlson: he has a problem understanding openness in government. It is not that he wants to hide things, he just — like many part-time politicians — doesn't really understand what should be open to the public and what shouldn't. The problem is, in the past he has erred on the side of making it closed to the public. Take for example when the city was looking for a new fire chief. Carlson was concerned that the meetings of a committee formed to look for a new chief would be open — not knowing state law says they must be open. He shouldn't be concerned that a meeting is open. He should be concerned when a meeting is not open to the public.

Now council. We have Rebecca Doan challenging incumbent Bill Haggard, incumbent Sherm Chamberlain being challenged by Dave Scott and former mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell challenging incumbent Karen Campbell.

For Doan, I like her stand on the city taking care of what it has before adding more to it. I think the city has been on a spending spree in the past and would like to see it become a little more frugal — at least until our state figures out its budget.

I am concerned about her stand on the marina and East Park — she thinks they should be left alone. That project should already be under construction and we should be concerned why it is not.

For Haggard, I like the experience he brings to council. He is a life-long resident of the area and business owner. He adds input that is valuable and seems fair in his decisions.

A strike against Haggard, I believe, is his support of demolishing the current band shell. While I believe we should already be working on the marina and East Park, I was always concerned about the plans to demolish the band shell. That band shell was built in the 90s and had a a big push from the community to make it possible.

For Chamberlain, his positive is his preparedness when it comes to city council business. At every city council meeting, Chamberlain is ready for each subject and has intelligent questions to ask.

A strike against him is his many abstentions from voting. Because Chamberlain's business is so busy — he co-owns a surveying company that deals with many projects that come before the city council — he must abstain from voting in many instances. Sure, he should abstain ethically, but I am concerned if voters of his ward are getting a good representation.

Challenger Scott's positive is his passion to work for the people. He is dedicated to listening to the voters and giving them a voice on the city council. He wants nothing more than a responsive and open local government that the people can be proud of. I trust he can achieve this goal.

His strike is the problems with his business. As last week's Courier pointed out, he has some big liens against his business due to back taxes. In his defense, this seemed to be a problem caused by a mistake in bookkeeping and he is working on paying those taxes. I just worry that it will get in the way of his duties on city council if it gets any worse.

Now for Russell. Russell never responded to my requests for a meeting. So, I cannot say much about him. I will say I am concerned by this lack of response and if it means the citizens of his ward will get the same.

Incumbent Karen Campbell's positive is her commitment to the character of Charlevoix. She wants this community to remain Charlevoix the Beautiful and will fight to keep it that way. I like how she keeps the wishes of her constituents and this desire to protect Charlevoix in mind when it comes to development in the city.

Karen Campbell's strike is that her husband, Gabe, is running for mayor. It concerns me when a husband and wife are serving on the same political board. But, Karen said she will disagree with her husband at times.

Good luck to all the candidates in this year's election. And when elected, remember to be fair, be honest and keep it open.

We are in a nuclear race

Editor:

When will the public wake up to the fact that we are currently in the midst of a nuclear arms race?

Although the United States already has thousands of nuclear weapons, we are seeking more tax dollars to develop new types of nuclear weapons. There are some who believe that such weapons are "usable," completely failing to understand the awesome nature of such weapons. This problem, however, does not just reside with the United States. Indeed, previously non-nuclear states, such as North Korea, have now acquired or are seeking to acquire nuclear weapons.

In June 2000, the Washington National Cathedral sponsored a gathering of Christian, Jewish and Muslim religious leaders together with 18 retired professional military leaders who issued a joint call appealing to people of faith across the country and across religions to mobilize to end our capacity for nuclear self-destruction.

Out of this has come the "Urgent Call to End the Nuclear Danger," presented by The Churches' Center for Theology and Public Policy. I attended the west Michigan annual conference of the United Methodist Church in June when we voted to endorse the call.

The Center's focus is on reducing, then disarming nuclear arsenals declaring that "...long-term reliance on nuclear weapons in the arsenals of the nuclear powers, and the ever-present danger of their acquisition by others, is morally untenable and militarily unjustifiable."

The Urgent Call asks both the United States and Russia to fulfill their commitments under the Non-proliferation Treaty and to move together with the other nuclear powers, step by carefully inspected and verified step, toward the abolition of all nuclear weapons.

The United States is urged to take several steps to achieve this goal. Among them: Renounce the use of nuclear weapons, permanently end the development, testing and production of nuclear warheads, ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and take nuclear weapons off hair-trigger alert in concert with Russia and other nuclear powers in order to reduce the risk of accidental or unauthorized use.

I quote part of the rationale for the churches' involvement in this vital issue: "As a people called to a faith in a loving and life-giving God we must defend the sanctity of creation and so stand against the continued proliferation of these weapons of mass destruction."

It is my hope that all churches in our area will begin now to act upon this grave moral issue.

Do we want dense housing?

Editor:

To land owners and people of Marion Township:

Do we want dense housing? Do we want all of our agricultural land cut up into 100 foot lots? When voting this Nov. 2 think about development coming in the township and taking 40 acres and cut it up into 59 lots. This is putting in fifty-nine wells and fifty-nine septic tanks and drainfields.

When you put this kind of housing in, are all the wells in the development and joining land wells going to be good for the next 100 years? Or do we end up in five to ten years, paying for water and sewage to be put in. Are we looking down the road for five to ten years, when we should be looking ahead for the next hundred years? If we end up putting water and sewage, do we the land owners pay or do the development people pay? If the township pays, this means that we all pay!

Thank you for your time.

Thank you

Editor:

On behalf of Hospice of the Northwest Michigan (formerly Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc.) Board of Directors and volunteers I want to thank Rochelle Whippo and Kelly Scholey who arranged the fourth annual Helen Open in memory of that very special lady, Helen Weislik.

We were the recipients of the funds raised at this event. We are very appreciative of the extremely generous donation of $10,000. We do not charge for our services — volunteer, bereavement and community outreach — and this money will be put to good use helping those in our communities. I know how much work was put into this activity — those who worked, those who participated and those who donated.

I know that Helen is smiling down on all of you, and joins us in saying, "Thank you!"

New guidelines for mammograms established

Officials from the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency announced recently that new eligibility guidelines for breast and cervical cancer screening, including a mammogram, allows women ages 40 – 49 who meet certain income requirements can get free screenings.

"We are delighted the state's revised guidelines include women in their 40s," said Carol Paxton, Director of Health Promotion Services.

"This means we can again offer free breast and cervical cancer screening to eligible women according to recommendations of the American Cancer Society."

The American Cancer Society recommends women age 40 and older have a screening mammogram every year, and should continue to do so for as long as they are in good health.

Women who meet age and income eligibility requirements may participate in the WomanCare breast and cervical cancer screening program, including a mammogram. Income eligibility is based on annual family income according to federal guidelines.

For example, women ages 40 and older from a family of two, with an income below $31,225, are eligible to participate at no cost to them.

Clients who participate in the WomanCare breast and cervical cancer screening program receive education and information, clinical breast exam, mammography screening by referral to a local clinic or hospital, pelvic exam and pap test and follow-up diagnostic services.

"We always send test results to our clients' health care provider," Paxton said.

"We keep them informed."

The Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency is the local health department serving Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego Counties.

Its staff is dedicated to preventing disease and injury and promoting healthy communities.

For additional information about WomanCare breast and cervical cancer screening program, eligibility requirements, or to schedule an appointment, telephone (800) 432-4121 during regular business hours.

Republican Governor William Milliken endorses John Kerry because:

"As a lifelong Republican, I have had mounting concern watching this year's presidential campaign.

"I have always been proud to be a Republican. My Republican Party is a broad-based party that seeks to bring a wide spectrum of people under its umbrella and provide opportunity for the most vulnerable among us.

"The truth is that Bush does not speak for me or for many other moderate Republicans on a very broad cross-section of issues.

Appointment is needed for flu shot

All across the country, people are waiting in long lines to receive a flu shot and the agencies working together to have an upcoming community flu clinic want everyone to know only people with an appointment will get their flu shot on Oct. 28 at Petoskey Middle School.

"Even if you do have an appointment at the flu clinic, please do not come early. No one will be admitted to the flu clinic until 15 minutes before start time at 4:00 p.m.," said Patricia Fralick, director of Family Health for the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, the lead agency for the community flu clinic.

"We would hate for anyone to wait around for a long time only to find that we are out of flu vaccine."

Fralick says only people in a high priority category for developing the flu will be vaccinated. She also reminds pregnant women to bring a note from their doctor authorizing a flu shot.

People from high priority categories who have not yet received a flu shot should call their physician to try to schedule an appointment. Many doctors in the area received their flu vaccine orders. If they can't get an appointment through their doctor, people from high priority categories can call the health department at (800) 432-4121 during regular business hours to be added to a flu vaccine waiting list.

Since it announced the worldwide flu vaccine shortage earlier this month, US Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and Prevention issued new priority groups for vaccination, which are:

- All children 6 months to 23 months old
- Adults age 65 and older
- Anyone age 2 to 64 with an underlying chronic medical condition
- All women who will be pregnant during the flu season
- Residents of nursing homes and long-term care facilities
- Children 6 months to 18 years old on chronic aspirin therapy
- Healthcare workers with direct patient care
- Out-of-home caregivers and household contacts of children less than 6 months old.

Influenza, commonly called "the flu," is caused by the influenza virus which infects the nose, throat and lungs. Unlike many other viral respiratory infections, such as the common cold, the flu causes severe illness and life-threatening complications in many people.

Symptoms of the flu include fever, headache, extreme tiredness, dry cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose and muscle aches. Children can have additional symptoms such as nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, but these symptoms are uncommon in adults.

With the flu vaccine shortage, it is more important than ever to practice good health habits to avoid getting the flu. Just covering your mouth and nose when coughing and sneezing and cleaning your hands often can stop the spread of flu, according to the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and Prevention.

Good health habits to prevent the flu and other diseases are to:

- Avoid close contact with people who are sick.
- Stay home when you are sick.
- Cover your mouth and nose when coughing or sneezing.
- Clean your hands.

CHARLEVOIX TOWNSHIP

This proposal will permit the Recreational Authority to levy up to 1/3 of a mill for the purpose of providing funds for operating, maintaining, and improving the Charlevoix Area Community Pool for ten (10) years, 2004 through 2013, inclusive.

Shall the limitation on the amount of taxes which may be imposed on taxable property in the territory of the Authority (the City of Charlevoix, Township of Hayes, and Township of Charlevoix), all within the County of Charlevoix, State of Michigan be increased by up to thirty-three and 1/3 cents ($.33) per thousand dollars ($1,000) (1/3 mill) of the taxable value on all taxable property in the territory of the Authority for ten (10) years, 2004 through 2013 inclusive, for the purpose of providing funds for operating, maintaining, and improving the Charlevoix Area Community Pool? If approved and levied in its entirety, it is estimated that the 1/3 mill would raise an estimated $160,656 for the Authority when first levied in 2004.

EVELINE TOWNSHIP
BOYNE AREA SENIOR CENTER MILLAGE

This proposal will permit the Township to levy up to 0.35 mills for the purpose of providing funds for planning, coordinating, evaluating and providing services to older persons, including the construction of a senior citizen center.

Council candidates discuss city's future

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

City Council candidates are looking into the future and what it has in store for Charlevoix.

First Ward incumbent Bill Haggard said there are several things that are in store for the city in the future. For one, he said the city should try to stay within the budget, especially since the city will be losing some revenue sharing from the state.

Also, Haggard said he wants the city to progress with the infrastructure.

One project that will occur in the future is the new marina. Haggard said the city needs to get the money for it and then go forth with the project. However, if money isn't available to complete it in a year, Haggard said it can be accomplished over two or three years in order to keep it within the budget.

"It's going to be a little tough, but it can be done I'm sure," he said.

When the new city council is elected, Haggard said the first step they should take would be to make sure they're all on the same page and whether or not they can work well together.

Then, with the council intact, he said they can look toward the future of the city in areas like infrastructure to make sure things run smoothly.

Haggard said the city also needs to keep up with the electric, which is running pretty well and is currently self-sustaining.

"We're way ahead of the game right now," he said.

Since some people who are currently department heads will be coming up for retirement, Haggard said the council should make sure those important people are properly replaced.

Candidate Rebecca Doan said the future should involve bringing more businesses into town.

"What I'd like to see is all the store fronts filled," she said.

In order to bring businesses into town, Doan said she thinks the city could offer more tax incentives.

"Hopefully, they'll bring in good jobs for the people," Doan said of future business opportunities.

Doan said East Park and the marina should stay the same, but become more accessible for handicapped individuals and senior citizens. This could be achieved by having another sidewalk cut through the park and leading toward the pavilion and by creating a drop-off space, she said.

The marina, Doan said, should be kept as is and be well-maintained.

Doan said she doesn't want to see apartments and condominiums crammed in together in order to help pay the tax revenue.

"We only have so much tax revenue," she said. "Let's work within our budget."

Doan wants to keep the character Charlevoix is known for alive.

"We already are on the right path," she said. "I'd like to see Charlevoix as it is — A small town, a beautiful town."

Doan said if the budget is there, some long-term goals she envisions for the community are a sidewalk on Park Avenue along Michigan Beach Park and getting things underway with the snowboarding hill at Mt. McSauba without another study.

When the elections are over, Doan said if she is elected she'd agree to a meeting that would enable everyone to get on the same page.

"As long as everyone treats everyone respectively and everyone knows their role, everything should run smoothly," she said. "I always take the high road."

Second Ward incumbent Karen I. Campbell said the focus shouldn't necessarily be on the future, but instead should be on the past and putting current issues to rest.

However, a need for new industry in the city is something she said can hopefully be fulfilled in the future.

"We do need industry here," she said.

If more industry comes to the city, she said that could open up jobs that would in turn enable people to afford to purchase many of the houses that are currently up for sale.

Campbell said there are other things the future holds for the city including finishing the current airport project and creating a sidewalk along Michigan Beach Park.

The sidewalk would extend from Grant Street toward the hospital along Park Avenue in order to allow pedestrians a safe walking path, she said.

Candidate Alvin "Butch" Russell said he would like to see some new docks and a new marina.

He said he'd also like to see more jobs and affordable housing come into the city.

"I think one of the biggest problems we have right now is housing for the local people," he said.

A lot of area houses are used as summer residences, but many remain unaffordable to those who live here year round, he said.

"I don't know what the answer is, but it needs to be addressed," he said. "Housing is a major problem."

When the elections are over and the city council and mayor are chosen, Russell said the first thing they should do is to get over the disagreements.

"I hope they quit bickering and start looking toward the future of Charlevoix," he said. "I hope that would change after the election."

Third Ward incumbent Sherman Chamberlain Jr. said he thinks Charlevoix has a good future in store because it's a chance to set the city apart from other entities.

Since Charlevoix doesn't have a lot of big box stores like those found in Petoskey, Traverse City and Gaylord, Chamberlain said Charlevoix is able to remain unique.

"The key is marketing the fact that we still have that small town feel," he said.

Chamberlain said one change could be made toward marketing Charlevoix as a city that people can park their cars in and ride bicycles or walk to get around.

In order to facilitate such tourism, Chamberlain said a bicycle path could be placed from Harbor Industries to Fisherman's Island and a walk way could he placed along Park Avenue starting from the corner of Grant Street.

"It would take a lot of cooperation between the state government, Charlevoix Township and the City of Charlevoix," he said.

Even though it would take a lot of work, Chamberlain said it is something that could be good for the community.

Bringing more businesses to the area is something Chamberlain also envisions for the future of Charlevoix. He said many businesses move up here for the quality of life the area provides.

"We should market ourselves to people who first and foremost want to live here," he said.

Once the elections are over, Chamberlain said the first move by the city council and the mayor should be to bring the department heads to the first meeting of the year.

"I think it will create a closer relationship between council and the department heads," he said.

Chamberlain said the marina should be put in place because it and the park are the heart and soul of the community and an integral part of attracting people to the community.

Revitalizing the buildings downtown, Chamberlain said, is something mentioned in the 1982 Master Plan and should be done since about 95 percent of Charlevoix is developed.

"We're a nice little community and I just want to see it stay

Mayoral candidates focus on the future

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

With the Nov. 2 elections just around the corner, mayoral candidates Gabe Campbell and Norman "Boogie" Carlson are looking into what lies ahead for the city they call home.

Incumbent Campbell said he hopes the city stays at it's current state of beauty.

Gabe Campbell

Norman Carlson

"I would like to see the city pretty much the way you look at it today," he said. "It's so pretty."

Campbell said the primary focus should be on taking care of things that need to be fixed in the city instead of on more projects.

In order to protect the future of Charlevoix, Campbell said the city should look into working with the townships in order to restrict sprawl and big box developments from occurring.

"We should do what we're asking the townships to do," Campbell said, which is to restrict retail developments to 50,000 square feet.

Also, Campbell said the city needs to look closely at what is allowed to hook up to the sewer line.

With the future always coming, Campbell said the city should look into creating a sidewalk along Michigan Beach Park that would run from the start of the park to the township line and longer, if the township wished to make it so.

Campbell said he is happy with the current airport project, but is a little reluctant to use infrastructure money to fund it. He said infrastructure money should go toward infrastructure projects and the same goes for the electric fund.

"We've been paying it back when we borrow it, but I think the electric funds should be used for electric so we don't get into the position of having to raise the rates," he said.

Campbell also said the numerous traffic studies that were conducted should be looked at to determine the best solution for a period that lasts six to eight weeks in the summer. He said it's time to take action and not conduct another study.

"I wouldn't like to see a lot of major changes," he said. "I think it's beautiful right the way it is."

Some projects in the future that could be attended to are restoring the cemetery chapel and bringing in more industry to the area.

"There doesn't seem to be a lot of reason for young people to stay," he said.

Campbell said the younger generation should be encouraged to stay in the city or the townships.

Once the mayor and city council elections are over, Campbell said the new group should get together and make sure they're all on the same page with the city manager and that he's on the same page as them.

Currently, Campbell said City Manager Michael Wiesner withholds information because he says he likes to wait until all the information is gathered together. Waiting for the information can sometimes take up to three to four months before the City Council is informed on what is going on, he said.

Campbell said he has been told to say he knows about something even though he doesn't. He said this coffee shop talk isn't something most people would go with including himself and Carlson.

Overall, Campbell thinks the city is functioning as is.

"I think it's great the way it is," he said.

Candidate Carlson said he thinks the future holds good things for the city of Charlevoix, but those things will happen if everyone starts off on the same page.

He said the city administration, the mayor, the city council and the constituents should all work together to make things happen.

If he is elected, Carlson said the first thing he will do is call a work session to try and "get things headed in a positive direction."

Carlson said he also has plans to create a junior member council that would sit in on city council meetings as a way to learn more about how government works.

"City government is a good spot to start," he said.

He also thinks the city should continue on with various projects currently facing the city such as finish up City Hall and maintaining the parks and various infrastructure projects.

It's less expensive to take care of things than replace things in the long run, Carlson said.

He also thinks the city should continue getting the Wastewater Treatment Plant running properly and getting the marina project off the ground.

If the project goes through, the Waterways Commission will fund 75 percent of the project leaving the DDA to cover 25 percent.

"It would be paid without a penny from the city budget," he said.

If the project is dropped and only the bulkhead and docks are repaired, Carlson said the Waterways grant couldn't be used and the Downtown Development Authority wouldn't pay for it.

If the city does the repairs on the bulkhead and dock, Carlson said it would end up costing about $4 million of the tax payers dollars. This amount is much more, Carlson said, than what the 25 percent from the DDA would be to fund the project.

Without the project, Carlson said the marina could be repaired, but the city wouldn't have any new facilities or a more handicapped accessible park and marina.

Carlson said he's not saying the marina necessarily needs to go out as far into Round Lake as planned, but it's important for the city to have a nice facility.

"It's a pretty important project for a town like Charlevoix that sits on the water," he said.

With the city's number one industry as tourism, Carlson said the marina and park should be upgraded for everyone to enjoy and not just the boaters who come in.

As more people come into the downtown it will create more business for the local restaurants and shops, which Carlson said could create jobs because the different businesses would need more staff.

However, the first step, Carlson said is to buoy the lake so people can visually see exactly how far out into Round Lake the intended docks will go.

Arts center, tribe to host ghost supper

The Crooked Tree Arts Center will host a Ghost Supper, beginning at 6 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 30.

The Crooked Tree Arts Center's Ghost Supper is a collaborative annual event that brings the Arts Center and the local Odawa community together. The Ghost Supper coincides with the Anishinaabe Festival as well as the native community's yearly tradition of having feasts to honor departed loved ones.

There is no charge for the supper and the public is encouraged to attend.

Each and every visitor is honored, fed, appreciated for their visitation and participation in the feast. It is helieved that the more visitors you have the more ancestors are honored as each visitor brings along with them the spiritual memhers of their family.

A buffet of native foods, turkey, smoked whitefish, frybread and family recipes will be offered. Serving as Ghost Supper Committee members are Yvonne M. Walker Keshick, Winnay Wemigwase,Eva Oldman, and Joe Mitchell of Little Traverse Bay Bands of Odawa and Crooked Tree Arts Center's staff.

"We welcome people to bring a dish to share," said Dale Hull, executive director, Crooked Tree Arts Center.

Drumming, a ceremonial fire, and storytelling are all part of the evening's traditional events.

The Anishnaabe visual arts exhibition for 2004 is titled "Great Lakes Native Quilting." This exhibit showcases the diversity of native quiltmaking and pays tribute to the artists who continue to work in this expressive cultural medium.

The exhibit examines the historical introduction of quilting as well as the contemporary use and meaning of quilts made by Oneida, Odawa, Potawatomi, Ojihwa, Mohawk, Cree, Winnehago and Menominee quiltmakers living in Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, New York and Ontario.

The exhibit runs through Nov. 4 and is on loan from the Michigan State University Museum.

For more information, call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at 347-4337 or visit www.crookedtree.org. The arts center is located at 461 E. Mitchell Street in downtown Petoskey.

Military aircrafts cruise over Charlevoix

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The rumble in the sky heard on Oct. 21 over Charlevoix from two C-14 planes was simply a return flight home.

Senior Master Sgt. David Snavley of Air to Ground Range located near the Army National Guard Base of Camp Grayling, said the planes were just flying over the area.

The low level of flight was due to the way the crew chose to fly home, Snavley said.

"They were just flying the pattern to simulate a cargo drop," he said.

The planes are heading hack from Alpena, where the crew underwent a training exercise, Snavley said. There were no troops aboard but only the crew who is returning to their home at McChord Air Force Base in Washington.

Remember to keep signs on your own property

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

Police Chief Dennis Halverson would like to remind everyone to keep their campaign yard signs in their yard and off the city right-of-way, which is usually defined as the area of grass between the sidewalk and the street curh.

Halverson said it is a violation of the city's ordinance to place a sign on the right-of-way and people could be ticketed or have their signs removed for them. However, the police are asking for people's cooperation in keeping the signs off the city right-of-way.

Humane Society trying to fix financial problems

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix County Humane Society is currently facing financial difficulties, but is managing to stay afloat.

Laura Kemp, director of the Charlevoix County Humane Society, said all non-profit organizations are feeling the hardship of the economy and as a result a drop in donations has occurred.

"It's been a struggle," she said.

Due to the financial situation, Kemp said the Humane Society had to eliminate their spaying and neutering program, which helped with the cost, and also had to cut staff hours.

"We've really been struggling financially and that's why we sent a plea to the community," she said.

Kemp said the Humane Society is currently working on cutting costs, increasing revenue and finding other ways to receive funds that aren't coming from the places they usually did.

In order to increase revenue, Kemp said the Humane Society started giving rabies shots on site, increased the adoption fee from $85 to $95 and has created a fund-raising committee that coordinates fund-raisers throughout the community.

One fund-raiser that worked well, Kemp said, was the Color Cruise the society had during the 25th Annual Apple Festival and Craft Show. The cruise was from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Oct. 9 aboard the Beaver Islander.

Tickets sold for $25 and Kemp said 96 tickets were sold, but due to weather only 85 people showed up for the cruise. Kemp said a total of $2,600 was raised from the Color Cruise alone.

Kemp said the Humane Society is hoping to feature the Color Cruise as a yearly event.

However, this year was hard and the majority of the money generated came from the community and not through fund-raisers, Kemp said.

Kemp said there are challenges that lie ahead and in the coming year.

"We're not out of the woods yet, but we're looking better than we were a couple of months ago," she said.

Kemp said the Charlevoix County Humane Society is in need of volunteers and is always looking for those who are willing to donate their time.

On Dec. 12 the Humane Society will be having an Open House where people can drop off Christmas presents they'd care to donate for the animals.

For more information call the Charlevoix County Humane Society at 582-6774.

Library teen group plans fun-filled gross evening

The Charlevoix Public Library's Teen Advisory Group is hosting a evening of fun from 4 to 6 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 29 in the Library's basement.

The Teen Advisory Group is working hard at planning "That's gross enough for me!" a guaranteed-to-make-you-say-"eeewww" party.

The crafts, food, books and games are designed to be fun, not scary. Costumes are welcome in the spirit of Halloween, but not necessary.

Children of all ages will find something that will gross them out.

"All kids will have a chance to eat kitty litter, make slime and read about 'Walter the farting dog," said Amy Spegele, Youth Services Assistant.

For more information, contact Amy at 547-2651.

JAREMA FOR PROSECUTOR REPUBLICAN
November 2, 2004

My Platform is simple, but expected by the community:
I will be a full-time, in-court, proactive prosecutor consistently enforcing the laws to ensure the safety of our community.

I will be fiscally responsible with taxpayer's dollars.

Full-time: I will work and try cases in all the courts of Charlevoix County. The victims of misdemeanors and juvenile offenses are just as important as victims of "high profile" felony cases.

In-court: My trial record of 100+ trials speaks for itself. In 2001, I tried 11 cases with 9 convictions and 2 hung juries. Of those cases, 7 were felony cases (3-multiple days) and included 2 sexual assault crimes. The remaining 4 were misdemeanors involving alcohol and drugs. I have already proven myself as a successful trial prosecutor.

Proactive: I will work to implement proactive programs to:
-Educate our youth on the ramifications of alcohol and drug use, inappropriate touching etc.
-Educate our seniors on identity theft and prescription drug usage.
-Establish a "Sobriety Court" within District Court where the goal is to break the disease and stop repeat offenders. It is easy to put someone in jail but that doesn't get to the root of the problem.

Consistency: Treat all persons fairly. It should not matter if you are from Beaver Island or Boyne City; Charlevoix or Clarion, you should be treated based on the crime, not your name or status.

Experience Counts: I have 7 years of prosecutor experience, three as the Chief Assistant Prosecutor for Charlevoix County. I have tried criminal cases in all three courts in Charlevoix. My opponent does not have ANY criminal trial experience. Charlevoix County deserves an experienced criminal trial prosecutor as their Chief Law Enforcement Officer.

EXPERIENCE COUNTS!

Help stop teenage drunk driving in Charlevoix

In an effort to make its local streets and highways safer, the Michigan Sheriffs' Association is looking to the public to help reduce an alarming trend: Young people getting into vehicles while under the influence of alcohol.

According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, over 17,000 people were killed in alcohol-related traffic accidents in the United States last year, a rate of one person every 30 minutes. Even more alarmingly, almost one third of the 15 to 20 year-old drivers killed in motor vehicle crashes in the U.S. had been drinking.

"Tragically, many individuals under the age of 21 fail to recognize the lethal combination of alcohol and driving," said Sheriff George T. Lasater of Charlevoix County and the Michigan Sheriffs' Association. "Excessive drinking leads to reckless and, in many cases, lawless behavior."

Because of their relative lack of driving experience, adolescents are at greater risk for traffic accidents. Also, younger drivers are more susceptible than older drivers to alcohol-induced impairment.

Studies from the National Center for Injury Prevention and Control show that almost as many young men age 18 to 20 as legal-aged 21- to 34-year olds acknowledge driving while under the influence. Yet the problem is not confined to one particular age group or gender. Statistics show that approximately 70 percent of all teenagers drink alcohol, including one Georgetown University's Center for Alcohol Marketing and Youth found that, in certain age categories, teenage girls are drinking more than teen boys because of an increasing number of ads for products like wine coolers and alcoholic ice teas that are geared primarily toward young women.

Although tougher drunk driving penalties, seat belt laws and increased sobriety checkpoints have had a significant impact in reducing drunk driving fatalities, the battle cannot be won by law enforcement authorities alone. Family and friends often are in the best position to identify and prevent behaviors in adolescents that lead to underage drinking.

Sheriff Lasater said, "While the 'Say No to Drugs' message has been heeded by a large number of parents and their children, what seems to be lost is the fact that underage drinking kills almost seven times more young people than all other illicit drugs combined. We're always trying to get through to teens, but much of the groundwork needs to start at home and continue on with peer groups. The risks for being complacent are simply too high."

Fortunately, there are signs that young adults themselves recognize the high cost in both dollars and human lives for accidents that, in most instances, could have been avoided. Various surveys among the nation's college students show that an overwhelming majority favors 21 as the minimum age to sell or serve alcohol and hopes to see drunk-driving rules more strongly enforced.

Safeguards Against Underage Drunk Driving:

- Parents and older siblings must be aware that they are role models to younger family members, and should be cognizant of what kind of examples they set in regard to both their driving and drinking habits.
- Restricting access to liquor and automobiles at home may be an effective preventative measure in the short term, but it is even more advisable to confront your son(s) and/or daughters(s) about the serious risks involved with underage drinking.
- Whether driving or riding as a passenger in a vehicle, always wear a seatbelt!
- If you see vehicles that are speeding excessively or swerving, try to get a license plate number and call the local police, sheriff's department or highway patrol.
- Never get into a car with someone who has had too much to drink. If the person insists on getting behind the wheel, ask him or her to give up the car keys to designated driver or call a trusted adult for a ride
- If you are going to an event where alcohol will be served, take public transportation like buses, trains, shuttles or taxis, if possible.
- If you work in a store or a dining establishment, always check IDs of customers who wish to purchase alcoholic beverages, even if you think they look well above the legal drinking age. Also contact authorities about any adults who may be purchasing or supplying alcoholic beverages for men and women under the age of 21.
- Regardless of your age, if you believe you may have a drinking problem, consult a school counselor, health professional, or an alcohol support group (for example, Alcoholics Anonymous).

Council donates money for library artwork

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public Library will not only be a larger facility, it will also be an artistic one.

The Charlevoix Council for the Arts has donated $2,000 a year for three years to go toward purchasing art for the library.

Mary Ann Chew, president of the Charlevoix Public Library Board of Trustees, said the money will be used to purchase various paintings, sculptures and other artistic possibilities to decorate the library with.

"The board is ecstatic that we have a beginning fund here for quality art for the library," she said.

Chew, who is also the treasurer for the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, said a committee will choose the pieces of art for the library, which will hopefully include original artistic creations.

"I think art always enhances our life no matter where we are," she said.

By displaying the art in the public library, Chew said the children in the community can be influenced by art.

"I think that books, reading and the arts go hand in hand," she said. "They enhance our lives."

Mary Beth McGraw, president of the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, said the donation is part of the council's goal to inspire and create an appreciation for the arts in the community and with students.

"We're looking to make this more valuable than just decorating," she said.

By partnering with the library, McGraw said the council will be able to provide some experience students and community members may not otherwise be able to have because there aren't any museums and similar facilities near the area.

McGraw said an old German saying states that literature, the visual arts and music all reflect the times people live in and designate a specific time period.

"Those three areas have a very strong connection from the beginning of time," she said.

She said some possibilities include getting students together to create art, using art to cover historic periods and other educational values.

The council also sponsors the Waterfront Art Fair, which all proceeds go back into the community to further art education. She said the council bought a grand piano for the Charlevoix High School auditorium.

By helping get quality art into the library, McGraw said the council is continuing the connection between students, the community and art.

KEVIN A. Republican for 105th House District
ELSENHEIMER

The choice for state representative for the 105th District is simple:

Kevin Elsenheimer

Kevin will be a full-time legislator who understands the needs of Northern Michigan.

Here are three key reasons to vote for Kevin:

Taxes: Kevin thinks we pay enough in taxes, and will oppose any efforts to increase taxes. Kevin's opponent, democrat Jim McKimmy, supports raising income taxes, capital gains taxes, corporate taxes, substantially increasing the death tax, and applying the sales tax to services like snowplowing and doctor's visits! With our economy still trailing the rest of the nation, Michigan does not need to go back to the days of tax and spend.

Great Lakes Diversion: Nobody will take a tougher stand opposing the diversion of water from our Great Lakes than Kevin Elsenheimer. Kevin will do everything in his power to stop diversion of our Great Lakes. His opponent, democrat Jim McKimmy, favors a bill introduced by house democrats that could result in implementation of an agreement between the states and Canadian provinces surrounding the Great Lakes that would allow diversions!

Firearms: Kevin Elsenheimer is a lifelong hunter and fisherman. He learned a love for the outdoors from his father, and intends to pass that love to his children. Kevin supports the Second Amendment, and has been endorsed by the NRA political victory fund, and the Michigan Coalition for Responsible Gun Owners. Democrat Jim McKimmy has received a "D" rating from the NRA, and is identified as "[a]n anti-gun candidate. . . . . .who has made strong statements in opposition to Second Amendment rights."

Kevin has been endorsed by Michigan Right to Life, the NRA, the Michigan Farm Bureau, the Police Officers Association of Michigan, and many other organizations.

Society seeking funding for pillar restoration

By COURTNEY E. PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Historical Society is calling for support in order to repair several of the Depot Museum's exterior pillars.

David Miles, co-director of the Harsha House Museum, said those that contribute to the new support program called "Pillars of the Society," will be honored as Pillars of the Charlevoix Historical Society and will be recognized on a plaque that will be displayed in the Harsha House Museum.

Miles said the restoration project is very important because of the Depot's historical value.

"The Depot is a national historic site and the only one in town," he said. "It's one of the great historic landmarks in town."

The Depot's pillars, which were constructed in 1892, are in need of repairs.

One pillar was restored this summer and Miles said the Charlevoix Historical Society hopes to have five more completed by next spring.

Many of the problems with the pillars stem from moisture collecting in the bottom, Miles said, which is resulting in the pillars rotting from the bottom first.

The next pillar to be replaced is one that is infested with bees and extra care will be needed to handle it. However, one can't tell apart the original pillars with the new ones.

"They are restored exactly as they look," Miles said.

The wood pillars are being replace with wood and not synthetic materials in order to truly be an exact copy of the original.

Miles said the project will be funded entirely through donations made to the "Pillars of the Society" program.

Currently, there are only five pillars that have been identified as in need of restoration, but Miles said the rest will be evaluated next spring.

"We have lost so much it's especially important to maintain what we have and realize the historical value," Miles said.

The Depot is not idle, Miles said, and currently functions as a place for exhibits, meetings and parties. However, it's important for its own reasons.

"It's architecture," he said. "The fact that so many people were introduced to Charlevoix throughout the years here and that was the first building they saw when they got here."

All of the restoration work is being conducted by Jim Lewis, a member of the Charlevoix Historical Society board of directors; David Robinson, a local community member who does restoration work; and Rudy Scharschmidt, a Charlevoix Historical Society member.

Charlevoix Trick or Treat Hours:

Sunday, October 31 • 6PM-8PM

Let's all be aware of children on Halloween night!
We want them to be safe and happy and have a great Halloween!

- Costumes should be nonflammable and should not restrict movement. Masks shouldn't block vision. Use makeup instead.
- Give your children a meal or snack before they go out, and emphasize that no treats should be eaten before they get home.
- Carry a flashlight so you can see & be seen easily.
- Discard commercially produced candy if the wrapper is loose or the seal has been broken.
- Drivers watch out! Children become careless from excitement and may run into the road.
- Choose a costume that is easy to walk in, easy to see out of and can be seen by drivers.
- Remind your children to look both ways and cross streets only at corners.
- Use a reflective tape on your costume so people driving cars can see you.
- Do not eat unwrapped candy!
- Leave your porch light on, so kids know it's OK to visit.

BEWARE OF FALSE CLAIMS OF A QUICK FIX

FACT: The seawall and docks of the City Marina are deteriorating and in dire need of repair.

CONSEQUENCE: The City seawall and docks must be repaired.

FACT: The soils in East Park, in proximity to the City Marina, are environmentally suspect and 70% of the existing sheet steel of the seawall is inadequate.

CONSEQUENCE: The City seawall and docks cannot be repaired in a "quick fix" manner and will cost approximately $4 million to repair.

FACT: Eleven public meetings have been held and the City Council and Charlevoix DDA have both adopted unanimous resolutions supporting a Marina Improvement Plan.

CONSEQUENCE: The Marina Improvement Plan provides that 75% of the Marina repair expense will be paid by the State, with 25% to be paid by the Charlevoix DDA from property taxes collected in the Charlevoix downtown district. Zero (0%) percent of the Marina repair expense would be paid by taxpayers outside the downtown district.

FACT: Adoption of the Marina Improvement Plan will return to Charlevoix approximately $6.8 million in State collected "boating taxes."

CONSEQUENCE: The State funds will not only pay for 75% of Marina repairs, but will also enable the City to make unprecedented improvements to East Park at no expense to taxpayers outside the downtown district.

CONSEQUENCE: (continued) East Park improvements facilitated by the return of state "boating taxes" include (1) a new Harbormaster's office with showers, restrooms and other facilities, (2) a new outdoor bandshell pavilion with amphitheater seating, (3) a new fishpond, ice skating infrastructure and new off-site parking, (4) new landscaping, handicap accessible sidewalks, electrical, lighting and watering systems, and (5) a floating dock system which provides 32 more boat slips, and extensive public access (including handicapped) onto the piers and wide harbor view corridors where none currently exists.

FACT: If the Marina Improvement Plan is rejected, the $4 million expense of Marina repairs will be shifted to and paid by taxpayers throughout all areas of the City.

CONSEQUENCE: If the Plan is rejected, the expense of Marina repairs would no longer be paid by State "boating taxes" or by the Charlevoix DDA from property taxes collected within the downtown district. Because the City would lose $6.8 million of State funds, Marina repairs would then be paid from property taxes collected from taxpayers within all areas of the City. No money would remain for the additional East Park improvements, which would otherwise have been made without expense to taxpayers outside the downtown district.

FACT: The improvements proposed within the Marina Improvement Plan can still be modified, including the length of piers.

CONSEQUENCE: Local residents and officials still retain control over Marina and East Park affairs.

Failure to adopt the Marina Improvement Plan will cost City taxpayers $$MILLIONS$$

What does the future hold for Charlevoix?

unique," he said.

Candidate Dave Scott said Charlevoix needs smart growth instead of sprawl.

"That doesn't mean we don't want to grow," he said.

Scott said the city shouldn't be afraid to say no to developers that want things not consistent with what the city wants and according to guidelines and ordinances.

Scott would also like to see more done in order to keep young people to stay in the city.

"We have a cool place to live," he said.

In order to keep the young people in town, Scott said the city should encourage the development of businesses with good paying jobs and more high-tech businesses.

The future of Charlevoix should also be promoted as a premiere vacation spot and be seen as attractive from a business and aesthetic standpoint, Scott said, without losing the character of the community.

"We should continue to promote and leverage our greatest potentials and opportunities in tourism," Scott said.

One big change for the future should be to update the Master Plan every five years, since the last one is dated 1982.

Scott said the city should explore the possibilities of implementing a regional planning authority that would involve the city and the townships. Scott said such an authority would help to eliminate sprawl and promote good growth.

He said the needs of the city and townships are different, but Scott said a regional planning authority would benefit everyone involved.

Once the elections are over, Scott said the city council and mayor should work toward benefiting the people of Charlevoix.

"In the last couple of months, with all the arguing and bickering, one thing has been forgotten, the citizens," Scott said.

Scott said a high speed data fiber network is in the works that will connect all the city buildings, the schools and the library. Scott said this is good, but the people should be able to access it as well. He said it hasn't come before city council yet, but some of the very early groundwork has begun.

Scott said the city council meetings could be shown online for those who can't make a meeting or who are away at their winter residences.

"All of our problems will just be solved if we take care of the citizens," he said.
